Rally Day Service At Montague

Miss Anne MacEachern presided at the rally day service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Montague, Sunday morning. Mrs. Elsie Waterworth was the organist. The theme of the service was "Light from the Word of Life" and Miss MacEachern used these words in her address which was very interesting and instructive to the many parents and friends who attended the service, as well as to the members of the Sabbath School.

The leader was assisted by Pauline Nicholson and Mary Farquharson who read the scripture lessons, and Rena Llewellyn and Phyllis Reid who led in prayer. Special music included the hymn "God in Heaven, Hear Us Singing" by the junior choir, and a vocal solo by Carol Ann Boehmer. The hymns sung were "O Send Thy Light Forth, and Thy Truth", "Father of Mercies, In Thy Word", "I Love To Hear The Story" and "O Word of God Incarnate." The offering received is for the Presbyterian Church schools throughout Canada. The benediction was pronounced by Miss MacEachern.

IN MEMORIAM

MR. J. F. MOSSEY Eastern Kings, where he was best known, mourns the loss of Mr. J. F. Mossey, whose death occurred in the Charlottetown Hospital on Thursday, September 25th.

Mr. Mossey was born at East Baltic seventy-seven years ago, the son of the late Edward Mossey and Maria McEachern Mossey. He started life as a shore fisherman at a time when returns were meagre. He beached his dory, and a friend who confidently believed in his integrity entrusted him with goods to sell from house to house. Competition was keen but the unknown, manly boy soon became a welcome visitor in every household. Hard work and thrift enabled him to build a house and a store.

His marriage to Miss Sarah McCormack and the joy of raising a fine family of boys and girls was saddened by the prolonged illness and death of his beloved wife. How well he succeeded in raising and training his family is an inspiration to all who may be faced with such a challenging problem. During the world depression the manager of a large agency in Charlottetown wanted to know what kind of man J. F. Mossey was. The person of whom the inquiry was made replied, "I know nothing of his bank account—I do know he has the great asset of honesty." There would be many who stood beside his bier on Saturday morning who echo this sentiment. Thank God for such a life. A person who is striving to live up to the best he seldom finds himself in complete agreement with all others. That morning was an exception. Every home for miles was represented, in some cases whole families came to pay their respects to a beloved friend and neighbor and tender sincere sympathy to his second wife and devoted family.

The large concourse that followed his remains to St. Columba Cemetery was most fitting for a man who never failed to extend sympathy and help when it was in his power to do so.

Soon it was all over. An appeal from a Warden Christie who spoke over a loudspeaker system was heard. The two guards were freed and the prisoners herded inside the building.

Canada Hops

ernment is purchasing the meat under a support program. By the time the beef is prepared for shipment, the cost to the government is about one and a half pounds or more. Experts have estimated that the over-all loss may reach $15,000,000 or more, dependent on the final disposition of the New Zealand beef in the U. S.

Since the New Zealand beef was expected to fetch a far higher price in the U. S. than in the U. K., any difference in the two prices was to be split between Canada and New Zealand under a profit-sharing program. But since the agreement was made, American meat prices slipped about 13 cents a pound. The drop officials said, just about equalled the profit expected from frozen beef sales.

However, that didn't mean there would be no profit when the final chapter on the meat deal is written. The American market could change and the price jump again, once heavy meat supplies usually evident during fall months, dwindle.

Canada takes possession of the New Zealand beef before it leaves that country, pays for the transportation, storage and selling costs. Profits, if any, are calculated from the gross selling cost. Under this arrangement, New Zealand is guaranteed the same price at seaboard she would have received if she had sold it to the U. K., which is about 14 cents a pound.

But by the time all other costs are paid, the gross cost, so far, has just about equalled the selling price. On the few millions of pounds that have been sold, the price has been estimated at between 30 and 35 cents a pound.

War, he enlisted in the 106th Battalion P. E. Island Highlanders in 1915 on his 18th birthday. Going overseas with the Highlanders as a Sergeant, he was transferred to the 26th Battalion as Bombing Instructor Sergeant, and later was assigned the same duty in the 78th Battalion in France.

On his return from overseas he continued his military activity and on the organization of the P. E. Island Light Horse in 1921 was commissioned as a Lieutenant. His advance was rapid in the new organization and he rose to Captain and later was gazetted Major of a Squadron, with headquarters at Charlottetown. Shortly after, with the expansion of the mounted unit, he was appointed Major of C Squadron under headquarters at Montague. Under his leadership this squadron attained an enviable degree of proficiency. He was a Major Campbell was acting Deputy Provincial Secretary for some time during World War Two. He was later appointed Director of Old Age Assistance, which position he filled with marked ability, until compelled through ill health to relinquish that office.

Major Campbell won considerable distinction as an athlete, and for many years took an active part in hockey and football along with field and track sports. He was a member of his Division tug-of-war team overseas which lost out to the Champions in a memorable contest between the crack teams of the Canadian Army. He was twice married. His first wife was the former Miss Daisy Turner of O'Leary. There were two children, Bert, residing in Charlottetown and Noreen in Edmonton, Alberta. His second wife, the former Miss Ester Stevenson of New Glasgow, P. E. Island, sur-that of a ragged letter "Z". The top edge was a grotesquely-shaped grey mass of cloud.

It was Britain's first major atomic explosion, making her the third country in the world known to have a working atomic weapon. The big blast came more than seven years after the fateful day in July 1945 on which the United States exploded its first atomic bomb in the New Mexico desert.

In the interval the U. S. dropped two A-bombs in wartime and conducted a series of atomic weapon tests at proving grounds in the Pacific and the U. S. Atomic explosions also occurred in Russia. Britain's test was conducted in utmost secrecy. An area of some 25,500 square miles around the bleak Monte Bello Islands was declared a restricted zone last May. Movements of equipment and personnel during the weeks leading up to the test were veiled by strict censorship.

Reporters watching the blast from their hilltop at Rough Range said the cloud was 10,000 feet high two minutes after the explosion with its top rocketing skyward while the base lifted away to the west.

The flash was far less intense than had been expected by newspapermen on the hill, a coast peak about 65 miles from the centre of the prohibited testing area. They were surprised that the effect of the bomb was barely felt on the mainland.
