brief encounters between police and Negroes failed early Tuesday morning in the Manhattan Criminal Courts Building, a grand jury charged a young man with fatal shooting last Thursday of James Powell.

Powell was shot by Lieut. Thomas R. Gilligan as the offshoot of a dispute the youth and several companions had with an apartment building superintendent.

Gilligan had said the youth came at him with a knife and continued his advance in the shooting and the youth was not in uniform but said he showed his police badge to Powell.

Gilligan did not appear before Tuesday's session of the grand jury. He was charged with the killing of a young man in his home.

Not far from the Criminal Courts Building, a Harlem delegation sought to meet in city hall with Scravane in an effort to press their demands for Gilligan's immediate suspension and establishment of a community board to review charges of police brutality.

The five-member delegation said they would demand Mayor Wagner and Scravane personally tour Harlem and "if necessary, set up a temporary city hall there."
