Paine's Celery Compound Renewed His Life.

Farmer Smye says: "I am a Living Witness."

Mr. George J. Smye, farmer, of Sheffield, Ont., writes as follows: "It is with great pleasure that I testify to the value of your great medicine, Paine's Celery Compound."

The proprietors of Paine's Celery Compound have on file thousands of such strong and convincing testimonials from the best people in Canada.

No other medicine in the world could have met the requirements of Mr. Smye, as Paine's Celery Compound did. Sufferers such as Mr. Smye endured are not conquered by the common sarsaparilla, nervines and pills that are presented to the public for the ill of life. Mr. Smye had made a trial of the majority of these advertised remedies before he heard of Paine's Celery Compound, and they failed to cure him.

The great medicine, Paine's Celery Compound, is as far apart from the guesswork remedies advertised as black is from white. In the judgment of able physicians, the great medicine is the triumph of the century.

If you are convinced that your condition of health demands the use of Paine's Celery Compound, avoid substitutes and the "something just as good" that many dealers recommend for the sake of profit.

English military men are endeavoring to determine whether the bullet for their new service rifle, the Lee-Metford, which has taken the place of the Martini-Henry, is not actually too merciful in its action.

The object of war is to disable the enemy, and not to kill him, but apparently the new rifle bullet fails to do either. The report on the use of the projectile in the Transvaal says that the injuries which were made by the Lee-Netford were much cleaner and healed much more quickly than those from the Martini-Henry.

Both the entrance and exit orifices were exceedingly small, and so clean were the wounds internally that in one instance a burgher who had been shot clean through the lungs was convalescent a few days after admission to the hospital. It is true that where the bone is struck, the effect is most violent, but the perforation of the organs and fleshy part of the body by the new bullet more often than not absolutely fails instantly to disable the victim, unless, of course, a really vital organ of the body is struck.

The wounds, on the other hand, which were made by the Martini-Henry bullets, were the reports of a much more serious nature, namely, "lurch, jagged, slow healing, with bad entrance and slow exit." Many instances were related of the merciful properties of the new English bullet during the Chitral campaign, and this latest report is likely to give greater emphasis to the question.

Not only does the bullet fail to stop a man, but, judging by many accounts, it inflicts very little pain, presumably on the same principle as the popular scientific experiment which shows a rabbit peacefully chewing its food while a rapidly revolving knife is cutting its ears into ribbons. The horrors of the next great war perhaps will not be so great as some people imagine.

RHEUMATISM Its Cause and Cure. A poisonous Acid in the Blood, which needs removal. Only one means for a radical cure.

Rheumatism is a blood disease, due to the presence of uric acid—a poison—in the system, and it is only by the removal of this pain-producing poison, that a radical cure can be effected. Acute rheumatism is hereditary, and thus it is that young children are often victims to this torture. The use of liniments, embrocations, and other local applications, may give temporary relief, but can never cure, for the poison is in the blood, and until it is expelled, rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgic pains will continue.

Scott's Sarsaparilla cures rheumatism by removing the cause—by neutralizing and expelling this poisonous acid. In chronic cases, this medicine reaches the source of the disease as no other medicine can. It gives renewed energy to the organs that sustain life, the forces that make the blood. For the nervous troubles of youth, for the debility that precedes old age, for ladies in their severe ordeals, it is without a competitor.

Scott's Sarsaparilla is a concentrated compound of the finest medicines known to modern medical science. The dose is from one half to one teaspoonful and during its use the ordinary vocations are not interfered with.

EACH HIS OWN TELESCOPE.

Wonderful Powers of Vision of a Tribe of African Bushmen.

There is a race of men who can see as far with the naked eye as an ordinary man can with a telescope.

These human telescopes have defied their extraordinary power of vision, according to Herbert Spencer, through necessity. If it were not for this they might long ago have become extinct.

The white man stared until his eyes ached, but he could make out nothing. Thinking that the native must have made a mistake, he insisted on going forward, though his companion urged him to retreat.

When they had advanced a little further the Bushman again came to a halt and absolutely refused to go on another step, for, as he explained, he could distinguish not only a lion, but also a number of cubs. It would be dangerous, he said, to tamper with a lioness while nursing her little ones.

The European, however, still unable to see a lion, much less the cubs, pushed on boldly. When he had advanced a quarter of a mile he saw an object moving slowly along in the distance from the point to which the Bushman had directed his gaze.

