BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess)

A SILLY QUARREL

All quarrels silly are at best. But some more silly than the rest. —Old Mother Nature.

"Thief! Thief! Thief!" screamed Yellow-tail the Orapendula, the tropical cousin of Goldie the Oriole.

"Thief! Thief! Thief!" shrieked Mrs. Yellow-tail.

They were not screaming at each other; not calling each other such an unpleasant name as that. No indeed. It was someone else whom they were calling a thief, someone at whom they kept darting down as if to strike with their stout yellow bills. But they never did strike. They were doing their fighting with their tongues, not with their bills. A lot of folks do all their fighting that way. It isn't pleasant to other folks, but no one gets hurt.

Farmer Brown's boy chuckled as he listened. He was on his way to the very garden in which they were shrieking so excitedly. "They make me think of Sammy Jay at home when he is calling someone names," said he. "I wonder what they are so excited about, and whom they are calling names, and why."

If he had been where he could see down in among the stalks of growing corn above which Mr. and Mrs. Yellow-tail were flying back and forth as they screamed, and among which they darted out of sight for an instant every now and then, I am sure that for a moment at least he would have thought that somehow or other an old Green Forest friend of his had also come down to the Land-of-always-summer to spend the winter. There, looking up and growling and snarling at the two birds was the living image of Bobby Coon. He wore a mask across his face, a black mask, just as Bobby does. He wore rings on his tail just as Bobby does. He was Bobby by Coon's tropical cousin and a true Racoan in looks in habits and in love of tender sweet corn than which there is nothing Bobby is more fond of in his season.

"Thief! Thief! Thief!" screamed Yellow-tail darting down at Bobby Coon's cousin, but taking care not to get within reach of the latter. "Thief! Thief! Thief!" shrieked Mrs. Yellow-tail, swooping down from the opposite side but also taking care not to go too near.

"No such thing. It is mine," growled the ring-tailed scamp on the ground.

"Thieves yourselves," snarled Bobby Coon's cousin. He stopped tearing the green husks from an ear of milky white corn long enough to glare up at his noisy tormentors.

"This corn is ours!" screamed Yellow-tail.

"No such thing. It is mine," growled the ring-tailed scamp on the ground.

"We found it first!" shrieked Mrs. Yellow-tail.

Bobby Coon's cousin made no reply. He stood up on his hind legs. He reached as high as he could, took hold of a stalk tightly with his black hands, pulled it over until it broke, then tore from it the ear of corn it bore.

Mr. and Mrs. Yellow-tail screamed then.

"If this is your corn come and get it," snarled he of the black mask and the ringed tail. "Why don't you?" he added.

There was a very good reason why they didn't, the very best of reasons—they were afraid of it. They knew those black hands, and those sharp teeth, tearing the husks of that ear of corn open could and would do the same to them if given a chance. They were careful not to give that chance. They contented themselves with fighting with their tongues, stopping now and then to themselves tear open an ear of corn and eat a few of the white, milky grains, spilling a whole ear for the little eaten, then doing the same to another ear.

Contract Bridge

TOO GULLIBLE

When an experienced declarer invites a certain play by the defense, it is only common sense for the defender to decline the invitation! Observe West's extreme naivete in the following deal.

West dealer. Both sides vulnerable.

Bridge hand diagram showing cards in each hand: West (4, 4KJ10, 874, 4K10, 95), North (86, 87543, 32, J632), South (J1053, 4A9, 4AQ, 109, 84), East (4AKQ87, Q2, 4K65, A7).

The bidding:

Bidding table: West Pass, North Pass, East Pass, South Pass.

West dutifully led the diamond eight to East's bids of that suit; East put up the ace and shifted to the eight of clubs. Declarer went right in with the ace—and he made a very peculiar play from dummy on this trick, namely, the club jack! South then led the club seven, and West, who apparently had never heard about "looking gift horses in the mouth," did exactly as South had hoped. With as silly quarrels do, and all quarrels are silly. It ended only when the owner of the garden appeared with Farmer Brown's boy who had come to see that garden. Mr. and Mrs. Yellow-tail took to their wings and Bobby Coon's cousin took to his black heels. "You see now why we can't raise corn here," said the owner of it ruefully. Tommy did.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quote
