JOHN NEWSON

JOUBERT'S DEATH AGAIN REPORTED

To Have Occurred on Nov. 10.

Gen. Methuen Again in the Field

General Gatacre's Report on the Situation in Cape Colony.—Further Particulars of Modder River Fight.—Boers Strong at Colenso, but said to be Ill and Deserting at Ladysmith.

[SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.]

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Daily Mail's correspondent, in a despatch dated Belmont, Nov. 28th, says the Boers at Modder River were very strongly entrenched on both banks of the river and also in the broad bed of the stream.

They were especially strong on the north bank, which is heavily lined with thick mimosa bushes.

AN IDEAL POSITION

for the Boers, who had been in possession of it for several weeks busily preparing for the oncoming British.

Our troops, though inferior in numbers, showed

MAGNIFICENT GALLANTRY.

They drove the enemy out of his position on the south side of the river, forced him across the stream and then cleared him from the other side until he was driven off in full retreat.

General Methuen now has a large force firmly established across the river.

The Daily Mail also publishes a despatch from Sterk's Troop, Cape Colony, which says: General Gatacre, who occupies a strong position, has been reinforced by the Second Northumberland Regiment.

The Boers have withdrawn from Molteno. There has been a further movement towards Indiv. Dordrecht is safe. Bushman's Hook is strongly held by the Imperial troops.

Frere camp, Natal.—Lord Dundonald's command advanced to within three miles of Colenso and his scouts reconnoitered the bridge across the Tugela and the position of the enemy. They reported that there were two camps of the enemy and Colenso was FULL OF BOERS.

A London telegram received here states that General Lord Methuen is having recovered from the effects of his wound.

LONDON, Dec 4.—The Telegraph's correspondent at Frere says under date of Nov 28th:

Hundreds of General Joubert's column are ill. Many having lost their rifles and horses have returned home on foot. A few more deserters came in to-day. They say the Boers are and are starving.

TIRED OF THE WAR

The military critic of the Morning Post writes as follows:

It is clear our continued ignorance concerning the fight at Modder River is not the result of accident. Apparently it is assumed in most quarters that General Methuen practically had achieved the

RELIEF OF KIMBERLEY,

but there seems to be nothing in the tidings we have received to warrant such an assumption.

The ardour with which Methuen forced the pace northward confirms our conjecture as to the needs of Kimberley. Once Kimberley is relieved, the relief of Mafeking must be achieved indirectly by threatening other places. No advance from Kimberley is likely to be undertaken until Generals Gatacre and French, moving by Stromberg Junction and Arandel, have joined hands north of Orange River.

It is supposed the

has been delayed by necessity of getting supplies to Pietermaritzburg.

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 28.—(Delayed in transmission.) There are now recurring and substantial rumours that General Joubert, the Boer commander, was killed near Ladysmith on November 10th. Your correspondent has seen a letter written by a Boer in Pretoria, to his wife who is at Cape Town, in which he stated he had just returned from Joubert's funeral.

The Grahamstown Journal publishes a letter from their correspondent with the Free State Burghers at Ladysmith in which he says: "You will have heard of Joubert's death before this. He was killed by a shell which ricocheted and hit him on the head. He expired soon afterwards. I was standing within ten yards of him at the time."

SECOND EDITION.

[SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER]

LONDON, Dec 4.—The London Chronicle's correspondent tells the following story of the Modder River battle:

"The enemy occupied a strong entrenched position. Their front extended for a distance of 5 miles along the bank of the stream. They were well protected with artillery and fought desperately."

The battle started at daybreak, our guns shelling the Boers' left, while the enemy replied with artillery, Hotchkiss and Maxim guns. The artillery battle lasted some hours, then there was a brief lull in the enemy's artillery, of which General Methuen immediately took advantage.

Our infantry advanced across the plain towards the river in two brigades. The Guards on the right were met by an awful hail of bullets from the enemy's sharpshooters posted close to the river on the opposite bank. Our troops had no cover whatever and were

SIMPLY MOWED DOWN.

It seemed impossible to live through the terrible fire, but the brave fellows did not retreat an inch. The Boer fire was horribly accurate and they must have numbered at least 10,000 men.

The Scots Guards had advanced 600 yards before they were fired on. Then they had to lie down to escape the deadly fusillade which lasted without intermission throughout the day.

The Highlanders made several attempts to force the passage of the river, but they were exposed to such a murderous enfilading fire that they after they had suffered terribly.

Subsequently a party of the guards got over and held their own for hours against a vastly superior force. The general opinion of the staff is that there had never been such a sustained fire in the annals of the British army as that which our troops had to face. Our men while trying to repulse the enemy. Among the many heroic deeds one of the most conspicuous was that of Lieutenant Colonel Cordington, of the Coldstream Guards, Captain Sellheim, of the Queensland contingent and a dozen members of the Coldstream Guards, who jumped into the river and swam nearly to the other side in the face of a steady fire. They were forced to retire, however, and joining hands swam back, one being nearly drowned in returning.

FELL IN DOZENS

The British guns kept up a heavy fire all day and fearful havoc was wrought in the Boer positions, the enemy being forced to fly from their entrenchments. Night put an end to the terrible bloodshed.

The Infantry Brigade was dreadfully cut up. The Boers retreated at night, taking their guns with them, and we are now occupying their position. The enemy's losses must have been tremendous.
