

CAMPBELL FAMILY GATHER AT PICNIC
"The Campbells are coming" might well have been the theme song for a picnic held at Kildare Capes during the week-end. Present for a family gathering were Mrs. David Campbell of Abernethy, her six sons and their wives, two of her daughters and their husbands, and sixteen grandchildren. Two other daughters and their families were unable to be present. This was the first time the six brothers have been together for a number of years. They are Eldridge of Shrewsbury, Mass; Kerras of Southboro, Mass; Don

Parade Launches Lobster Carnival

"All is in readiness" stated carnival director Charles Hogan last evening as he finally saw the last piece of the jigsaw plan fitted into place and Summerside braced itself for the influx of tourists and visitors to the 3rd annual Lobster Carnival which gets underway Wednesday afternoon with a mammoth parade. Actually, many of the visitors are already here including over 600 sailors from one American and two Canadian ships which are tied up at the Summerside wharf. Thousands more are expected to filter in before the first curtain Saturday night. The weather is always a problem, with today's forecast not too bright, but everyone is optimistic, especially since the Island summer so far has been blessed with a large number of delightful days and this trend is expected to continue. About 7 tons of succulent lobsters are expected to be consumed during the four day celebration, when the lobster kings, cooked by experts and served with a minimum of other culinary dressing, to enhance the luscious taste of this clawed delicacy. "The parents sometimes cause quite a disturbance," said a harassed palace spokesman. "They can be quite fierce if anyone approaches the geese." Proceeds from this year's carnival will go to Prince County Hospital and other community services.

Canadian 'Couple' Causing Trouble On Palace Grounds

By KEN METHERAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP) — Without so much as a by-your-leave from the royal occupants, a Canadian family has set up housekeeping on the grounds of Buckingham Palace. Lured by the tiny artificial lake that adds a delightful country atmosphere to the 27-acre plot surrounding the palace's rather grim exterior, a pair of Canada geese literally dropped in. With their offspring, currently number six, they soon made it plain that the Canada Goose's pond, like the Englishman's home, is his castle. "The parents sometimes cause quite a disturbance," said a harassed palace spokesman. "They can be quite fierce if anyone approaches the geese." Canada geese were first introduced to the lake in 1955 at the request of the Queen. This compliance of the Commonwealth's senior dominion turned out to be something of a mixed blessing. At first, all was serene. The geese were on their best behavior and were special favorites of Prince Charles and Princess Anne. But in 1956 nine goslings appeared and the parents, more anxious to guard their young than show them off, caused no end of disturbance by attacking everyone who went near them. To make matters worse, other geese were attracted to the royal precincts. One day, in the middle of a storm, 28 arrived. They made a terrible mess, tore up the grass and generally acted with unroyal decorum. As a result, orders went out for the geese to be evicted and a great trapping program ensued. "Nobody is quite sure of the identity of the present parents. They may be descendants of the original trouble-makers who have become homesick for their royal surroundings and flown back to the palace. The geese aren't pinioned and the palace is quietly hoping the rather obstreperous guests will leave of their own accord as soon as the goslings, now eight weeks old, are able to fly."

ver foxes. This total crop was sold at prices averaging about $40 to $50 per skin. For the past few years, the world's production of silver foxes has probably been below 25,000, and the average price is $10 per skin or lower, and there is difficulty in disposing of even that small output at that low price. NOT UTILITY "If, on the other hand, a manufacturer who is today producing a million pairs of shoes would suddenly drop the production to 100,000 pairs, prices of shoes would rise tremendously. This example shows the nature of an industry producing for fashion, compared with an industry producing for utility. In an industry producing for fashion or luxury, the supply plays a secondary and remote role in the price. The important influence in the fashion industry is the demand. This demand has been greatly increased by the introduction of the split-skin process. For instance, a list - out mink that would retail for about $40 could, if the split-skin process is used, retail for $32 because this process is cheaper. "Today, women that cannot afford mink coats can afford to buy small pieces and cloth garments trimmed with mink. This reason fur auctions throughout the world show that mink is the one fur which has universal acceptance, and it is confidently believed, by the best authorities that women's appreciation of it will grow year after year, and that it will be a fur that will retain its popularity, as has Persian Lamb, for example, which can be remembered as being the most wanted fur 70 years ago.

