HISTORY OF QUININE.

THE DUKE OF FIFE WRITES AN ESSAY ON THE ALKALOID.

How It Was First Discovered—Named After a Spanish Princess—Jesuits Made Piles of Money Out of the Life-Saving Bark—Old Nostrums.

His Grace the Duke of Fife, who is a chemist as well as a politician and a banker to boot, has recently communicated to the world all that he knows, and practically all that is known, concerning that life-saving alkaloid, quinine. As was befitting such an interesting subject and such an interesting lecturer, the duke was accorded the Royal Institution, London's scientific holy of holies, in which to expound his theories and disseminate the fruits of his research. The Marquis of Lorne runs Fife very close in the digging up of popular subjects and it is a race between them as to who is the better hand in working up a paper which is both interesting and couched in language understood by the masses. Fife, however, has held his own so far and the British public has quite come to regard him as a good all-round man, who, although a royal princess' husband, walks about with his eyes open and allows few matters of interest to escape him.

On the subject of quinine the duke says that if it is not exactly a "household medicine," during the past few years it has certainly become a household word. And perhaps no other drug has a history more varied and interesting. Peruvian bark first appeared in the London pharmacopœia in 1677. It was, however, used in England at least as early as the year 1655, and was advertised for sale in 1658 as "The excellent powder called by the name of Jesuits' powder, brought over by one James Thomson, a merchant of Antwerp."

But what is now universally known as quinine—one of the most important of the alkaloids—was not discovered until 1811; nor was it obtained in a pure state by complete separation from the other constituents of the bark until ten years afterward. Quite unscientifically, quinine may be described as the base, or essential principle, of the bark of certain individuals among the cinchona family of trees. This bark was first introduced into Europe in 1632, though it is generally said to have been unknown there before the return to Madrid of the Countess of Cinchon, the wife of the Viceroy of Peru, in 1640. This lady, from whom the bark-producing trees derive their botanical name, had been cured by it of a fever contracted in Lima in 1638, and her physician, by whom she was accompanied to Europe, not unnaturally made much of the wonder-working medicine.

But the Jesuits who had settled in Peru were quite aware of its virtues at an earlier date. They were, at all events, the chief agents of its distribution in Europe, the powder obtained from the bark being then generally known as "Jesuits' Powder." In Madrid it was called Countess' Powder, and in Rome Pulvis Patrum. From the latter city it speedily found its way to Brussels and Antwerp, where it was sold for its weight in silver, or about ten times the then price of opium. In 1658 twenty doses of the powder were sent from Rome to Paris at a cost of $250, and Cardinal Mazarin recommended its use in a dangerous illness of Louis XIV. That Peruvian bark was administered to the French king is undoubted, but an interesting piece of historical evidence points to a different source as to the means of its introduction to that court. In 1679 a well known London physician named Talbor cured Charles II. of a tertian fever, with the now famous bark, which is regarded in the hands of skilled persons "as a noble and safe medicine." Compared with the nature of the "elixir," which had been in all good faith compounded for James I. for a similar distemper, the new drug was indeed worthy of admiration. The fame of Charles' physician extended to France and Louis XIV's surgeon published an account of Talbor's treatment, which was translated into English, entitled "Talbor's Wonderful Secret for Curing of Agues and Fevers."

The prevalence and severity of these diseases, down to the end of the seventeenth century, caused them to be regarded as national scourges for which the "fever bark" was accepted as almost a miraculous panacea. Nor does this estimate of its powers appear extravagant when the ludicrous and often barbarous nature of the remedies which it gradually superseded are taken into consideration. "Plaisters and possets" were among the prevailing nostrums; but their ingredients were rather suggestive of the contents of a witch's caldron than of the beneficent applications of later days. Fever was to be cured by music and ague by electricity, while the placing of the fourth book of the Iliad under the long-suffering patient's head was supposed to be of magical value in both disorders. Above all, fear was thought to be especially necessary in the treatment of ague, and the description of many of the methods then used seems to have been well calculated to inspire it.

Humboldt doubted whether the curative nature of the bark was originally known to the Peruvians, but the probability seems to be that its qualities were fully understood by the natives long before the Spaniards landed on their shores. There is a tradition that the properties of the bark were first practically realized by a fever-stricken Indian, who, being left behind in the forest by his companions, drank of a stream which flowed through it, and which had been impregnated by the bark of the overhanging cinchona trees. His cure was so speedy that it was looked upon as miraculous, and the Indians flocked to the stream to partake of its supposed occult virtues. It is also asserted that the pumas and jaguars of the mountain forest are in the habit of gnawing the cinchona trees, and this is the more worthy of belief as it is known that the instinct of many domestic animals, as probably of all wild ones, leads them to seek particular herbs for medicinal purposes. Moreover, savages of the lowest type resort specifically to various kinds of vegetable "bitters" as a cure for fever and ague.

