—NARROW ESCAPE.—There was a wild runaway at Summerside Thursday morning, when a two-horse team easily made a record of over half a mile. They started from Holman's wharf and after careening madly up Spring Street crossed the school baseball grounds and made for the open country. Although handicapped by the heavy truck wagon they were obliged to pull up at the fence on the north side of the third field. Neither wagon or horses appear to have suffered any particular injury.

—WEDDING BELLS A quiet but important event took place at the Methodist Parsonage at Summerside when Mr. Lawrence Junction N. B., was united in marriage to Miss Eva Louise Elliot, one of the most popular young ladies of Shediac, Rev. George Morris officiated at the ceremony. Mr. Powell is the general agent of the Canadian National Railway at Paines Junction, to which place the happy couple returned to make their home after a brief tour through the Maritime Provinces.

—RECITAL ENJOYED A very enjoyable violin recital was given on Thursday night in the Y. M. C. A. Hall at Summerside by the pupils of Mrs. R. P. Richardson. There was a good attendance, despite the most inclement weather. The recital proceeded to the kindly devoted to the improvement of the hall. Mr. H. H. Simpson ably presided. Miss S. Cannon accompanied the pupils on the piano and Miss Rena Linkletter favored the audience with two vocal solos, with violin obligato by Mr. J. Wright. Some of Mrs. Richardson's pupils are quite small, but they show much of an aptitude for very careful and expert training. The full class selections, of which two were given were very effective. The pupils taking solo, duo, and trio parts, all on the violin were as follows: solos, Miss Doris Woodside, Master Bruce Calbeck, Miss Marjorie Crozier, Miss Rosamond Richardson, Master Roy Smallman, Miss Nina McEwen, Miss Marie Gau, Miss B. Smallman, Miss Helen Rogers and Miss Kathleen McLellan; duos, Miss Richardson and Miss Gaudet, Master and Miss Smallman, Miss Gaudet and Miss Smallman and Master Smallman. Mr. Simpson, on behalf of the directors of the Y. M. C. A., sincerely thanked Rev. J. J. McDonnell for the loan of chairs and the ladies who so kindly helped by selling tickets and decorating the hall. God Save the King.

RADIO SEARCHLIGHT WILL PENETRATE 100 MILES THROUGH FOG AND DARK.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A radio searchlight which will cut the rough fog and darkness for a distance of 100 miles and rob the sea of its terrors is the momentous announcement made here by Guglielmo Marconi.

He said that by means of his radio searchlight, which can be reflected like light waves, he can send in a given direction in one great beam a huge light that otherwise would be scattered to all points of the compass. With the aid of a revolving reflector, he added, the transmitter would serve as a radio lighthouse to guide ships far off perilous coasts.

No matter how thick the fog or how dark the night, this revolving searchlight, Marconi averred, would make the long stretch as bright as day. The sending of radio waves in the one direction, instead of scattering them broadcast, would accomplish the seeming miracle.

By means of one of these reflectors, he said, song and ships may be reproduced 200 times louder than with ordinary radio devices and there would be no distortings in transit.

Marconi's searchlight is an arrangement of wires or towers, or masts, lit like the searchlights on battleships.

TO ELIMINATE SADNESS

CONSTANTINOPLE.—June 27.—A radical change in the national music of the Armenian people is being planned by the native teachers who are in charge of the educational work of the orphanages in the Armenian Soviet Republic. They purpose to eliminate the "note of sadness and submission," and substitute a more joyous spirit, according to L. Ray Ogden, Oakland, Cal., superintendent of the American Industrial School where 2,000 Armenian orphans are learning native trades. "Many generations of suppression and persecution have left an indelible impress on the popular music and folk songs of the Armenian people," said Mr. Ogden recently. "The native dances, poems and plays are all in a distinctly minor key which is bound to have a depressing effect on the youth of the country. But with the dawn of a new freedom this note of sadness ought to be changed, so far as possible, into a spirit of inspiration and enthusiasm. In the schools, we have agreed to eliminate some of the most depressing of the national folk-songs, replacing them with other national music revived from the ancient songs of the shepherds and farmers."

Letter From England

From Chester we proceeded to Bath, called upon an old lady relative and friend of friends in Charlottetown, and inspected the "baths," into the warm water of which we dipped our hands, as the Romans of old did in the first and second centuries. Bath is beautifully situated in the Valley of the Avon and on the slopes of the surrounding hills. It is said to be unequalled among English Provincial towns for its combination of archaeological historic, scenic, and social interest. From Bath we went into Hereford. As in Chester, so in Hereford the Cathedral is the chief object of interest. The See of Hereford dates from the Seventh Century, and the church connected with it remains—restored and architecturally improved from time to time—a great and splendid edifice. Equally grand, and at some points of even greater excellence is the Cathedral in Gloucester. The Cloisters connected with Gloucester Cathedral with their delicate tracery and pinnacles, are believed to be the finest in the world, and they are certainly the finest in the kingdom.

