Near, Middle And Far East

The terms "Near East," "Middle East," and "Far East" are used to divide the vast Orient into handy sections. In popular usage, however, their boundaries jump thousands of miles in almost every direction.

Attempting to maintain logical geographical divisions, the National Geographic Society divides the three Easts as follows:

Near East: Turkey, Cyprus, Syria, Lebanon, Israel, Jordan, Egypt, Iraq, Iran, and the countries of the Arabian Peninsula.

Middle East: India, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Nepal, Bhutan, Sikkim, and Ceylon.

Far East: China, Mongolian Republic, Korea, Japan, Formosa, the Philippines, Indochina, Thailand (Siam), Burma, Malaya, and Indonesia.

The Society's list of Near East countries corresponds closely to the U.S. State Department's grouping as represented by its Office of Near Eastern Affairs and Office of Greek, Turkish, and Iranian Affairs.

In British usage, the Balkan States of southeastern Europe often have been tabbed as part of the Near East, but American practice is to align them geographically with the West.

Prior to World War II, "Middle East" quite commonly described the region of the Indian subcontinent, although the designation was often made to reach westward to embrace Iran and the Arabian Peninsula.

The term Far East dates almost from Columbus's time. At first, it described the coasts and islands east of Singapore visited by venturesome navigators who reached the Pacific by rounding Africa's southern tip and crossing the Indian Ocean.

Some writers have restricted the Far East to China, Korea, and Japan. Others expand the term to include virtually all Asia east of Afghanistan.

More Research Needed

A fruitful subject for discussion at Ottawa—if our parliamentarians ever get around to it—would be farm economics research. According to the Policy Committee of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, economic and social research and investigation into the problems of agriculture in rural communities is seriously inadequate and should be greatly expanded.

As 'The Country Guide', sees it, our agricultural economists and statisticians are, unfortunately, so few in number and so loaded down with teaching, extension and service functions that research is being sadly neglected.

"We spend tens of millions of dollars annually on technological research to promote efficient farm production," says the Guide, "but are prepared to allocate only a few tens of thousands of dollars for research to investigate the economic consequences of the individual farm family, or to improve the efficiency of our farm marketing systems."

Our farm people should get behind their central organization in seeking to remedy this situation.

Iraqi Double Talk

How or what President Eisenhower or Prime Minister Macmillan—or some one in their confidence—would take time off from wrestling with Nikita Khrushchev and explain why they are preparing—with almost instant haste, it would seem—to grant diplomatic recognition to the new regime in Iraq.

The most sensible statement by a Government official we have seen so far came from Canada's External Affairs Minister Sidney Smith. Dr. Smith told the Commons that as far as he was concerned he was still inclined to "scepticism" in respect to the good intentions declared by the new Iraqi Government.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has barred brokers from handling shares of Canadian Javelin, Ltd. which holds deposits of iron ore on the Labrador. The Commission said it acted because "large blocks of stock" were being sold in all parts of the United States without registration of the securities.

An American woman, charged with failing to provide proper food for her 49 house-dogs, showed two plump pets in support of her not-guilty plea. The case was adjourned for further inquiry.

U. K. OPINION Macmillan Scores On Soviet Note

By M. McINTYRE HOOD Special London (Eng.) Correspondent for The Guardian

LONDON—An assist from Mr. Khrushchev got Prime Minister Macmillan out of a tight corner and spiked the guns of the opposition in the House of Commons debates on the Middle East crisis.

A snap poll taken by the Daily Express showed that their judgement was sound. In the poll, 68 per cent fully approved Mr. Macmillan's course.

TWO HUNDRETH ANNIVERSARY

On the 17th August and the French Commandant Villejoie as instructed from Louisbourg immediately surrendered, as agreed upon in terms of capitulation of Louisbourg.

Lord Rollo writing Admiral Boscawen on 10th, September, 1758, stated that with the assistance of Captain Spry, he had put the fortification in such order that, with one hundred and fifty men, then, it could not be taken without cannon and mortars.

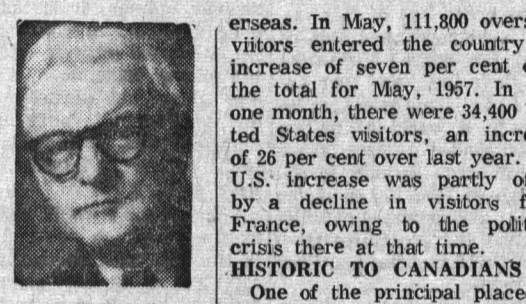

Immediately after the capitulation of Louisbourg, General Amherst issued orders on the 8th, August, 1758, from the camp before that Fortress to Lord Rollo, which were in part as follows:

"You are to take on you the command of three hundred men, and two hundred light infantry and Rangers, in the whole five hundred men ordered to parade this day at twelve o'clock at the head of the artillery, and you will march to the Barogy, where there will be boats to embark you in the following disposition. On board the King of Prussia 140, Dunbar 140, Bristol 130 and Catherine 90. Total 500 men."

"The ships will be victualled for three months for the number of five hundred men, and Admiral Boscawen will order a proper convoy; to proceed to the Island of St. John. Lieutenant Spry, Engineer, will embark with your detachment, and will have tools that three hundred men may work, and a thousand palisades, to build a redoubt round the barracks if practicable or in such a manner and on such ground as you may judge best, that one hundred or about that number, which I propose leaving at Fort la Joie, on the Island of St. Johns, may be sufficiently covered and secured against any attack the enemy may possibly make against them. The garrison and inhabitants are to surrender. The garrison at Fort le Joye, consisting of one company of Marines, are to be disbanded, and you will embark them as soon as you think proper."

