Interesting to Lobster Packers.

The Agent of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has received the following telegram:— "Inform Duvar, and others interested, that the time for lobster fishing is extended, twenty-one (21) days in P. E. Island. "A. W. McLELAN."

Courty Courtesies.

Not long ago, England sent the Garter to King Alfonso. The mission was one of unusual splendour and dignity, and the cost to the country was freely commented upon at the time. Spain now puts her hand into her own purse and distributes valuable presents among the members of the mission. The Madrid press describe the presents as magnificent, and say that the tapestries for the Prince of Wales are worth over $30,000. They are perfect imitations of old Spanish and Flemish art. The other members of the mission, Garter King-at-Arms, and the Herald, will receive splendid specimens of Toledo arms, with beautiful incrustations of gold. The Marquis of Northampton receives a sword of remarkable beauty; and Queen Christina sends an exquisite fan to Lady Compton. Of course, all the expenses of these courtesies come from the public purse, and at present the people love to have it so.

British gunboats are endeavouring to keep the peace along the shores of the gulf of Omar. There is trouble between the reigning Imam and his brother, and British interests are imperilled. Five years ago his brother headed an open rebellion against him. The opposing parties adjourned to the desert outside the walls to fight the difficulty out, neither side wishing apparently to injure the mud shanties or the few mosques which make up Muscat. They charged at each other on horseback, fired their matchlocks, wheeled and galloped back to a safe distance, and then charged again, without doing anybody much harm. The Imam, however, who had command of the best horses, fled to the sea shore, hired a boat and escaped to Kurrachee, the nearest British port, on the opposite coast. He was reinstated by British assistance, and there is every prospect of the play being repeated.

The fuss raised by the American press concerning the ownership of the Panama Canal is unnecessary. So also are the assertions that the canal when built will have to be controlled solely by the United States. When the United States are strong enough solely to control the canal the other nations will make no bones about submitting to American ownership of the undertaking. It is idle to talk of any one nation controlling any great international highway, unless with the consent and goodwill of the other nations. If the United States is put in control of the Panama Canal—a most unlikely event—guarantees will surely be exacted that the commerce of other nations shall not be discriminated against in time of peace. In time of war the canal will belong to whichever Power is then supreme at sea.

There is a story told in Dublin that the late Lady C., who, when Lady Mayoress declared herself to be the "rankest" woman in the city, was requested by her friends upon the occasion of her husband being knighted, to get up an orchestral concert in honor of the event. She acceded, and sent immediately for Mr. X., with whom she consulted upon the matter. "How will you manage it?" she asked eagerly. "How many fiddles shall we have?" "Well," said Mr. X., "I think I shall engage eight first and six seconds." "Stop!" cried Lady C. "None of your second fiddles for me! I have money enough to do it well. Let them all be firsts."

RICHARD WATSON GILDER, who succeeded Dr. Holland as the editor of the Century, is a young man, not large, with dark hair and eyes. He is a man of enthusiasms, but has a power of work in him and a scrupulous sense of equity in his dealings with unknown contributors. He began as a newspaper reporter, and has pushed along by dint of tact and industry to a much coveted position. His last volume in verse was entitled "A Poem in Song and Sonnets."

A silk company has begun business at Aberdeen, Miss. The manager, an expert, thinks the Southern States possess a better climate for the successful, profitable cultivation of silk than any other part of the world in which the cultivation of silk is carried on. The climate is most like that of Japan, but better.

Small hopes are now entertained of a settlement of the difficulty between Chili and Peru. In the latter country all prospect of foreign intervention has died out, the United States having declared that they will take no further action in this direction unless officially requested to do so.

Two Indiana farmers quarreled about a wrench, and went to law. The cost of court and counsel fees has reached $1,700, both litigants have mortgaged their property to raise the money, and the case is continued.

During the celebration of funeral services in honour of Garibaldi at Buenos Ayres, the wall of the building fell, killing twenty persons and wounding others.

