topped with a miniature bride and groom.
The couple will reside in West Devon, where the groom is a farmer. A shower was held at the West Devon Hall where they received many beautiful gifts. Music was furnished by James Stevenson and Robert Essery.

The bride, given in marriage by Wilfred Ford, was charming in a floor length gown of white lace over tulle featuring long sleeves coming to a point over the hands and a scalloped neckline. Her shoulder length veil was held in place with a tangle of sequins. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations, and her only ornament was a pearl necklace and matching earrings, the gift of the groom.

Miss Isabel Ford was bridesmaid, wearing a white corset and a bouquet of yellow maras. Roy Ford was best man.

The mother of the bride chose a blue dress with white accessories and a white corsage. Mrs. Rayner wore a white nylon dress with matching accessories and a pink corsage.

A reception for 40 guests was held at the home of the groom. The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake.

ELLEN'S DIARY
Valley Of Light And Shadow
Washed In The Moonlight

"Home time!" Granddaughter, our visitor this evening, commented, looking up from her reading when the old clock on the shelf chimed a note. We followed her to the front verandah to look out at the night. West the afterglow faded to a faint amber ribbon, making a pretty background for the dark spires and cupolas of the woodlark across the road. How bright was our cup of valour, a picture of light and shadow, washed in the moonlight's flow.

"Isn't it too bad one has to sleep through a night like this — to miss all this loveliness of summer?" she queried. "When I'm back in rainy, one doesn't have any regrets when bedtime comes. But to leave all this!" There was regret in her voice. "It is beautiful!" we agreed. "The night quite perfect — faultless!" she said. She gazed on the verandah to cup a blossom of dahlia, a neat orange bloom in the dark, a loving touch, then glanced to the deep of the valley below.

"She smiled," the fireflies are down in the alders! Lamps brighter actually than the moonlight. Magical creatures aren't they?"

"A bit witchy — eerie" he suggested. "But magical. Sometimes we don't quite understand. But then life wouldn't be so interesting if we had an answer for every problem or could find a reason for everything, would it? She stepped down to see if she could catch sight of some orbiting space-ship."

"Wonder just how long it will be before they — some alien or other, lands a man on the moon," she questioned. "That depends on the progress of space-travel. It will be some years yet — they reckon." "I will hear exploring, it won't be so mysterious, then, will it? But I expect when other Augusts come round, it will be following that same old trail above the mill" she chuckled. "State home!" she smiled at parting. "Well — see you!" she smiled at parting.

"And the great golden willow, and the old white birch, filtered moonlight through their leaves and cheres, patterning the pathway pretty for her as she turned away home to the house across the lane."

"We lingered there a moment before the time the water at the spillways in the dam below. How gentle is the tunc of that summer flow! And so familiar as to be almost unnoticed by day, by the folks at Alder. At night, it comes up to us through the silence to our lullaby, and our company, when we choose to desert our pillow."

"What do I hear?" a visitor to the other day questioned, when we were about the lawn. "It sounds like a wind rising or one riffling the leaves."

To us, it is a silent rustle of sound, reminding of trilling tassel-shaw with white accessories of the bride attended by 20 guests, who were served by friends of the bride: Mrs. Andrew MacPhee, Miss Louise MacNeill, Miss Drucilla MacPhee and Miss Lillian MacAusland. Mrs. Alvin Bernard was in charge of the guest book.

Out of the province guests included Mr. and Mrs. Clarence MacKenzie and son, Carl, Mrs. MacKenzie is a sister of the bride and Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, friends of the bride, were widely entertained. Showers included one given by the cooking staff of the Island Telephone Co. At the home of Mrs. Kay Prizzell one of the home of Mrs. Donnie Simmonds, a community shower tendered here at her home by the North River and Millar residents and a personal shower held at the home of Mrs. Helen MacCoubrey.

MR. AND MRS. ALFRED THANE BARLOW

Young Couple Plight Troth At Tyne Valley Ceremony

Tyne Valley Presbyterian Church was the scene of a wedding of wide interest recently when Shirley Adele MacArthur became the bride of Alfred Thane Barlow.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald MacArthur, Tyne Valley, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. Searles, Wellington.

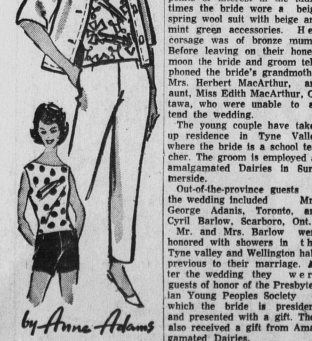

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. L.M. MacNaughton assisted by Rev. W.B. MacPhail. Mrs. Robert Miller was organist and accompanied Miss Ann Leard in her solo "O Perfect Love" before the ceremony and "The Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register.

Floral arrangements of roses, peonies, orange blossoms and potted plants decorated the church. The most pious were marked with white satin bows and white roses.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white net and lace over satin, featuring a fitted bodice and lowered waistline. Two panels of rose pattern lace fell from unpressed pleats on the sides.

Her shoulder-length circular veil of nylon tulle was held in place by a head band topped with a nylon tulle rose decoration.
