

Travel with AOSC

AOSC (Association of Student Councils) is an organization of Student Councils of some 56 universities across Canada. Their prime interest is student co-op travel throughout Canada and all over the world at reasonable prices and flexible departure dates.

I was fortunate enough to attend the AOSC general annual meeting at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on January 25 - '27, representing the University of P.

E.I. Some items that were discussed at the meeting were - the federal government legislation on Advance Booking Charters (ABC) which requires 60-90 days advance booking for charter flights out of Canada; the purchase of a branch of a travel agency in Toronto now operating out of AOSC headquarters in Toronto and giving AOSC some diversity in its operations; and also due to the truly national character of the organization, the association has received federal incorporation approval to reflect the national identity.

For the future of travel with AOSC, government regulations mean that students will not enjoy the price advantage in air fares that they once held. In the U.S., for example, youth and student fares are almost obsolete and there is strong speculation that in Canada the same fate will soon be realized. The AOSC will cater especially to Canadian travelling students through their new travel agency and offer tours, group fares and departure dates suitable to the travelling student.

As student travellers, you are free to use other travel agencies for information and travel arrangements, but AOSC is still the most reliable travel bureau in the industry.

AOSC has a regional office in Halifax to serve Maritime university needs and anyone wishing more information on the services offered by AOSC may contact me at the Student Union offices.

Brochures on AOSC tours & charters will be published and advertised as soon as they are received on campus. More detailed information on restrictions and requirements for AOSC travel will soon be available.

Statement by a (c)ONSERVATIVE

Dear Hopeful Girls;

I am one of the LITTLE BOYS at UPEI and I would like to give an explanation of why you and I weren't in attendance at this year's Carnival Ball. Note that it is an explanation, not an excuse.

Unfortunately, somewhere along the line, I became impressed with a certain aura that surrounds formal dances. This may be a silly old fashioned sentiment in this day and age, but somehow I don't think so. Maybe it was the fact, as you stated, that the only couples going so far were those going steady. I do not label a man as mature simply because he asked a girl to go; somehow, maturity strikes me as being a little more than this.

Has it ever occurred to you that the thing that makes our Carnival Ball the "Biggest Event of the Year" is that the majority of those that attend are there, not to be admired by others, but rather because there is a special someone, and this is one small way of affirming that identity. It is very nice that no guy will get shot down, but why does this special status have to be conferred on this one night. Wouldn't a mature girl, if at all possible, accept a date any other night? Maybe she would "enjoy herself as much or even more than the guy".

I find it very humorous that girls find it a chance to "get dressed up". Could it be that what this campus needs is a fashion show; that you might also enjoy? I think that I would personally feel much more relaxed with a mature woman, who attended because she wanted to be there with me, than with one of the "hopeful girls of UPEI '74, who appear to enjoy dressing up much more than the companionship of a man, or boy, who at least thinks about the possibility of "undying love", even if not forever after. Maybe you should re-evaluate your ideals and not waste my PRECIOUS TIME otherwise, because my Precious Time is reserved for someone who wants to be with me.
