

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DAVID (BUD) REEVES
SPRING WEDDING

Wedding vows were pledged recently when Gloria Jean, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Lidstone, Knutsford, and John David (Bud), only son of Mrs. Clara Reeves, West Devon and the late Mr. Reeves, were united in marriage at O'Leary United Church. Rev. David Hamilton performed the double ring ceremony. The bride was attended by her cousin, Lois MacAusland, and George Robinson acted as best man for the groom. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the groom's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Howatt Gieson, Carleton, Lot 6. The newlyweds spent their honeymoon in New Brunswick. Flash Of Desert Sunset —In A Parfait Dessert

OUT in the great deserts of our country, everything is larger than life and twice as natural. The drama of a sunset is sublime.

Catch a bit of the desert feeling in a shimmering dessert served in tall crystal glasses, filled with a really uninhibited parfait — ice cream layered with strawberries and dates, if you please.

Only California could invent that one. And it tastes wonderful. The Chef and I know, we enjoyed it at the California Waldorf Festival — you will, too.

Measurements level; recipes for 6

STRAWBERRY PARFAIT

2 c. fresh California strawberries, rinsed, dried and sliced

2-3 c. sugar

1 tsp. grated lemon peel

1/2 tsp. lemon juice

1-1/2 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. allspice

1 tsp. cornstarch

1/2 c. chopped pitted dates

1 qt. vanilla ice cream

1 c. heavy cream, whipped

Combine strawberries and sugar in bowl; let stand at room temperature until syrup forms, about 2 hrs. Drain strawberries; reserve syrup.

In pt. saucepan, combine and mix reserved syrup, lemon peel, lemon juice, salt, allspice and cornstarch. Stir — cook over low heat about 3 min., until thickened and clear.

Cool slightly; stir in drained strawberries and dates to make a sauce. Refrigerate.

Spoon 1 tsp. sauce into 6 parfait glasses; add alternating a scoop of ice cream and the strawberry-date sauce, ending with sauce. Serve at once or re-freeze for later use. Garnish: whipped cream.

MONDAY DINNER

Chicken Bouillon

Topped with Small - Diced Avocado

Lamb Shanks with Lemon Juice in Rice Border

Buttered Beets with Chopped Fresh Mint

California Dessert Fruit Plates

Coffee or Tea Milk

LAMB SHANKS IN RICE BORDER

6 small lamb shanks

1 1/2 tsp. flour

1/4 tsp. garlic powder

1 tsp. mint flakes

1/4 tsp. ground rosemary

1 tsp. seasoned salt

3 tsp. cooking oil

1/4 c. chopped onion

1 qt. boiling water or beef stock

1 bay leaf

6 c. flaky rice

6 lemon wedges

Rub lamb shanks all over with mixture of flour, garlic powder, mint flakes, rosemary and seasoned salt. Heat oil in 10" fry-pan. Brown shanks all over in 1/2. Add onion and saute 3 min.

Pour in boiling water; add bay leaf.

Cover; simmer — boil until lamb is fork-tender and broth half-reduced. Remove bay leaf. Serve bordered with flaky rice. Garnish: lemon wedges.

TRICK OF THE CHEF

When lamb shanks are cooked, and ready to serve, douse them with 1/4 c. lemon juice for extra fine flavor.

Wedding Vows Pledged At Two Ring Ceremony

A pretty spring wedding was solemnized recently at the First Baptist Church, Charlottetown when Mary Lovelyn Delite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ewen MacNeill became the bride of Everett Frederick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Allen.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Malcolm Harlow.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of antique satin with portrait collar edged with applique lace. Her three-tiered shoulder length veil was held in place by a fabric rose. She carried a white Bible with a cascade of pink sweetheart roses.

Lorraine MacNeill, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She chose a pink acetate dress with lace bodice. Her headpiece was a matching pink bow, and she carried a nosegay of pink and white mums.

Barbara and Heather Stewart, nieces of the bride were flower girls in identical dresses of mauve and yellow peau de soie with matching hair bows and mitts. They carried nosegays of mauve and yellow mums.

Preston Allen, cousin of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Paul MacNeill, brother of the bride, and Claude Allen, brother of the groom.

