Oh, mother dear, you are gone to rest Where many went before, The Lord has found for you a home Beyond this earthly shore, You lived in favor with your God, You tried to do His will, I trust that we are left behind, Your example may fulfill.

You taught us in our early days, To walk in wisdom's way, And reverently and devoutly For every blessing pray, To love our neighbors as ourselves, To help them in their need; To clothe the poor and naked, The hungry to feed.

The Lord has called you from this vale Of misery and woe; He found for you a happy home, Where all the just will go; You suffered patient to His will, You never did complain; Although you had been tortured with A trying dreadful pain.

But now since you're gone to rest Within your earthly tomb, I hope you may be numbered with the blest, In your sweet happy home.

GALLANT IN THE TOILS.

How He Robbed Newson's and Sanderson's Stores.

His Eventful Trip From Summerside in a Stolen Boat.

Gilbert Gallant, the individual who burglarized the stores of Sanderson & Co., and John Newson on Thursday night, was on Sunday evening captured at Miscouche. From Miscouche he was taken to Charlottetown, arriving last evening. Gallant was formally arraigned before His Honor the Stipendiary Magistrate and remanded to jail for eight days.

In the police station Gallant did not exhibit any very great desire to withhold anything in connection with his criminal career. In fact he seemed rather proud of what he had done in that line, and freely answered any questions that were put to him.

Gallant is evidently not more than eighteen years of age. His features are not calculated to give one a high impression of his intelligence, although they indicate cunning along certain lines.

He belongs to Miscouche and according to his own admissions must have entered upon a career of crime at a comparatively early age. In March last Gallant was released from Dorchester penitentiary where he served two years for burglarizing the store of Brace & McKay. After his release he made his way to St. John, where he remained some time. Then he returned to Summerside where he soon began to make his presence felt.

Entering Warren, Hicks & McMurdo's store at Summerside, he helped himself to a mug share of booty which he transported to a boat owned by Mr. Will Strong, lying at the wharf. In the boat were several errand nets. With his booty and nets on board Gallant set sail for Charlottetown.

Shortly after leaving the western metropolis, Gallant, finding the boat too heavy, jettisoned some of his cargo. This necessitated the loss of the nets, but the other booty was retained. Arriving off Rice Point Gallant let go his anchor in a half gale of wind, but his "holding gear" was not equal to the occasion and the boat went aground. Subsequently the boat was hauled ashore by some fishermen. Gallant remained there over night. Next day, with the assistance of the fishermen, he got the boat afloat again and set sail once more. When he left Rice Point, however, Gallant claims that he did so minus some of his booty.

From Rice Point Gallant started for Charlottetown. Upon reaching St. Peter's Island, however, he changed his mind and went ashore there. The people of that place did not like Gallant's looks, and did not appreciate the circumstances under which he visited them. Therefore they declined to allow him to take the boat away with him.

Then Gallant left the island and made his way across the bar to Rocky Point and from there to West River. From the latter place he came to Charlottetown, where he spent a day prospecting.

About nine o'clock in the evening he secreted himself in Sanderson's yard, where he remained until about two next morning. Then he entered Sanderson's store and helped himself to some fruit, etc. From Sanderson's he went through to Newson's, and from there he stole the bicycle. He brought a wax candle with him from Summerside, which he lighted while he was in Sanderson's. But the candle went out, and he had to search about for matches to light it as his supply of lucifers had given out. These he found in Newson's, and with the aid of the candle and a lantern which he picked up he was enabled to roam about the premises at his own sweet will.

After leaving the scene of his operations Gallant made his way to a barn in East-Royalty where he remained some time. Then he started to wheel to Summerside. Although he says he had never ridden a wheel before he seems to have made good progress for he reached Augustine Cove, thirty-five miles from Charlottetown, on the same day.

He stopped there for supper, and resuming his wheel rode fifteen miles further on. On Sunday he started to complete the trip. On the way, however, his wheel was captured by Mr. McKay, but he managed to make his escape.

After escaping from Mr. McKay, Gallant made his way to Miscouche where he broke into the railway station and stole some tickets. Here he was captured and held until a policeman arrived from Summerside to take him to that place. From Summerside he was taken to Charlottetown, being escorted from Fredericton by Marshal Cameron.
