Cuban Crisis Raised Shade Of Suez Crisis At Ottawa

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Cuba crisis week in Parliament raised the shade of the 1956 Suez crisis in the minds of politicians who saw in the American naval blockade the seed of a Canadian political division similar to that of 1956.

However, the seed never germinated, largely because Prime Minister Diefenbaker declared that Canada would stand by its friend and ally without getting into "sterile and irrelevant" argument about the legality of the United States blockade.

The near-parallel with Suez arises from the positions taken in 1956 by Liberal Prime Minister St. Laurent and Howard Green the present external affairs minister but at that time the chief opposition spokesman on foreign affairs.

After Britain and France invaded Egypt bringing Russia to the aid of Egyptian Premier Nasser, Mr. St. Laurent clearly expressed Canadian government disapproval of the invasion.

He spoke bitterly in Parliament of what he considered to be the disregard of big powers for small nations and said "the era when the supermen of Europe would govern the whole world has and is coming pretty close to an end."

WERE ALLIES

Then, as now, Britain and France were close Allies of Canada. And his outspoken criticism of them incensed Mr. Green who charged Mr. St. Laurent with lumping Britain and France in with Russia in his condemnation. He concluded by saying:

"It is high time Canada had a government which will not knife Canada's best friends in the back."

Against the background, the Cuban crisis might easily have produced similar political divisions with the Liberal and Progressive Conservative roles reversed.

Immediately after President Kennedy announced the U.S. blockade, there was a distinct impression here that the Canadian government was appalled by the American plan to stop and search on the high seas Cuba-bound vessels.

But to say so would have indicated to Russia a split in the Western defensive alliance. And it would also have given the opposition the chance to recall to Mr. Green his stab-in-the-back charges over Suez.

PEARSON UPSET

Liberal Leader Pearson is said to have been as deeply upset at the U.S. action as the government, especially since in his view the U.S. acted without consulting its Allies, merely advising them shortly before Mr. Kennedy went on television of what was planned.

However, at the same time Mr. Pearson is understood to have considered that the overriding consideration was to present a solid Western front against Russian efforts to plant strategic missile bases in Cuba within a 100 miles of the U.S. mainland.

U.S. Food Stocks Adequate For All But Global Conflict

By DILLON GRAHAM

WASHINGTON (AP)—United States food stocks are so large now that Agriculture Secretary Freeman feels only a widespread conflict like the Second World War would require all-out farm production.

Freeman has told reporters "there would be no need to change any of the country's present farm production policies" in the event the Soviet-Cuban crisis should lead to a limited, Korean - type engagement.

A re - evaluation would be needed, he said, if nuclear war should come "because no one knows what such a war would do."

The U.S. now has adequate stocks of food and fibre, he said, to meet needs such as were involved in the Korean engagement. Present foodstocks are more than 50 per cent larger than when the Korean War began in 1950, he said.

The population increased to 179,000,000 from 151,000,000 during the 10-year interval between 1950 and 1960.

The secretary said the wheat surplus totalled 400,000,000 bushels when the Korean War began, as compared with 1,300,000,000 bushels now. The feed-grain surplus was 3,000,000 tons tons.

DEFENCE PLAN READY

Freeman said the agriculture department's civil defence machinery "is in a very advanced state of readiness."

Freeman said "we know the location of every commodity and its volume, and we know the best means of transporting commodities to any area."

If war should come, Freeman said, his department is ready to take control of all food and agricultural supplies. A master plan for this was worked out more than a year ago.

A field organization was designed to make plans to handle agricultural responsibilities following an attack. He said that under the country defence board system, agricultural department employees are organized in event of nuclear attack to assume control of all food at the wholesale level and of all farm machinery.

The secretary said his department has detected "no real scare-buying of any kind" since the Cuban crisis developed.

MacLean Replies Fishermen Aided

OF THE GUARDIAN

OTTAWA — The federal government is already lending valuable assistance to the fishing industry of Canada, fisheries minister Angus MacLean said in the Commons Friday in reply to criticisms from Liberal J.W. Pickersgill.

Their exchange took place during consideration of a bill to amend the Farm Credit Act. The Newfoundland MP said there was no agency of the government making direct loans to fishermen comparable with those made by the Farm Credit Corporation to farmers.

"I know that the minister of fisheries and others have said on several occasions, apologetically, that there are various provincial agencies giving such loans, implying thereby that there is no need for any federal agencies," Mr. Pickersgill noted. "There is every bit as great a need for federal action for loans to fishermen, over and above those available under the fisheries improvement loans act, as there is for loans to farmers."

Mr. MacLean said that while there was plenty of room for improvement as far as fishing development is concerned, the two situations were not comparable. A high percentage of the loans made to farmers were for the purpose of purchasing land. In the case of fisheries, the resource was in the public domain, even in the international domain, and the fishermen only had access by license.

"The government is subsidizing the building of fishing trawlers to the extent of 50 per cent of their total cost. We are providing bait service in the eastern provinces and we are subsidizing the building of smaller ships," Mr. MacLean pointed out.

Mr. Pickersgill argued that a fisherman's boat was just as mortgageable as was a farm. The fishermen who needed the boats the most do not benefit from the federal aid because they did not build boats of that size.

N.Y. Stocks Show Decline During Week

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week made dramatic moves both to the upside and the downside, and ended with a slight loss on average.

Stocks fell as "crisis conferences" were called mysteriously Monday in Washington, took the worst loss in four months as President Kennedy ordered the offensive - arms quarantine of Cuba, more than wiped out the loss as Wall Street heard that Soviet Premier Khrushchev had messaged British philosopher Bertrand Russell that he would "not be provoked by unwarranted actions of the United States."

Once more they fell as the financial community became aware that Khrushchev's message was not conciliatory, but the stock movement was much smaller than those that preceded it.

As the U.S. navy put the arms quarantine into effect, the market was irregularly lower at worst, with traders pulling in their horns to await the next major confrontation of the world powers.

BOUNCES BACK

The Dow Jones industrial average was off 4.27 to 569.02 on the week. The week's change was trivial compared with the drop of 10.54 on uesday and the rebound of 18.62 on Wednesday—one of the greatest one-day gains of a hectic year.

With the ticker tape running as much as 59 minutes behind transactions when trading was at its heaviest, the week's volume soared to 25,062,260 shares from 16,682,390 the week before.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped 2.4 to 211.2.

Toward the end of the week, the market simmered down.

Bethlehem Steel's dividend cut Thursday brought heavy selling to the steels which only a couple of days before were strong on the crisis news
