World Statesmen Give Educational Requirements

American youth needs less personal comfort, less movies and television, and more communal spirit, in the opinion of Premier David Ben Gurion of Israel. He is one of seven statesmen whose views on educational requirements for the 21st century are reported in the current (May) issue of Parents' Magazine.

"We all need more emphasis upon human values, more emphasis upon spiritual values, not merely technology and comfort," Premier Ben Gurion asserted. "We need to develop a sense of world community, of the human community, of belonging to the great cosmic community, perhaps unknown but nevertheless there."

The seven leaders, representing new and emerging nations of the Middle East, Asia and Africa, were almost unanimous in their feeling that, in addition to scientific education, children in this country as well as their own need to develop moral and spiritual values and a sense of world community. They were asked in a recent series of interviews by Professor Leonard S. Kenworthy of Brooklyn College to give their advice to American parents and teachers on the kind of education that will prepare boys and girls in school today for their lives in the 21st century.

"Unless we develop the family spirit, the art of tolerating each other, declared Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India, "we will not fit into this new world. There is great variety and diversity in the world and that makes for its richness and worth. We do not need to make everybody like ourselves. At the same time we need to realize the large number of common features among human beings."

Moral education for all children everywhere was also stressed by Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana. "Scientific training without a moral background will be worthless, even dangerous," he said.

The other leaders questioned by Professor Kenworthy were President Habib Ben Ali Bourguiba of Tunisia, President Ngo Dinh Diem of Viet Nam, former Prime Minister U Nu of Burma, and King Mohammed V of Morocco.

YOUR CHILD MAY HAVE WORMS

1 OUT OF 3 DOES!
Fidgeting, nose-picking and a tormenting rectal itch are often tell-tale signs of Pin-Worms or Round-Worms... ugly parasites that medical experts say infect one out of every three persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of these ugly pests, they must be killed in the intestines where they live and multiply. And clinical tests have proved that JAYNE'S Liquid Vermifuge kills both Pin-Worms and Round-Worms quickly and easily. Then they are expelled from the system in a normal manner and you are free of them.

JAYNE'S LIQUID VERMIFUGE has a pleasant, fruity taste. Children love it—take it without fuss or fret. Remember, Pin-Worms and Round-Worms are highly contagious and can spread through the whole family.

So, at the first sign of worms, be sure to ask your druggist for JAYNE'S LIQUID VERMIFUGE.

MR. AND MRS. BLOIS MacPHAIL

The Church Of Scotland Has A Beautiful Wedding

The Church of Scotland, Charlottetown, was the scene of a pretty wedding when Edith Louise daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell, Hampton, became the bride of Blois Murchison MacPhail, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor MacPhail, Meadowbank Rev. J.H. Bishop performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her street length gown of nylon net over taffeta, featuring a lace bodice with Peter Pan collar.

Her elbow length veil was held in place by a bandeau. She carried a bouquet of red roses with streamers of rose buds.

Miss Trudi Hickox, friend of the bride, as bridesmaid, was gowned in powder blue nylon net over taffeta. Her headdress was a matching headband, and she carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

Mr. Norman MacPhail, brother of the groom, was best man. Immediately following the ceremony a dinner was served to the wedding party at the Queen Hotel. For a honeymoon trip to the States and Toronto, the bride wore a box-styled turquoise suit with white accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations. Senator Javits Urges Support For Child Care

Three million children in the United States under six years of age have mothers who work outside their homes. If these preschool children are to receive adequate day care and supervision, a program of Federal support for child care centers is needed, Senator Jacob K. Javits (R., N.Y.) recommends in the current (May) issue of Parents' magazine.

Senator Javits is the sponsor of the Day Care Assistance Act, now before Congress, which calls for annual grants to assist in providing facilities and services for children needing such care outside their homes. It would make this care available not only to children of working mothers, but also to children requiring special attention because they are mentally or physically handicapped or lacking adequate home care.

Government programs like the aid to Dependent Children program, designed to keep needy children in their own homes as much as possible, are insufficient, particularly in the face of the rising cost of living, Senator Javits declares. The average monthly payment per family in the Aid to Dependent Children program is $105; the widow of a veteran with two children receives as little as $122 monthly. Many women, therefore, have to seek employment to supplement these subsistence payments, the Senator states.

The importance of Federal aid for day care centers is already being recognized by Congress in supporting the Atomic Energy Commission facilities at Oak Ridge and Los Alamos and in local housing projects financed by the Public Housing Administration. Similar Federal programs of support were undertaken during the depression and war years when young mothers in the greatest numbers were in the labor force.

In sponsoring this legislation, Sen. Javits stresses he does not advocate that mothers of young children be encouraged to work, but many of these mothers have no other choice. "To turn our backs on this fact," the Senator says, "is to do a disservice to our national future."

GLOVER-GAUDET WEDDING

The Church of the Holy Family, Kensington, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Audrey Clare Gaudet, R.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Gaudet, Summerside, and Mr. John Gerald Glover, son of Mr.

and Mrs. Robert Glover, Spring Valley, were united in marriage. The Reverend Emanuel Richard performed the double ring ceremony and the Reverend Louis Callaghan officiated at the Nuptial Mass.
