Press Invited On Britannia For Seaway Ceremony

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer
ABOARD ROYAL YACHT BRITANNIA (CP) — This aristocratic of the sea pushed her polished bow through a symbolic gate Friday, officially opening the billion-dollar St. Lawrence Seaway.
And the Queen made sure the event was well chronicled for history by relaxing for the first time the royal strictures protecting the privacy of her sea-going home and inviting the press to make the trip.
A dozen press, radio and TV reporters joined her on the royal barge to report and photograph the ceremonial passage and she and President Eisenhower, sometimes using binoculars, inspected the great canal and acknowledged the cheers of the thousands lining its banks.
It was a free and easy trip through the first lock at St. Lambert and then up the seaway, though at the Cote St. Catherine lock where the royal yacht disembarked her press party, a cluster of sailors was kept on the jump lowering buffers to prevent the highly glazed enamel sides from being scarred.
MANY GUESTS
The Canadian and United States guests, including members of the Ottawa and Washington cabinets and their wives, remained on the Queen's verandah deck at the stern. The Queen and Prince Philip, President and Mrs. Eisenhower and Prime Minister and Mrs. Diefenbaker, stuck to the royal bridge through most of the trip for a better view of the massive engineering achievement and so they could be seen better by those ashore.
After the opening ceremonies ashore at St. Lambert, the Queen and the president came aboard the yacht in friendly conversation but at a slow pace. The Queen was in what is obviously a favorite color — turquoise — while the president wore a dark business suit.
They were followed by the tall prince and Mrs. Eisenhower in a dark and white speckled creation. Mrs. Eisenhower, in a happy mood, offered her arm to the prince. With a gallant gesture he took it and they boarded the yacht like a young couple on a first date.
As the Queen and president reached the deck of the yacht a 21-gun salute boomed out from one of the escort destroyers — the Gatineau and at the same time a group of war veterans gave three cheers both for the Queen and then for the president. They were rewarded when both went to the side of the yacht and waved an acknowledgment.
SPASMODIC ERUPTIONS
It was exactly 12:03 p. m. by the yacht's clock when Britannia passed through a ceremonial gate to open the seaway officially. This set off spasmodic eruptions of fireworks and balloons. Some of the rockets released Canadian and United States flags which floated down on parachutes. The Royal Marine Band played on the deck while a military band played ashore. The church bells pealed in Montreal and the surrounding towns but they were too far away to be heard on board.
A group of the Canadian-U. S. parliamentary group waved from shore and one member shouted a reference to the president's seaway opening speech in which he referred to his poor French: "That prairie French was pretty good." And another hailed the yacht with: "We all fell in love with the Queen and the president and they rocked with laughter and waved back delightedly.

SEAGULLS TOO
At the height of the opening fireworks, a thousand seagulls alight in nearby shallows were disturbed by the racket and they all rose screeching in a spectacular cloud of white wings.
The Queen and the prince were bound that the photographers get pictures of the event and cooperate in every way possible. Once the Queen noticed a photographer about to shoot and she paused so he could get her full face before turning on her way.
At the Mercier Bridge the Britannia had to tilt two of her three masts in order to safely clear the obstruction. The crew is accustomed, especially on trips up the Thames, to this and the yacht's such an eventuality.
There were many things to make the Queen and the president chuckle. At one spot a passing U. S. destroyer had painted its own name and then the greeting Welcome Queen. Hi Ike on the cement sides of the lock.
QUEEN DUCKED
When a new crop of fireworks broke out at one spot the president playfully asked the Queen to duck and she went through the motions of trying to take cover from the fire.
The official party of 56 ate in the Queen's silver grey-toned dining-room on polished mahogany. The Queen had special trays of caviar sent out as a side dish for the press lunch aboard.
An international flotilla of United States, British and Canadian ships, manned from stem to stern with white-clad sailors, cheered the Queen through a review point at Lake Louis late in the day as she continued the royal cruise. The president left the ships at Beauharnois to return to Washington.

RELIGION AND LIFE

BY VERY REV. GEORGE C. PIDGEON, D.D., LL.D.
First Moderator of the United Church of Canada