Memorial Service Held On Sunday

Beautiful summer weather, for so many years a feature of the annual memorial service at New London, again favored the large congregation gathered about the monuments at the Geddie Memorial Church on Sunday afternoon July 13. The memorial service held each year on the second Sunday in July commemorates the sacrifice of those who gave their lives in the Great War of 1914-18 and the Second World War. The service was conducted by the Rev. W. G. C. Elliott of Margate United Pastoral Charge who was assisted by the Rev. L. B. Bartlett of the New London Presbyterian Pastoral Charge. The Rev. W. Eric Ingraham of New London Anglican Parish delivered the address. After referring fittingly to the sacrifice of those who were being honored, he went on to speak of the uselessness of war and the resulting misery, and the desire for peace in the world. Of all the happy results peace might bring he said, "there is only one true reason for peace, that we may be more free to work for Christ and His Church." The reading of the names inscribed on the war memorials, by the three ministers was followed by the silence and the reading of the words "They shall grow not old, age shall not weary them nor the years condemn. At the going down of the sun and in the morning we shall remember them." St. Mary's Anglican choir of

4-H Rally Held At Summerside

Prior to his address of welcome, Mr. Peacock paid tribute to the late Edvard Lord, 4-H Club leader, who was accidentally killed the previous evening while driving a tractor near Freetown and one minute's silence was observed in his memory by the 4-H members. The members were then taken to the farms of Scott Cairns and Allison Profit, Freetown, where they judged a class of cattle. The sewing clubs, however, remained at the auditorium for handicraft demonstrations. Seven members competed in the public speaking competition for a silver tray donated by the F.E.I. Dairymen's Association, which was won by Joyce MacFadyen, Lot 16. Joyce received the award from John Wright, Manager of Amalgamated Dairies who made the presentation on behalf of the Association. Judges in the competition were Linea Dewar, Secretary of the Federation of Agriculture, David Peacock and Mrs. Irene Mountain, W. I. Division. S. C. Wright, Deputy Minister of Agriculture addressed the clubs on citizenship during which he stated that to practise good citizenship, one must respect the property of others. Skits, musical numbers, piano solos, monologues were presented by the respective clubs following the address. Urban Laughlin, on behalf of the East Prince Junior Farmers presented the other contestants in the public speaking competition with 4-H Club pins. The success of the rally was mainly due to the local 4-H club leaders and their parents.

TIMELY NOTES ON FUR FARMING

At the Hudson's Bay Company sale held in London, England, on July 1st, standard mink was 75 percent sold at prices "Very firm" compared with May levels at the one-day summer general fur auction. United States was the main buyer of standard mink, and this article represented the only participation from American buyers at the sparsely attended auction. Pastel mink was 40 percent sold at firm prices, with emphasis on females. London was the main buyer. At the Saskatchewan Fur Marketing Board sale held in Regina on July 6th, an offering of 76,000 muskrat was well received. The top price was $1.70; other lots brought $1.58, $1.26, $1.14, $1.06, and poorer qualities brought as low as 64 cents. PRODUCTION An article in the latest edition of "The Black Fox Magazine and Modern Mink Breeder" places the world's annual production of ranch and wild mink at approximately 10,000,000 skins, with the United States producing five million ranch mink and 700,000 wild mink. Canada produces 900,000 ranch mink and 250,000 wild Scandinavian Countries produce 2,500,000 ranch mink and 50,000 wild. Others, including Russia and Japan, produce 500,000 ranch mink. Commenting on this, the article goes on to state: "A few years ago, the mere contemplation of a world supply of 10,000,000 mink would have frightened the industry. Most fur men would have predicted that, in the face of such a supply, mink would no longer continue to enjoy prestige or high fashion" and additionally, existing effective demand could not possibly consume such a quantity. Hence, prices would decline. DEMAND "We are presently facing such a supply, yet mink enjoys good status, has continued to be in strong demand, and at even higher prices. What is the explanation? The explanation is that ours is a fashion industry, and the article we produce for sale is not a utility. If we depended upon the utility demand for fur garments, that is, the warmth or protection they offer the wearer, our total business would not nearly approach its present volume. "Furs are bought chiefly because they flatter the woman. They make her look more attractive, hence they are in fashion and women throughout the world wear them, or want to wear them. "Since ours is an industry based upon fashion, not utility, it is much more difficult to calculate or forecast the demand. In a fashion industry such as ours, there was, for example, some years ago, an actual world production of over one million sil-
