Give Everything a Chance.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—It is now the 8th of August, and not a (I intended using the words 'solitary' duck, but I like to be strictly exact and just, and I am told a few Rachael-like ducks are heard quacking around the ridges, mourning for the broods that are not) flock of ducks to be seen in any marsh within twenty miles or thereabouts from Charlottetown. This may appear strange, and perhaps a little surprising to those who are under the impression that a game law existed here regulating the time for the commencement of the duck shooting to the 15th or 20th of August. No doubt those few are misinformed, as some leading men on the Bench and in the Bar, tho' national pursuers and makers of law, have been out duck shooting. The hunting propensities of their forefather's strongly impressed in them nothing of the pot hunter about them, characterized by their British manly love of field sports and fairplay. "Give everything a chance" is their motto, especially in shooting parlance; and they act up to their principles squarely. Why, before English dogs and improved breech-loaders were imported, in the good old days of the old flint piece, our sportsmen might be seen, about the middle of June, along the edge of the woods, an old flint in one hand and a basket in the other, hunting for wild ducks' nests; and they seldom allowed any eggs to escape, so quick were they with hand and eye; and if they missed the old duck on the nest with the first grab, they lay hidden in the bushes till she flew around again, and lit on the forsaken nest, when the old drum-bass went off, and so did the duck; but a skilful shot generally secured the whole family. This was hardly giving the ducks a chance, and, truly, was duck shooting in its infancy. "Temora Mutantur." Our Nimrods of the present day, wait a month longer. They believe in the old Saxon proverb, "Give everything a chance;" and so about the middle of July, with English dogs, a brave or two (they call them setters, ignorant countrymen like myself would call them catches) and the "latest gnap action" guns invest the marshes, where the little ducks, greatly enjoy their strange, new existence, flap around the ponds—mark the difference in this modern duck shooting. If the keen and perhaps somewhat excited sportsman missed with both barrels as they run along the grass, and if the impartial dog are lazy and can't catch them—if neither shot nor caught—they certainly have the chance of diving down in the pond, if they reach it, and holding on for dear life to the bottom; and have a chance to escape if they do not hold on too long, which is generally bad for them. I do not intend to make myself the apologist for unlawful shooting, but fair play is fair play, and if our sportsmen do not shoot before the law allows, and if they give the birds a fair chance that is all that is required; and I merely write this letter to correct the general impression that they are breaking the law or come under the general designation of pot-hunters.
Yours, etc.,
COUNTRYMAN.

PRINCE COUNTY.

Showing the White Feather.

The Grit party in this County are showing signs not only of weakness and disaffection, but also of being utterly demoralized. When spoken to on the subject of the candidates, a leading Grit will exclaim: "Oh, Yeo and Perry are not our men. We are going to get out better men than these. Howlan and George Sinclair will be our candidates. Now, is this not the most transparent humbug! We have the authority of Hon. Senator Howlan for stating that he does not intend to be a candidate at the coming election; that he has no sympathy whatever with the Grits, and, further, that he will use every means in his power to secure the return of Messrs. Hackett and Howatt. How could it be otherwise? The Grits might as well put forward Mr. Pope as their man. No man who is not in sympathy with the Davies-Stewart combination can at all support the candidates put forth by the same clique in this County. We have reason to believe that Mr. George Sinclair, also, has no sympathy with the Grit cause, as represented here by Messrs. Yeo and Perry. How, then, are the Grits going to get Howlan and Sinclair to run in their interests, instead of Yeo and Perry? The Grits must think very little of the men they have now in the field, when they wish—like a jockey with a worthless horse—to "swap" at every opportunity. They can have no hope of succeeding when they want to "trade candidates" at this juncture. The maxim, "Never swap horses in crossing a stream," appears to be ignored altogether by the Grits. They imagine that they can swap candidates as easily as Mr. Yeo swaps oxen. This talk of getting out other men instead of Yeo and Perry is all moonshine. No man possessing a particle of honor or judgment will accept a nomination from the Grits of this count. They must stick to Yeo and Perry, even though certain defeat stares them in the face. Yeo and Perry have not been asked by anybody to become candidates, it is true, but then they have the approval of Messrs. Davies, Stewart and Calhoun, and the Grit voters must accept them. Davies and Stewart know who should represent the electors of Prince County better than the voters themselves do. It is, therefore, unnecessary that anybody outside of the Local Government clique should be consulted in regard to the Grit candidates for Prince County.—S. P.