In 1720 Count Saint Pierre had mounted eight cannon on a breastwork, but Governor de Villejoie shortly before the surrender in appealing in vain to the French Government for assistance stated that his artillery consisted of three pieces, which were not even mounted in batteries and which would only serve for signalling purposes.

HELICOPTER STATION

London is going to have a helicopter landing station on the Bank of the River Thames at Battersea. The project has been approved by the Port of London Authority and the Ministry of Transport and Civil Aviation is one that is essential to meet the needs of modern transportation methods.

Many who served as officers in the Canadian Army in the Second World War will remember the mansion known as "Garnons," in the hills of Herefordshire, which was used as a convalescent hospital for Canadian officers. This lovely place of recuperation was placed at their disposal through the efforts of the Hon. Vincent Massey, then High Commissioner in the United Kingdom.

It is announced by its present owner, Sir Richard Cotterell former Lieut.-Governor of Herefordshire, that it is being demolished. "Garnons" had 40 rooms, and its lovely and spacious grounds were enjoyed by hundreds of Canadians. Only a small part of it is being retained as a residence.

Allergies May Be Inherited

By Herman N. Bundesen, M.D. MORE than half of the common allergies such as hay fever, asthma, eczema and the like can be traced directly to inheritance either from parents or more distant relatives.

Because of this, many allergic parents, fearful of passing on these allergies to their youngsters, have asked me how they can prevent this from occurring. Well, you cannot prevent it. It just isn't, as yet, possible to eliminate the tendency of children to inherit allergy.

WHAT STATISTICS SHOW If it is your side of the family that is allergic, probably one-third of your children may develop an allergy. If there is allergy on both your side and that of your spouse, two-thirds of your youngsters are apt to be allergic. The allergy they develop

Work will be started on it in the next two or three weeks. Air transport lines have indicated they will use it for a shuttle service from the London Airport, an hour's run away by road, and the city. It is also likely to be used by helicopters taking patients to hospital by business people, and by aircraft carrying news and pictures to London.

NOW ATLANTICANS At a press conference we attended, Sir William Rootes, chairman of the British Trade Mission to Canada referring to some remarks made by H. Watson Jamer, agent - general for the Atlantic Provinces in the United Kingdom, said, "I suppose we must not say 'Maritime Provinces' any more. We must be sure to refer to them as the Atlantic Provinces."

Since the official offices of the four seaboard provinces in London is known as Atlantic House, and Mr. Jamer as agent-general for the Atlantic Provinces, there was much justice in Sir William's remark. The problem arising therefrom is whether the people of these provinces, heretofore known as Maritimers, so far as three of them are concerned, will now have to be referred to as "Atlanticans."

DREW FAUX PAS Hon. George A. Drew, High Commissioner for Canada was a guilty of an accidental faux pas at the ceremony of presentation of the British Columbia totem pole to the Queen Mother Elizabeth at Great Windsor Park, introducing W. A. McDermott, agent-general for British Columbia to make the official presentation.

Mr. Drew said: "Your Majesty, I will now ask the agent-general for New Brunswick to present—". That was as far as he got. The Queen Mother looked up sharply at Mr. Drew and said, "Oh, Oh." The crowd howled at Mr. Drew's discomfort. He got out of it nicely, by saying that since his interest now covered the whole of Canada from coast to coast it was sometimes necessary for him to jump from one side of Canada to another.

GARNONS DEMOLISHED Many who served as officers in the Canadian Army in the Second World War will remember the mansion known as "Garnons," in the hills of Herefordshire, which was used as a convalescent hospital for Canadian officers. NOTES BY THE WAY

Prosperity and recession are made of the same stuff. Both are the results of millions of decisions by individuals and groups of individuals.—Winnipeg Tribune

"Envoy. Extraordinary. A d ambassador. Plenipotentiary." The resounding titles diplomats still hear in this age of jet travel are reminders of the leisurely days when an ambassador was the personal envoy of his monarch at another court, when he was neither enslaved by telephone and telegraph nor overshadowed by peripatetic foreign ministers.—Christian Science Monitor however, might not be the same one which bothers the parents. Now all of this does not mean that these youngsters must suffer acute asthmatic attacks, the seasonal annoyances of hay fever or the troubles brought on by other allergic disturbances. MUST BE SENSITIZED

Even if they are susceptible to allergy, they must become sensitized to a particular substance and then must become re-exposed to it before they will develop symptoms. By avoiding things that are likely to bring on an attack of allergy, you can generally avoid the attack.

It's not always easy to do, of course, but you can take a few precautions that might pay off big dividends. For example, don't begin feeding infants too early with such foods as eggs, nuts, fish, etc., which sensitize readily.

PREVENTIVE MEASURES It might be a good idea to get rid of your pet dog or cat. Maybe it will help to enclose the mattress and box springs in a plastic casing. You can help keep pollen and molds out of your home by a filtering apparatus or an electrostatic device which cleans the air by electrical charges.

Surgical procedures such as removing adenoids and tonsils are of little value in helping allergies such as asthma. QUESTION AND ANSWER D. S.: My baby was born without any opening to have bowel movements. An opening had to be made on the side of his abdomen in order for him to live.

Will he ever be normal? Answer: In many cases of this type when a child becomes older an operation can be performed to close the opening in the abdomen and a normal rectum can be made surgically.
