Hungarian Beef Soup Is A Substantial Meal

"The food most generally known as Hungarian is goulash," remarked the Chef. "This is a platter stew, made from any available meat or poultry, always with 1-3 as much fine-chopped onion as meat, and served with flaky potatoes liberally dust with paprika." "A robust Hungarian beef soup is a lesser-known favorite, substantial enough for a main course at dinner and so appetizing it would be a good choice to serve bubbling hot after an evening of winter sports." Hungarian Beef Soup: Cut 2 lbs. stewing beef into 1/2" cubes. Dust with 1 1/2 tsp. meat tenderizer and let stand 20 min. Place in heavy 3-qt. saucepan with 2 tsp. shortening and 1/2 c. chopped onion. Stir - cook until browned. Stir in 2 tsp. paprika and 1/2 tsp. ground black pepper. Cook stir 2 min. Add 2 c. diced seeded green pepper, 2 c. diced fresh tomato (or 2 c. solid-pack canned tomato), 1 ham bone and 2 qts. boiling water. Cover. Simmer - cook 1 1/2 hrs., when meat should be nearly tender. Meantime, cut 1/2 lb. Polish-type sausage into pieces 1/2" thick; brown in frying pan. Drain on absorbent paper towels. Add to soup with 4 c. small-diced white potato. Simmer-cook 30 min. or until both meat and potato are fork-tender. HUNGARIAN DINNER Jellied beet - cabbage salad; Hungarian Beef soup; broiled egg bread (Baker) Hungarian apple torte; coffee, tea, or milk. All measurements are level; recipes for 4 to 6. Jellied Beet - Cabbage Salad:

Prepare 1 pkg. lemon-flavored gelatin as directed, using only 1 c. boiling water. Add 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/2 tsp. crushed caraway seed, 3 tsp. cider vinegar, 1/2 tsp. grape-horse-radish and 3/4 c. juice drain from 1 (1 lb.) can sliced beets. Stir in 1 1/2 c. fine-chopped crisp white cabbage and c. chopped canned beets. Rinse custard cups with cold water. Ladle in beet mixture. Refrigerate 4 hrs. or until firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise as garnish. Hungarian Apple Torte: Split 2 layers sponge cake in halves horizontally. Put together with jelly-apple filling. Just before serving, sift over confectioners' sugar, or spread with a thin layer of sweetened whipped cream. Jelly Apple Filling: Cook 1 1/2 lbs. washed, quartered tart apples with 3 tsp. water and 2 1/2 c. sugar until very soft. Rub through a sieve; apple sauce should be very thick. Cool. Spread cake layers with currant jelly or apricot jam; put together with applesauce. Chill at least 2 hrs. Top with whipped cream. Suggestion of the chef: Wrap ham bones in aluminum foil and refrigerate up to a week for use in making soup.

SOUTHPORT W.I. Mrs. George Murphy was hostess to the January meeting held in the school club room. Mrs. Dr. H.H. Kelly presided and fourteen members responded to roll call with suggestions for programs for coming year. The minutes of previous meeting were read and approved, followed by the treasurer's report. Several bills were presented and on motion paid. Reports were heard from the various committees. Convener of Ways and Means turned in proceeds from three card parties and asked members to decide whether to continue parties or not. After some discussion, it was decided to hold four more card parties during the winter. A list of hostesses for the monthly meetings for the coming year was compiled, followed by the drawing of the lottery blanket, the winning ticket being held by Mrs. Mary Duffy, Charlottetown. A letter from Mrs. Lincoln Dewar, convener of health and welfare was read. To quote: "As homemakers we should be interested in health from the standpoint of prevention rather than cure." Our National convener of Health quoted these words: "The satisfying home is economically sound, physically healthy, mechanically convenient, morally wholesome, spiritually inspiring, founded on mutual affection and respect." She suggested that this quotation could be a basis for study by Institutes at all levels. However, much we might agree, it would be a large order to study the complete thought. Since this is health month, perhaps that part, which deals with health would keep us thinking. In line with Mrs. Dewar's suggestions, the program committee showed the film "Vitamin D" and "He Acts His Age" depicting child development from one to fifteen. For entertainment a colored film of the Cabot Trail was shown. Mrs. Dr. R.S. MacDonald invited members to her home for the February meeting. The lunch committee: Mrs. Rodgerson and Mrs. Compton. The roll call to be announced by a valentine verse, preferably original. Each member is to bring an article for an auction to next meeting. A delicious lunch was served

REPEATING

BY ALICE ALDEN THE walking suit will be gracing the spring street scene in town, but it will not be fashioned of last year's heavy fabrics. The ever-so-smart walking suit is apt to be of silk, as is this model. Roxanne of Samuel Winston does it in black silk shantung and poses an all-over tucked jacket over a semi-fitted, buttoned-neckline dress. The tucking repeats itself at the bottom of the skirt to carry out the suit theme with the jacket. This one should see long, useful and distinguished service.