The bride's mother chose a two-piece dress of Paris blue rayon acetate with over lace. She wore white accessories with a corsage of white carnations.

The mother of the groom chose a pink sheath dress of boucle over taffeta with white and black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Sharon MacNeill, sister of the bride, circulated the guest book.

The reception was held in the church hall where the bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake decorated with originality by Mrs. Francis Drake.

J. S. Walker, uncle of the bride, was master of ceremonies. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Harlow and responded to by the groom.

Local Assoc. To Show Film To Aid Guides

A meeting of the local association of the Montague Girl Guides was held recently at the home of Mrs. G. Warner under the chairmanship of Mrs. John Hughes, district commissioner for Kings County, with parents, guide and boronia leaders in attendance.

Mrs. George Inman, division commissioner, was also present. Mrs. Warner informed the group that guides and brownies are allowed to wear their full uniforms as soon as they join. Mrs. Warner also announced that four Montague guides would be attending division camp.

It was decided that the local association would sponsor a picture "Good Neighbor, Sam" to be held at Ye's Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, May 31st and June 1st and also that there would be a sale of candy as well as a sale of apples. The proceeds of this will help defray camp expenses for the Montague guides. Several other items of business were brought before the meeting and discussed after which refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Bob Ferguson and Mrs. Dave Clarkson.

MARY HAWORTH

Matron Feels Inadequate Among Educated Friends

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a very happily married young wife and mother, with so much to be thankful for. I feel socially insecure, however, simply because I don't have a college education.

I don't feel this way around my closest friends or family, or my workday associates, but just at social gatherings when confronted with roundtable discussions.

I have ideas on the subjects under discussion, but can't bring myself to contribute much, if anything. I admire the other contributors and think to myself: "They've all been to college and see, I haven't."

I'm not sure whether I feel this way most when amongst older persons, or just amongst women my age.

I've managed to take evening courses, but feel it might be more advantageous if I could study full time. Should I undertake a college education, if it would help me socially? Or is there any other way I can overcome this lack of self-confidence? E. D.

Dear E.D.: It's probably not the differences, such as they are, between your grab-bag of high school education and the college graduates' grab-bag of more extensive book learning that makes you feel outclassed in bull sessions.

The vital ingredient that they have in common, which you don't share, is the acquired social capacity for casual fraternization with all sorts and conditions of persons, with all degrees of mental proficiency, from boobish to brilliant, that is a traditional durable dividend of "going to college."

The person whose formal schooling ends with the receipt of his (or her) high school diploma is, in general, still a teenager, usually still attached, more or less, to parental leading strings.

For the average high school graduate, the next big step in life, outward and upward, figuratively, is either to get married or get a job, or to undertake both simultaneously. If he (or she) isn't going on to college. In which case, this boy or girl misses a whole chapter — indeed, we might say, a whole volume of further developmental social experience that the college student is being given.

Hence when the representatives of the two different approaches to the grown-up world meet later, in overlapping adult circles, the high school graduate (if sensitive, intuitive, intelligent, not brassy or brash) may feel indefinitely inadequate comparatively, in a free-wheeling exchange of ideas that old college grads are tossing around, as a carry-over from campus habit.

So please realize that you aren't necessarily culturally inferior to your college-trained friends of today. You might be their equal or better, as a civilized soul. Your sense of insecurity stems primarily from lack of seasoned group-living with fellow students, in late adolescence, apart from parents, in a familiar context of "chewing the fat," setting-up views and knocking them down just for the exercise.

It is that sort of social conditioning, that serves to add on layers of self-confidence, expertise, poise, etc., in prying or ignoring or defusing barbed criticism of one's ideas, which enables many an otherwise shy young matron to speak out in "meeting," as conviction requires. Or gives her courage to take on important committee chores, or to become a spokesman or leader for crucial causes.

However, in conclusion, perhaps I should remind that creative listening is a rare and precious talent to bring to group confabs. Better "listen with your eyes and hear with your heart" than try to orate, if you aren't bursting with a message to impart.

Furthermore — as a certain saint (his name escapes me), was wont to explain (it was his motto through life): "Silence is three-fourths of sanctity."

As to whether to go to college or get into active volunteer women's group work, to nurture self-confidence, my advice is, take your pick in the light of foregoing commentary. M.H.