Still doubting that a human being could possess such marvelous power of vision, he approached nearer and finally distinguished the form of a lioness making leisurely for a line of forest.

The result of a man's power of vision is established by necessity. If our existence depended on our ability to see twice as far as we do this additional power would be acquired by practice.

Decay of "Leather Stocking" fame, superseded by one by his long-sightedness. Presumably he would see further than those Bushmen, but he was a fiction character. All woodsmen, and as a general rule, all persons living an outdoor life, give their eyes practice at long range, which ultimately makes their accuracy of sight seem wonderful to a man who never uses his eyes except to read.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

To Preserve Flowers. Professor Pfitzer in the Journal of the Austrian Pharmaceutical Society gives the following method for preserving flowers, so that they retain their natural color and shape.

We quote an abstract from the National Druggist: "Molsten, 1,000 parts of fine white sand that has been dried and sifted, with a solution consisting of three parts of stearin, three parts of paraffin, three parts of salicylic acid, and 100 parts of alcohol. Work the sand thoroughly so that every grain of it is impregnated with the mixture, and then spread it out and let it become perfectly dry. To use, place the flowers in a suitable box, the bottom of which has been covered with a portion of the prepared sand, and then dust the latter over them until the interstices have been completely filled with it. Close the box lightly, and put in a place where it can be maintained at a temperature of from thirty to forty degrees C. for two or three days. At the expiration of this time remove the box and let the sand escape. The flowers can then be put into suitable receptacles or glass cases without fear of deterioration. Flowers that have become wilted or withered before preparation should have their color freshened up by dipping into a suitable aniline solution."

Without God. Without God heaven would be no heaven. With Him, heaven is not first a locality, but wherever one is in His presence there is the heavenly life. Not heaven in its fulness, but the first elements of the heavenly life. In entering then, into His presence, here and now amid our daily common interests we have entered into a spiritual kingdom where so far as we live in sympathy with it there is perfect spiritual harmony.

With perfect service is the perfect freedom; where the will of the one great loving Spirit is evidently so reasonable, so just and so true that any one who is in sympathy with the heavenly life acts in harmony with it as if it were his own will.—Bishop Lawrence.

Rat Trapped by a Clam. A Portland man had his attention called, a day or two ago, to a loud noise in an adjoining room, where several barrels of clams were stored, and on investigation discovered a rat attempting to escape from a barrel about two-thirds full of clams. Attached to the rat's tail was a large clam, and all efforts to shake off the unwelcome appendage failed. As Mr. Pellett entered the room the rat jumped from the barrel, but the head of the barrel being without hoops, the rat fell upside down between two of the staves, and with his ratish lung, firmly held by his tormentor, who wasn't saying a word, but was shut up "just like a clam." The rat's head hung down for some minutes before Mr. Pellett ended the struggle with a blow.

NERVOUS Troubles are due to impoverished blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the One True Blood Purifier and NERVE TONIC.

Sir Henry Irving once entered a train at King's Cross, London. After putting his traveling bag on the rail he found that four passengers already occupied the four corners of the coach, and had appropriated the rest of the seats for their portmanteaux. As no one moved, Sir Henry continued to stand, holding on to the hat rail. After a while, however, the passengers suddenly began to move his luggage from the seat, seeing which Sir Henry remarked in his blandest tone: "Oh, please don't let me disturb you; I'm getting out at Scotland Yard."

"Why Some Succeed"

The shrewd advertiser is the one who knows how, when and where to advertise. The merchants who advertise in THE EXAMINER are not the men to make mistakes, as you can see for yourself. But you may get the benefit of their experience by watching how, when and where they advertise. Some papers pay advertisers, some do not. Only a few pay, and they can be picked out by the large amount of advertising they do.

Boils

It is often difficult to convince people their blood is impure, until dreadful carbuncles, abscesses, boils, scrofulous salt rheum, are painful proof of the fact. It is wise, however, or whenever there is any indication of blood, to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and prevent such eruptions and suffering. If I had a dreadful carbuncle abscess, red, fiery, fierce and sore. The doctor attended me over seven weeks. When the abscess broke, the pains were terrible, and I thought I should not live through it. I heard and read so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I decided to take it, and my husband, who was suffering with boils, took it also. It soon purified our built me up and restored my health so that, although the doctor said I would not be able to work hard, I have since done the heaviest work. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured my husband of the boils, and we regard it a wonderful medicine." Mrs. ANNA PATTERSON, Latimer, Kansas.