LET VISIT KINDLE FIRES OF LOYALTY
Our Queen and Prince Philip are now in Canada. The Queen has come as the Queen of Canada. She is enthroned by hereditary right, the descendant and heiress of a royal line, and she rules by the free consent of her people.
One day, after we had joined the army in France, we saw a number of young officers saluting their commander. There was no sign of compulsory submission to arbitrary authority; instead there was the glad recognition of their leader whom they were happy to follow wherever he might lead.
Deeper and more joyous by far is our welcome to the Queen. She is the head of a mighty commonwealth of nations, but she is also our Queen, the Queen of Canada, and we are her subjects by our own free choice.
No elected head of a self-governing nation was ever more enthusiastically welcomed than our Queen will be wherever and whenever she appears among her people.
PERSONAL
In the first place, this loyalty is personal. The Queen is loved and is immeasurably worthy of that love.
It is of inestimable worth to the Commonwealth that it has a personal head, loyalty to whom flows out an emotion that sweeps everything before it.
King Charles I fought to maintain "the divine right of kings" and to impose submission on his subjects by force, but whatever the technical terms by which the experience of the centuries has led her people to define and limit the royal prerogatives, our Queen rules by the free consent of a devoted people who have pledged their lives to maintain and defend that for which she stands.
We were in the far west when World War I broke out. We felt the surge of our people's response the evening at Alex Blue. This was the occasion of Mr. and Mrs. Sencabaugh's 32nd wedding anniversary.
Mrs. George B. Hume, Brooklyn, has moved to her home in Little Sands.
Mr. and Mrs. Claud Dewar, Montague, were visitors to her brother's home, Mr. Carleton Hume and Mrs. Hume, Little Sands.
Friends here regret to hear of the passing of Mr. David John Saunders, Mount Vernon.
Friends and relatives in Little Sands regret to hear of the sudden illness of Mrs. Margaret Gillies, Newton, Mass. Her sister resides in Little Sands.

Mood. Mr. Hume also visits other friends in Little Sands during his stay at Hughes.
Friends and relatives regret to hear of the passing June 15, of Mr. Dan Emery of Wood Islands. The funeral was largely attended on Thursday from his late residence. Interment in Wood Island Cemetery.
Mrs. Williams MacKay's death of Murray River was also announced at the same time.
The funeral of Mr. William (Bill) Moore of Wood Islands, who was drowned March 18th, and whose body was recovered June 18th, was held in the Little Sands Cemetery. A beautiful sermon was preached at the grave by Rev. Frank MacLean of Charlottetown.
Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Simpson, of Pictou, have moved with their trailer house to Little Sands for the summer months. Mr. Simpson is employed on the Charles A. Dunning.
The two girls from Little Sands School who are writing Grade X exams at Montague this week are Dorothy Blue and Jeanie MacKay.
School closed here on June 19. The teacher, Miss Velma Stewart, kindly treated the pupils with ice cream. The mothers took cake, cookies and sandwiches.
Miss Mary MacLellan, Wood Islands has been engaged to teach in the Little Sands School for the next school year.
Friends here were pleased to hear that Mrs. Mary Deans, Keene, New Hampshire, has arrived at her summer home in Little Sands.
Mrs. Alex Blue, and Lila accompanied Mr. Neil MacNeil, Little Sands to visit at the home of her sister, Mrs. Rowan Sencabaugh, Oak Valley, Lila remaining with her aunt and is spending several days there. On Monday, June 22, the Sencabaugh and Lila returned to Little Sands and Pastor Honored At Party Given By Kingston U.C.

On Tuesday evening June 23rd, the members and supporters of Kingston United Church gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Younker to honor their pastor and his wife, the Rev. and Mrs. R.A. Patterson who are about to retire. Mr. and Mrs. Alton Newman brought the guests of honor forward while Mr. Heber Barret acting as chairman spoke very fitting words on behalf of the congregation in regards to the wonderful work both Mr. and Mrs. Patterson have accomplished in the few years they were both with us. He gave special thanks to Mr. Patterson for the way he visited the sick and shut-ins.
Willard Proud was called upon to read an address to the Pattersons, mentioning that as they leave our midst how each one of us will carry through life a sacred memory of our associations with them. They have shown to us the manifestation of the love of Christ and through knowing them we have grown to know and love our Saviour better. Their lives have been an inspiration for which we shall ever be thankful, extending our appreciation for all that they both have meant to us. Words could not begin to express our love to them both, assuring them that in their travels they will be in our thoughts and prayers in the days to come. Trust in that God may continue to use them as a means of blessing wherever they go as they have been helping us during these past years.
As the Apostle Paul was assuring the Hebrews of God's presence so he reminds us "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee". Heb. 13:5 "Casting all your care upon Him, for He careth for you". The message of this verse brings to our hearts a realization of the great love of our burden-bearing Saviour, and inspires firm confidence in Him. How wonderful to know that He careth for us! Coming aside from the busy activity of our every-day tasks, we find comfort and rest before His throne. There bring before our Lord burdens and heartaches, knowing that He will hear us when we call. We have experienced many definite answers to our prayers and our lives are enriched and strengthened as we draw our power from Him to whom all power has been given.
Lorne Smith presented them with a well filled purse. Both Mr. and Mrs. Patterson replied stating that they had enjoyed the fellowship of the Kingston people. All joined hands in singing "Blest be Thee that Binds". A sing-song led by Alice Barret, and a delicious lunch served by the ladies brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.
