The marriage of Miss Maggie M. Wood and Mr. James W. Judson was solemnized last evening at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Philip Wood, of Alexandria. Rev. G. W. Simpson performed the ceremony. The bride looked charming in a dress of white organdie, and carried a bouquet of orange blossoms. The bridesmaid was Miss Janie E. Judson, sister of the groom, who wore pink organdie. After the ceremony about sixty guests sat down to a sumptuous repast, after which several hours were pleasantly passed in games and pastimes. The popularity of the contracting parties was evidenced by the many handsome and valuable wedding presents.

In the window of Watson's Drugstore last night were tables giving the returns from the polling stations throughout the Island. This was a great convenience to citizens. In many instances the returns were shown here before those in the Market Hall or the Lyceum had received them.

The casualties in the Gloucester fleet during the fishing year just ended comprise six fishing schooners, one small steamer and 35 men who left seven wives and 20 children, about one third of the latter being adults. The average annual loss of men for the past 25 years has been about 100.

Mr. James and his assistants in the telegraph office did everything in their power to facilitate the obtaining of election news last night. The office was kept open until well into the morning, and information was freely and promptly supplied. Mr. Reid and his assistants in the telephone office also did everything in their power to procure news, keeping the office open until a late hour. To both establishments THE EXAMINER is indebted for courtesies extended.

The basket social at Fort Augustus was a grand success. All the baskets sold well, was especially those which were named after Messrs McKinnon and Martin. The proceeds of the sale soon mounted up to over $150. The musical programme contained many select pieces which were well rendered by several members of the choir. The singing of Messrs David and William Macdonald, and the recitation of Miss Maggie Laverty, teacher, elicited round after round of applause.

When the Kildonan Castle was leaving on Wednesday, October 20, it was discovered that a baby was missing, says the London Daily Mail. Neither the baby nor its nurse was forthcoming. Finally a telegram came to say that the nurse had missed a train, but was coming on by the next. The question was, would the baby arrive in time? Its distracted mother sought out Colonel Stacpole with tears in her eyes. She was, she said, bound to sail, and it was impossible to leave a six-months old baby behind. Col. Stacpole said it was a serious thing to detain the greatest transport Her Majesty had afloat. Still, with a baby in the case, something must be done. So the process of "closing up" the embarkation was proceeded with more slowly, and in due time the baby came. It was a charming infant, and the tender-hearted Col. Stacpole himself restored it in triumph to its tearful mother. Directly afterwards the gallant Colonel was photographed with the baby in his arms to commemorate the event.

There is some ground for the belief that the machine was at work in this Province. The immense vote polled in West Queen's is significant. However this may be, it is quite certain that, at some of the polls there was a shortage of ballots. At South Rustico, for instance, twenty-six voters could not exercise their right of franchise on this account.