Then there is Exeter Cathedral, also a very splendid church, well known by at least one of the citizens of Charlottetown. Approached from the High Street by the narrow St. Martin's (or Luxury) Lane, an unobstructed view of the great edifice is suddenly and unexpectedly opened up. Inside as well as outside it, too, is grand beyond description—though the beauty of its chancel roof, as that of Gloucester, has been marred by the great organ which has been erected over the Rude Screen.

Massive towers, built by the Normans, dignify and adorn all these Cathedrals. Inside and outside they are surrounded by memorials of men and women who did their work for the Church and whose works do follow them. It was interesting to note on these old monuments the names of many of the men and women familiar to all readers of The Guardian. Dodd

Pope, Beer, Holman, Horne, Baker, Oliver, Motherwell, Gay, Peake, Williams, Heard, etc., not to mention the Smith's, Jones and Robinsons. These names show whence came a number of the men and women, who have contributed to the wealth and improvement of our Island Province; and seem to prove the truth of Wordsworth's declaration that we, as the people of the British Isles at large, "are all of Earth's first blood." To walk upon the footpaths and alleys that our fathers and mothers trod in the ages past, and over stones worn by the feet of Kings and Princes, and to see the foot of the noble and peasant, is apt to touch the sentimental feelings of even the most stolid and unimpressible.

At Plymouth we ended our journey Southward. The chief glory of Plymouth is "The Hoe" overlooking "the Hoe" round" it was on the Hoe that Drake played bowls while the Spanish Armada approached the shores of England. The Hoe is now a free public park and pleasure ground, the chief ornaments of which are a colossal statue of Drake and the splendid monument by which the Tercentenary of the defeat of the Armada was commemorated. In Plymouth there is a fine old church—the Church of St. Andrew—described as the "chief link with antiquity" that the city possesses. It is the church in which Roderic of Aragon returned thanks; the church in which the Elizabethan heroes worshipped, the church whence the congregation swarmed to the shore to welcome Drake, and where the Puritans of the Commonwealth swore to uphold the Solemn League and Covenant. Restored and improved from time to time, St. Andrew is still a very fine church. It is indeed "a link with antiquity" and full of interest to the student of the past.

Prorogation Likely To be Delayed

OTTAWA, June 24.—The parliamentary session would be ready to wind up in a blaze of glory about next Thursday or Friday, if the troublesome question of freight rates could be adjusted. The repeated meetings of the special committee to consider report, and the delay in bringing it into the House, suggest a desire to avoid a threatened deadlock. Strong efforts are being exerted today to bridge the gap and effect some unity of action and a new proposition is talked of, if this can be accomplished and a deadlock in the House avoided, the session will wind up expeditiously. If not the outlook is nebulous. Liberal members had a caucus, and were informed that the balance of the program is very slight. The budget is through, save for the formal bill. Main estimates are through, also the Wheat Board and the Lake of the Woods bill. Supplementary estimates will be down today.

Coal In China

The quantity of coal in China is estimated by experts at over one million tons—sufficient to supply the whole world for a thousand years to come at the present rate of consumption.

Brother and Sister Meet After 45 Years

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 24.—Peter McKeown, of 45 Warren street, Boston, and his sister, Margaret J. McKeown, of Norton, N.B., met here last evening after 45 years, during which neither had seen nor heard of the other. The family belonged to St. John's. After the great fire of 1877 Peter went to sea and roamed the globe. A few days ago he returned to seek the sister he had left a brown haired girl. She was located living in Norton.

Eldridge, Canada's favorite Phrenologist and Psychologist guarantees to tell you all about yourself and what you wish to know. 30 years before the public. Located this week, Friday and Saturday at 153 Prince Street. Hours 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Low fee for ladies $1.00 and $2.00. Everything is private and confidential. Standing in "The Barbican" in Plymouth, I copied the following inscription on a brass plate affixed to the stone wall close to the spot whence the Pilgrim Fathers embarked: "On the 6th of September, 1620, in the Mayorality of Thomas Fowles, after being kindly entertained and courteously used by divers friends there dwelling, The Pilgrim Fathers sailed from Plymouth in the 'The Mayflower' in the Providence of God to settle in New Plymouth and to lay the foundation of New England. This tablet was erected in the Mayorality of F. G. Bond, 1891, to commemorate their departure and the visit to Plymouth in July of that year of a number of their descendants and representatives." Plymouth is not only historic, it is in every respect a city of the future. It is still one of the most prominent of the naval and military strongholds, of the British Empire. The country through which the train passed in our trip from Wales to the South of England and again from Plymouth to Kinsderrone Lake, is just now full of the perfume of the hawthorn. Hedges white with blossoms divide fields, large and small, in every direction and noble trees give shade to the sheep on the distant hills and the browsing cattle on the lowlands near by. A vivid green covers the whole land excepting only those parts recently ploughed; and there the P. E. is lazier is delighted to see the good red soil, just as it is at home. With its grand dwelling places and lowly old cottages—many of them thatched with straw—the whole landscape is beautiful. Rural England is, indeed grand—the fitting home of a great people. And, now we look forward to Scotland! W. L. C.