She Did Her Part.

Edith—I hate that Mr. Wilson.

Sadie—Why, what has happened? I thought you liked him ever so much.

Edith—He said I couldn't whistle, and just to show him I could I puckered up my mouth, just as sweet and round, and what do you think he did?

Sadie (blushing)—How should I know?

Edith—Well, the little fool just let me whistle.

Striving to Please.

"I don't know whether I like these pictures or not," said the young woman. "They seem rather indistinct."

"But you must remember, madam," said the wily photographer, "that your face is not at all plain.—Indianapolis Journal.

Failed to Remove the Disease from Hezekiah Vaughan's System—Dodd's Kidney Pills, which have Never yet Failed, Cured Him in Short Order.

SANDWICH, May 28.—Hezekiah Vaughan of the township of Gosfield, has lately gone through a severe surgical operation at Harper's hospital, Detroit, for what different doctors diagnosed as liver complaint, kidney trouble and bladder complaint. Four surgeons cut away at him for 4½ hours, but when they got through, none of them could tell what was wrong, and the patient was left as bad as ever. The benefits derived by a neighbor from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, induced Mr. Vaughan to try them. From the first he began to improve. His bowels soon became regular and the pains that afflicted him disappeared. Six boxes restored to his former vigor a man who had abandoned all hope of regaining sound health.

The most palatable preparation of Cod Liver Oil in the world is Miller's Emulsion, and is now being taken by invalids with astonishing success. WHEN SHALL I WAKEN?

When shall I waken to the glory here,
Endowed with insight more divine, to see

And hear through life's now unheard harmony
The meaning that forever seems so near?

Not all Quacks.

Because there are quack doctors scouring the country, seeking whom they may swindle, is no reason that your own family physician, of whose skill you have had abundant proofs, is one. This rule can be applied to some remedies with great force, because they are physicians' prescriptions and have been stamped with the approval of thousands of patients as well as physicians. They cannot be considered in the light of "patent medicines, of secret remedies," as the terms are generally understood. Another prejudice among most of our people is, that a liniment is only for external use, and nine times out of ten they are correct. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is unlike any other preparation made and called liniment, and is an exception to the rule. It was a mistake ever calling it anything but Johnson's Anodyne.

It was devised by an old family physician expressly for use in his own privata practice to allay pain, prevent and cure inflammation, both internal and external, which explains why it acts so promptly to relieve and cure colds, coughs bronchitis, fsthma, catarrh, diphtheria, and or all forms of sore throat,—all these diseases being the result of acute internal inflammations. The information around each bottle is worth much to every family. The proprietors I. S. Johnson & Co., will send a pamphlet free to any one, containing much valuable information entitled "Treatment for Diseases."

BENNINGTON, Vt., May 27.—Isaac Hanks, who is over 80 years old and worth perhaps $100,000, is to be tried in Salem on June 5, for causing the death of his wife. He was to be tried last fall, but on account of his illness the case was postponed. Hanks then disappeared, but was finally discovered living near Syracuse, N. Y., and was arrested last week. His wife, who was the third woman whom he had married, died at their home in Salem a year ago. Her death, it is alleged, was caused by ill-treatment and starvation.

CHICAGO, May 27.—W. J. Davis, stakeholder for the Corbett-Jackson fight, will return the $10,000 posted by each man, and the match will be declared off. "Parson" Davis said he proposed to call upon Mr. Davis for Jackson's $10,000, and that neither side would claim a forfeit. He laid the blame of the fizzle on Corbett, as he said Jackson had been ready at all times to fight.

LONDON, May 27.—It is announced that Brazil has accepted the mediation of England in her dispute with Portugal, growing out of the escape of a large number of Brazilian refugees from the harbor of Rio Janerio on board of two Portguuese warships.

Justo Gonzales, a leading lawyer in Buenos Ayres, recently defended Mme. Tettazaine, the famous South American prima donna, in a divorce suit. He charged her $800 for his services, but the money was not forthcoming, and he obtained an order for the seizure of lady's jewels, all of which turned out to be first-class paste.

Priestley's Dress Fabrics

In the long run it is the quality of the material that will determine the success of a lady's costume. Every lady who has at all studied the matter knows this. Priestley's Black Dress Goods are the best that the market affords. That is conceded on all hands. The ladies of Great Britain cordially acknowledge it. The American ladies prefer Priestley's dress fabrics to French. Our Canadian ladies are now asking for them. They wear better than other goods; but their great charm consists in a peculiar richness and softness of appearance, and a flexibility which enables them to drape in the costume with that suggestion of flow and rhythm which it is the dream of all tasteful women to realise. 6
