MR. AND MRS. ALAN BOYD

Pretty Autumn Wedding Is Soleminized At St. Dunstan's

A pretty autumn wedding was solemnized at St. Dunstan's Basilica in Charlottetown recently when Katherine Veda, daughter of Mrs. Micheal Robinson and the late Mr. Robinson, of Charlottetown, became the bride of Mr. Alan Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Boyd of Kitchener, Ont.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. P.F. MacDonald, who also celebrated the nuptial mass. Mrs. Joseph Dougan played appropriate wedding hymns and accompanied the soloist Miss Mary Moran.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother Michael, looked lovely in a street length sheath of white brocaded satin with an overdress of white peau-de-sole. A crown covered in peau-de-sole held in place her shoulder length veil of French illusion. She carried an ivory prayerbook with a spray of white gardenias.

Mrs. Eugene Coady, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. She wore a street length gown of peau-de-soie in "ro mance" pink with matching headdress and carried a crescent bouquet of pink carnations.

Mr. Pat Monaghan of Toronto was the besman. The ushers were Eugene Coady and Mr. Donald Robinson.

For her daughter's wedding the mother chose for her daughter's wedding a dress of navy blue lace with matching hat.

The groom's mother was wearing a dress of teal blue crepe with hat in a lighter shade.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Charlottetown Hotel for fifty guests. The toast to the bride was proposed by Col. Leo F. MacDonald and fittingly responded to by the groom.

For travelling the bride wore a raspberry red wool suit and a black and white velvet and feather hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd have taken up residence in Toronto, Ont. where the groom is with the Bank of Nova Scotia.

MARY HAWORTH

Neurotic Husband Makes Wife's Life Unpleasant

Dear Mary Haworth: After four years of marriage and devotion to my husband and son, I feel my husband wants me to leave him.

We live near his family, in the area and in the house that he chose. I seldom see my people, who live far away.

Dan is the most cruel person I have ever known. He takes my devotion for granted, refuses to give me affection when I want it and expects me to praise him in everything, while he finds fault with all I do. He never makes plans to take me out.

Life looks ugly and black to me because of him and I don't believe in divorce but don't know what to do. I want to stay with him but he makes me suffer so much. Help, please!

P.S. He often compliments his women co-workers and is a charmer with the ladies. P.C.

Dear P.C.: Obviously your husband is a neurotic fellow who cannot tolerate being loved in a wholesome exchange. He has to feel he is surmounting obstacles, conquering resistance, taking the field by force, etc. in order to be an enthusiastic sweetheart.

This being the case, to make life tolerable as his wife, you would have to put your love-feelings in storage, figuratively speaking, and treat him with consistent indifference to maintain his interest.

Or, if you refuse to consider that proposition as a kind of living death, a pose in which you'd be turning to stone for lack of emotional exercise, then the constructive alternative is to leave him. M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: I have been meaning to write you for some time to praise your intelligent, well - thought - out answers to the problems addressed to you. I may add that I am glad you are a believer in God and have the courage to speak the truth.

To the lonely wife C.S., moody and depressed due to lack of meaningful communication with anyone, may I offer a bit of wisdom that has worked wonders in my experience?

I have found that not being able to mix socially is really a blessing in disguise, for it turns us in the direction of being useful to persons who most need our attention — in the local hospitals and nursing homes.

Call on the shut-ins, young or old. They will love you as you are. You needn't worry about saying the wrong thing, for in letting them talk, you will make them happy and also forget your own problems and shortcomings.

Before you know it, you will be saying the right things—the words of comfort and understanding that God's love of people would have you say.

When we stand before the judgment seat at the end of time, our social successes won't be taken into account but our record of service will. In ministering to others, we are blest both in time and eternity.

Opportunities surround C.S., and I pray God to guide her in paths of service.

I hope we shall soon be hearing through your column that she has found the way. E.F.

Dear E.F.: Thanks for your kind words to me and sensible advice for the disheartened wife.

May I suggest that she see a doctor to check the possibility that low blood sugar may be playing a part in her seriously dwindling morale? M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: May I commend your answer to the young engaged girl whose fiance warns her: "Love me, love my Mom!"

I am a young widow of one of those domineering Mom's boys who couldn't see the wickedness of his mother with her feigned heart attacks and other tricks that ruined two marriages for him and finally put him in an early grave.

I sincerely hope that this young woman has the understanding and common sense to profit by your wise, kindly, foresighted counsel. Truer words were never spoken! M.H.