Silver men at Washington are talking of reviving the international monetary conference. They must be very hard up for something to talk about.

The revolution in Ecuador continues to spread, and the insurgents have met with numerous successes.

An Ottawa cow has given birth to a calf with two heads, four eyes, and three ears. It lived three days.

The Merchants Bank of Halifax declares a dividend of 3 1/2 per cent. for the half-year.

A Day-dream.

Oh! sweet 'tis to rove, thro' the gardens of bloom, In the pride of the summer, the glories of June, When the blossoms of beauty hang sweet on the tree, The joy of the Warbler—the feast of the Bee! And sweet 'tis to wonder, thro' dingle and den, By the cataraets roar, thro' the haunted glen, Where the cloudlets of spray on the sunbeams rise, Enblazoned with tints of the rainbows dyes!

II. 'Twas there, in an arbor, from sun and from wind, A blossom still fairer, in beauty reclined, Who held to her bosom what seemed to our view, The fanciful folds of a sweet billet-doux; Her heart fluttered high—like the bird in the grove, For she read a proposal, a message of love! And she sat, and she pondered, in deep reverie, Till, in slumber she dropt' from the thews of the bee.

III. And she dreamt of a scene, in a far foreign land, Where a youth slept a ring, on her lily-white hand, And she pledged her troth, thro' the bright glit'ning tear. For his love was to her, inexpressible dear! For oh!—she was fair, as the bloom of the rose, And the love-light of beauty, her eyes did disclose. And her rich flowing tresses her neck did adorn, Like the cloudlets of amber, that herald the morn!

IV. And the curl of her lip, as she wreathed in a smile, Enchanted the gazer, to linger the while, To bask in her eyes, of celestial blue, To worship—adore her—and love her anew! Then she woke from her slumber, in beauty's array, But the blissful illusion, had fled far away, And she thought of the Poet, who cruelly sings, That love so delightful, oft takes to his wings!

V. But while she thus pondered on fortune unfair, An object of beauty shot quick thro' the air, In the tints of the rainbow, that gleams in the shower, And he kissed every flower, that bloomed in her bower. An object of beauty, so sweet to behold, She slid her white hand, the fair bird to enfold; But that stranger of beauty, still chose to be free, And he flew to the top of the next flowery tree!

VI. Behind the green arbor sly footsteps she hears, The youth of her fancy—her lover—appears, To soothe her excitement, and calm her alarms, He clasped the young beauty of love in his arms! Thus the blissful illusion, that hallows our dreams, To reason, and fancy, reality seems, Full often forshadow events long delaying, Their form, and identity, sweetly portraying.

VII. Ye lovers, remember the gist of my strain, Hold fast your affection, come loss or come gain, For true love ennobles the bosom it blesses And lives, like that bird, on delight and sweet kiss. CHARLOTTETOWN, July 19, 1882. McALBYN.

Violation of the Scott Act.

To the Editor of the Examiner. DEAR SIR,—The Scott Act, I am told, has been declared constitutional by the highest court in the empire, and is now, to all intents and purposes, the law in the counties and towns in which it has been adopted. In this part of the country, I regret to say, this law is being daily and hourly violated. An Inspector, drawing a handsome salary, resides, I am informed, somewhere in the neighborhood of New Perth. He has never yet, I believe, considered it his duty to visit the eastern section of the County. He knows, or ought to know, that liquor is exposed for sale in the village of Souris in over half a dozen places; and sold openly and above board at all hours of the day and night, not even the Sabbath Day excepted. The office of the Deputy Clerk of County Court is held in an open run shop. Persons having business to transact with the court, are compelled to submit to the taunts and insults of drunken men who are constantly loading around this headquarters of liquor and law. I would here invite the attention of the County Court Judge to this fact. Out of respect to the cloth, he should certainly not allow one of the chief officers of his court to dispense law and tanglefoot over the same counter. Yours, etc., EN AVANT. Souris West, July 20, 1882.
