TEACHERS STRIKE
PARIS (Reuters)—A strike called for 200,000 members of the French National Federation of Lay School teachers affected about half the school children in the Paris area Wednesday. The union organized the 24-hour strike in protest against a bill to allow private groups to run agricultural training centres in rural areas. A union spokesman said the teachers' fight private farm schools may permit an increase of religious influence in French education.

ZOO CLOSED
MONTREAL (CP)—The city's zoo in Lafontaine park closed Saturday and the last of the animals, three bears, were loaded on a truck for the 60-mile run to Granby, Que., their new home. City officials recently decided to close the zoo on the grounds that its facilities were unsatisfactory. Granby has agreed to return the animals if a new zoo is built here.

KEEP IN TRIM

Wait Another Week - You'll Lose

By Ida Jean Kain

The overweights who set out to lose 20 excess pounds by Easter, and lost them, must feel jubilant this week-end. But those who dieted carefully and failed to lose on schedule are sorely in need of encouragement.

The arch gremlin for struggling dieters is water retention. As fat is burned, water may be retained in the tissues. Since water weighs heavier than the fat it replaces, even a small amount can postpone the registration of the loss. In some instances, the amount of water stored may show up as a 2 to 3 pound gain!

Many authorities claim that it is often futile for overweights to start a diet until they are fully acquainted with the up-and-down water swings. The water may be stored at the beginning of a reducing period, or not until later after the initial soft fat has been lost. It may occur once or many times during the reducing period. But hold on... this condition is temporary, and within two to three weeks the water will be released. When this happens the pointer will plunge, registering the loss of many pounds.

To illustrate: One overweight who was dieting with her husband was completely frustrated at the end of three weeks, for she had lost nary a pound while he had reduced 9 pounds. Discouraged, she decided to quit. That morning, from force of habit, she stepped on the scales. Instead of the same bad pointer, to her amazement the pointer plunged 11 pounds! Actually that is the amount she had been losing over the three weeks, but the registration had been postponed, due to stored water.

Here is encouragement passed along from a letter received from this week: "I watched your column for suggestions and inspiration which I needed badly in the 2 to 3 weeks water retention periods I passed through several times while losing 57 pounds." To counteract the tendency to store water, boost the protein. To take full advantage of the stepped up metabolism, have a protein food at each meal, starting with breakfast. Also, cut down on salt and salty foods until the pounds start moving. With a low-salt intake, the salt content of the tissues will be somewhat decreased, and this will result in elimination of water.

On the calorie score... to make sure you are using a third less than you burn, for the next week keep an accurate record of everything you eat. If you stay with a 1000 to 1200 calorie protective diet, you are burning stored fat, regardless of what the scales show. Hold on... you will lose!

Toronto Playwright Scores Hit in New York Opening

NEW YORK (CP)—A trim, blonde Toronto playwright, who had the courage to sit through her New York opening in a small Greenwich Village theatre Tuesday night, woke up today with a hit.

Patricia Joudry's "Teach Me How To Cry," produced at the off-Broadway Theatre De Lys, got the best reviews of the season for such a show—and some of the best compared with Broadway's offerings this season.

Her bitter-sweet tale of love—and the unloved—in a high school in a small town scored high with the first-night audience and the three leading New York critics agreed.

Miss Joudry, 33 and no stranger to writing after several years of successful work in radio, was making her first bid on the legitimate stage—and it won't be her last.

"You bet I'll do another—even if they murder me," she told The Canadian Press after Tuesday's opening and before the first-string critics' reception.
There was some speculation today that she might become involved in moving "Teach Me How To Cry" further uptown before she has a chance to do another. Produced with stark but effective sets, particularly that of the burned-out, haunted, abandoned bandstand that hangs as a symbolic menace over the young lovers, Miss Joudry's play was given a superb portrayal by the New York cast—notably Deirdre Owens and Richard Morse as the lovers and Nan McFarland and John C. Becher as the boys' parents. The acting couldn't have been better and the entire production made what reviewer Mark Barron of The Associated Press called "an exciting event in the theatre."

Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times calls it "a superior work in all categories."

Walter F. Kerr of The Herald Tribune says Miss Joudry "had done honorably by most of her characters." He calls the play "a new collection of remembered and sometimes touching fragments."

The downtown audience applauded each of the 10 scenes in the two-hour play and at the end Miss Joudry was called to the stage where she hugged the leading performers to a standing ovation.

Some Washable Fashions To Wear While at Home

ELEANOR ROSS
It has become the thing to stay home—at least a few evenings a week.
How does one know this? Why, by looking around at the new at-home fashions, and learning that they are selling as well as they go-out clothes. When so many designers and manufacturers invest so much money in leisure fashions, you may be sure that someone is buying and wearing them.

Dressing for Home
Whether it's radio, television or a record player concert, or cards or conversation, women are dressing up to go nowhere at all. And what we like about these delightful at-home clothes is that most of them are eminently practical, as well as pretty.
Most of them take to suds with perfect safety. Whether it's turtleneck and velvet boleros, or sweeping skirts and blouses, women want leisure fashions that are going to cost a fortune to keep fresh and pretty. So nylon velvet it is, and it's washable.

May Be Washed
Rayons and silks and synthetic fabrics all take to soap and water

if one uses commonsense as a laundering ingredient.
House dresses go to market or luncheon with aplomb, sure that they look fresh and smart and up-to-date. A woman can look pretty as can be in the new long-torso house dresses that make use of every new fashion detail. You can find all the style and silhouette interest in an inexpensive, washable house dress that you find in far more expensive clothes.

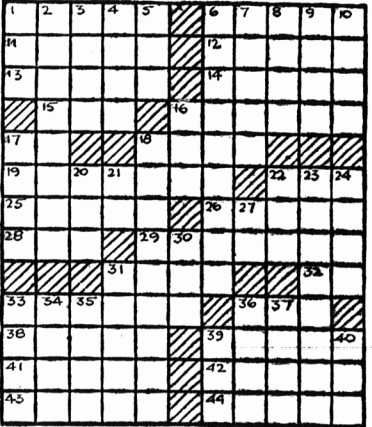

Consider New Offerings
So, if your house dress wardrobe is petering out, have a look at the new offerings. You'll rejoice in the new workaday collars, some with skirts that flare widely from a low hipline, for all the world like a fashion magazine picture of a costly afternoon or evening dress. There are cuffed hiplines, low-cuffed necklines—and shirtwaist dresses with elastic inserts at waist or sides to make for easy fit and ease in motion.
All sorts of new fabrics are included, such as dotted broadcloth, novelty checks, printed linenlike cottons and pongee-type cotton fabrics with water-color type prints.
