I bumped into Sylvia the other day. I hadn't seen her for several years. Oldtimers may remember her as a rather fabulous bridge player who had a penchant for putting the whammy on our experts with her bizarre methods of bidding and play. From time to time we'll show some of her exploits as they come to our attention.

Early in her career, many years ago, I recall she cut into a rubber bridge game with three prominent experts. Sylvia was not in fear of any of the experts, which is a compliment the experts could hardly return. She figured that a fair share of the

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

so why should he worry? He should not and didn't. He did get a little tired listening to that dog. He wished he would go away. He wished anyway that he would stop barking. It made too much noise over there in the Green Forest.

That something did happen that quite upset Bobby up there in the tree. Down among the trees a light winked on and off. A little way from it another light did the same thing. Those lights were moving. Yes, sir, those lights were moving. They were coming toward that big tree. What did it mean? Lights had no business to be in the Green Forest. Then Bobby heard certain sounds that shouldn't be heard in the Green Forest in the night. Anyway, that is how he felt, about it. What he heard was the voice of one of those two-legged folk whom all the Green Forest folk fear. It was a hunter. He was calling to another hunter and the other hunter replied.

"The coon is treed all right!" shouted the first hunter.

Now Bobby Coon forgot all about the dog. What were those hunters doing over here in the Green Forest at night? Daytime was the time for hunting. And who were they hunting? Could it be that they were hunting for him?

In a moment he got the answer. One of those lights was pointed up so that it shone right in his eyes. Bobby knew then that he was in trouble and very great trouble. He knew that he was the one those hunters were looking for and he guessed that something dreadful might happen to him should they find him.

Bobby wasn't the least bit worried. Bobby wasn't the least bit worried. "That dog will get tired after a while and go away. I'll simply stay here until he does go. I like it up here. I don't care how long I have to stay," said Bobby to himself. Once more he grinned as he looked down at the dog. "Treed! Treed! Treed!" barked the dog. Every now and then he stood up on his hind feet with his forefeet at the trunk of the tree as he looked up and barked. It was quite a while before anything happened to make Bobby Coon at all worried. He was safe doing this now. At the foot of that tree a dog barking as if he were trying to bark his head off. He had chased Bobby Coon up that tree. Now Bobby was looking down and grinning. He was grinning because he knew that dog couldn't climb. On the ground, the dog could follow him wherever he might go, because a scent that the dog's wonderful nose could pick up and follow. This is why Bobby at last had climbed a tree.