London's First 11 Designers

By MURIEL PENN LONDON (Reuters)—A show of accessories raised the curtain Monday on the new spring and summer fashion collections of London's "first 11" designers. The collections themselves start today, and first to show will be Ronald Paterson, the young Scotsman known for his striking color combinations. He will be followed by Victor Stiebel, who often makes clothes for Princess Margaret, and Hardy Amies, one of the royal dressmakers. The star of Monday's accessories show was an outfit consisting of Norfolk jacket and trousers in silk suede made by Bolton Leathers. The perfect fit of the trousers and the folds of the Norfolk jacket served as ample demonstrations of the supple qualities of this new suede which, at a distance, could easily be mistaken for velvet. GLOWING NEW COLOR A second model, in a glowing new color called gingernut made by Paterson, was an over-the-suit jacket with softly pleated flapped pockets opening at the sides. Another novelty seen at this show for the first time was the wedgewood china heels which Edward Rayne, Queen Elizabeth's shoemaker, is putting on some of his evening sandals and pumps for the coming season. These heels, and the tiny round blue and white wedgewood china medallions which form the top of the shoe to accompany them, already are selling well in Canada and the United States. The summer hats by Simone Mirman, Madame Vernier and Aage Thaarup were in many cases either made of or covered with flowers.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Poor Mack Worries Now About The Fishing Season

These days, February walks bright and cold along the Island country-side: up and down our valley of the millstream, among the dark spruces on the hillsides, down the lightly spread white slopes, and on the stream itself, now it is caught fast in an icy grip. "And just think — only two months away now from the opening of the fishing season!" Mack commented today, surveying our cupboard's shelves with an eye to gaining an empty mustard tin, a preferred container for bait because it can be fitted easily into a young fisherman's pocket and thus be conveniently near. "But where, I'm asking, will we get angle-worms, if the earth keeps frozen as it is?" "You needn't worry about that," we chuckled, "there'll be many a wind, yet, both cold and warm, before two months roll away."

When the night-shadows deepen, and a little new moon neighbors the stars above a hilltop, we move the geraniums that have bathed warmly in the bright sunshine of the day on their sills, away from chance disaster against frosty windows. "Better, I guess, to have the frost now than later," James noting will say, thoughts doubtless going with a wish to that season which will add pages to stable and sty and fold. In the event that firstlings of the latter should perhaps arrive unwelcomed at a far barn, a number of ewes were herded home along the fields today to have them within the watchful eyes of the farmers.

Cool today was, yet we suspect only invigorating to the younger members of our "staff" who for-gathered at the wood-yard over the fields this afternoon, to enjoy a spell at "the splitting".

James remained behind at the choring. We found him in a barn later, intent on feeding the cattle their rations of roots. Mangels, serving them out carefully according to age and favoring none. On a rug, where the sun streamed in warmly on them through a window a trio of barn-cats lazed in content.

"Come, Ellen," James smiled, leaving his work for the moment, "let's have a look at the cattle!" "It is a nice experience to accompany him on a tour of the stables—to look in at calves, and yearlings as alike as peas in a pod, to see the complacent cows, to appraise with him the feeders, and to admire the great-eyed herd sire. James is away now—off beneath the sparkling stars to visit. However we are not alone. "Did you hear that!" the black at exclaims, having roused at the sharp report of frost in the house-timbers. "It's better than to have to wade through drifts of snow-frost. Did I tell you I was down to the mill last night? Yes," he smiles, "and I'm telling you it's not much like Summer down there!" Summer? These days, February walks bright and cold. . . up and down our valley of the mill-stream. Until tomorrow—Diary—Good-night.

Smart, Elegant, Easy To Wear

LONDON (Reuters)—Norman Hartnell, the royal dressmaker, emphatically endorsed the death of the Empire line Wednesday.

In his new spring and summer fashion collection there is not a single Empire-line model. It may be summed up as smart, elegant and easy to wear. Relaxed though his new line is, there is nothing slapdash about it. However casual the dress, suit or coat may be, it still is perfectly cut for the perfectly turned out woman.

Suits in Hartnell's new collection run in two broad groups. First, there are Cardigan suits, with collarless jackets cut on straight, flat lines to the hip. In the other group, lightly fitted, top-of-the-hip jackets, which may be raised in front or dip at the back, have a wider shoulder line than of late and sometimes even a little padding. Collars are bold and usually of the standup type. But whatever their shape, they always are well away from the neck.

Nearly all of Hartnell's skirts are pencil slim.