Miscellaneous News.

Twenty bishops attended a soiree given by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts.

Don't laugh too much; it's only the cog-wheel that can always afford to show its teeth.

The London Queen says that the demand of the time is for women who can teach women.

Dom Pedro has given $2,000 from his private purse to aid Brazilian music students in Europe.

Lord Dufferin arrived in New York on Wednesday and is a guest at the Manhattan Beach Hotel.

The London Examiner believes that among women matrimony has become a legitimate profession.

Mr. Tennyson, it is rumored, is busy upon a new volume of lyrical poems, which will soon make its appearance.

Mr. Wirt Sikes, United States Consul at Cardiff, is preparing a book on the legends, myths, fairy tales, and folk-lore of Wales.

Lord Beaconsfield is said to be a convert to the doctrines of Hahnemann, and employs a homoeopathist as his private physician.

The Shah sent telegrams in cipher every day from the Grand Hotel, Paris, the cost of which amounted generally to $450. It is not known for which paper he writes.

The Edinburgh Scotsman's London correspondent says it is reported that Lord Dufferin will probably be requested to go to Asia Minor as British Commissioner.

Dr. Hayes, the Arctic Explorer, is a guest of Mr. James Gordon Bennett, at Newport, R. I. His visit is supposed to have something to do with the North Pole Expedition.

Thomas Carlyle, speaking of Lord Beaconsfield, lately said: "Either he has bewitched the Queen, or the Queen has bewitched him, or they have bewitched each other."

The Sultan of Morocco has presented the Emperor William with ten fine Barbary horses. They are of different colors and breeds, rather small in build, and will be used solely for riding purposes.

Lord Dunraven is again in New York. He says the appointment of the Marquis of Lorne as Lord Dufferin's successor in the Governor-Generalship of Canada was talked of a year before it was announced.

The New York World says Mr. James Gordon Bennett is negotiating for the purchase of the Union Dime Savings Bank building, 32nd street and Broadway, for the Herald and Telegram. It is valued at half a million dollars.

Prince Gortschakoff, in spite of his eighty-one years, is said to be very vain. He was extremely anxious about making a favourable impression on the artist Werner, when the latter was taking preliminary sketches of the delegates for his picture of the Congress. The veteran statesman, almost with one foot in the grave, was nervous and fidgety at the sitting, and kept moving from side to side, in order to be shown to the best advantage.

The Pope, says a correspondent at Rome, is at his writing table by 8 o'clock, and remains there sometimes six hours. All the reports from the State Office and other congregations pass under his review; he never signs a paper without first understanding all its meaning. This close application is telling on his health. He has grown thin, weak, cannot sleep nor eat. At last he has been prevailed upon to drive out daily in a carriage; to take an airing in the fine, spacious Vatican gardens.

Lieutenant Lucien Napoleon Bonaparte Wye, of the French Navy, chief of the French expedition for surveying the proposed site of the ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama, is now in New York. He is preparing his final report in favour of the northern route beginning at Acanti. Lieutenant Wise is the youngest son of the late Sir Thomas Wise, British Ambassador to Greece, and the Princess Letitia Bonaparte, daughter of Lucien Bonaparte, a younger brother of Napoleon I.

A prominent and officious supporter of Mr. Cartwright was going down street last Thursday, and seeing a farmer driving along the street, accosted him, when a short conversation ensued, to wit: Officious supporter: "Got your barley in?" Farmer: "Well, yes, some of it." O. S.: "What's it like?" Farmer: "Oh, it's a clear grit crop." O. S.: "Ha, ha, how's that?" Farmer: "Humph, it didn't turn out near as good as it promised." The officious supporter looked uncertain for half a minute, while he weighed the answer, and finding it exactly measured, his party, he looked sour and forgot his "manners" sufficiently to turn away and post off without another word.—Napanee Standard.

Gambetta and Waddington have not quarrelled. When they met in Paris after the close of the Berlin Congress, one did not reproach nor did the other lose his temper. The Minister read the statement he had prepared, and other documents on his mission to Berlin. The visitor listened in silence. Probably thinking that silence meant disapproval, the Minister said: "You seem disposed to blame me," or something to that effect. "No," replied Gambetta, "I only listen. I do not take upon myself to blame. I am merely watching for a passage which might find an echo." Gambetta sarcastically observed, however, that it appeared to him the French Envoy had been made to carve at the Congress the joint off which the others had dined.
