NOTES AND COMMENTS.

There are two millions of men unemployed in the United States and still declare that the National Policy is to go next session.

A correspondent of the Watchman reports a very hot road jacking at North Wilshire. He states, in effect, that the supervisor and his friends have been logging at the expense of the public.

Montreal Star: Now that the coal oil policy of the Liberals has been brought near to the grate fire of office, the country—and Victoria—await the result with anxiety.

The Toronto Star says the signs are at the present electoral contest in North Ontario will be the last of the Patrons of Industry. The death song is being sung now, and the music is a violent rivalry very between Acting Secretary Wrigley and Vice-President Currie and a fight in the ranks.

The Halifax Chronicle's justification of the Conservative Government as operated in New Brunswick for the past decade or more, "has been fruitful of serious compromises, corrupt and unscrupulous, and a violation of public duty." With all its faults, party government, with just two parties, is best for the country. Independent Governments are like "independent papers"—likely to have a little selfish, unscrupulous jingo at the back of them.

The Halifax Chronicle's justification of the Conservative Government as operated in New Brunswick is worth noting. The Chronicle says:

"But our American cousins must not forget that so long as the fisheries policy has been regulated under the treaty of 1818 the people of Canada have no option but to stand by the provisions of that convention. If the public men of that country regard the treaty of 1818 as antiquated and liberal, the way is opened for the negotiation of a more liberal arrangement. The policy of the imperial government is always in favor of enlarged commercial relations between the two countries, have practically found ground which clearly implies that Canada must do all the conceding and the United States all the taking. So long as American politicians persist in taking this illiberal ground, Canada has no course but to stand by her rights in the fisheries defined by the treaty of 1818, and she is not going to surrender these rights without a reasonable quid pro quo."

This is precisely the position occupied by the late Government under conditions exactly like those described by the Chronicle.

Under the heading "A Strange Rumor" a Montreal paper says: The Presse publishes a rumor that Mr. Brown, of Ottawa, who is at present in Ottawa, has been offered the position of Collector of Customs at Quebec.

A French paper reports that the late Hon. AT THE CAPE.—Crossing both ways today. Boats left Cape Tormentine at nine this morning and landed at Cape Traverse about half past two this afternoon.

BONNIE PRINCE CHARLIE—Those who listened to Mr. Brecken's lecture on Tuesday evening speak of it as a great literary treat. Mr. S. M. Bent presided, and the C. M. B. A. hall was filled with an appreciative audience. The lecturer took the ground that "Bonnie Prince Charlie" undertook an impossible task when he made his celebrated descent south to England in an attempt to regain the crown. While wisest heads tried to show him the wisdom of the attempt, his appeal to their loyalty overcame all their scruples, and out of pure loyalty to their prince they followed him to what they knew was certain death. At the conclusion Messrs. Neil M. Leod, Rev. Fr. D. McDonald, Hon. Tignish, Rev. D. J. G. McDonald, Hon. W. T. Stong and Mr. J. H. Bell made remarks, after which the usual vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer.—Summerside Free Press.

D. C. S. Annual Meeting in St. Paul's Schoolroom—Special Paper by Mr. Percy Pope—Address by Rev. Mr. Wallis.

The annual meeting of the Diocesan Church Society was held in St. Paul's Schoolroom last evening, the Vice-President, Charles Palmer, Esq., in the chair. After routine, and the reading of reports by the clergy and their adoption by the meeting, Mr. Percy Pope Secretary-Treasurer of the Society, read the following paper, which will be found interesting not only by all English Churchmen but by all intelligent Canadians.

The subject to which I have been asked to direct your attention this evening is summed up in the question, "Why is not the Diocesan Church Society more effective?" If this question could be answered by simply pointing out some defect in the constitution of the Society, the task would be comparatively easy one. But such is not the case. Our Society is regularly constituted, its aims are ample, its Executive includes all the clergy and an adequate representation of the laity of the Province. Evidently, then, we must go deeper in our search for the causes which render it comparatively ineffectual.

Now when a Corporation shows no signs of vitality or begins to decline, such a decline is due to one of two causes. The individual members from whom it derives its first impetus cannot, or will not, support it. In this instance, we may dismiss the first of these alternatives. There is no question whatever of our ability to sustain it, if we so desire. It follows, therefore, that the desire is lacking.

Why? No intelligent Churchman, who has given a moment's thought to the subject, can fail to appreciate the fact that the Church of England in P. E. I. land needs a diocesan organization. Tucked up as we are to the Doocese of Nova Scotia, our isolated position deprives us of participation in many of the privileges enjoyed by members of the main body. The several congregations in this Province, unaccustomed to unite for mutual support and encouragement, know little and care little for the well being of provinces other than their own, and as a consequence our clergy are compelled to work under disadvantages which they too keenly appreciate. The P. E. I. Methodists, the Baptists, enjoy the benefits to be derived from thorough and regular communication on the other hand, though their constitution prevents a still closer union, are forced to struggle without such advantages. Why is this? The answer is unpalatable to many. There are not only Presbyterian congregations in P. E. I. land, but a Presbyterian church, not only Methodist congregations but a united Methodist body. There are churches of England and congregations but there is not a united church. A number of us desire to worship God in accordance with the practice of the church of England as we have been accustomed to conceive of it, or as we choose to interpret it. We are prepared to support a clergyman and maintain a church edifice, and according to the services and teachings meet with our approval, but beyond this we recognize no further obligation. In fact, we are practically congregationalists adopting the Episcopal form of worship.

Mark you, the term congregationalist carries with it no idea of reproach, but congregationalism precludes much that is essential to the formation and effective maintenance of a church which aims at catholicity, at presenting not merely the ideas of a particular sect, but at embodying every attainable view of truth. Further it precludes participation in the advantages which arise from organic union by means of which the common ideas and common aspirations of a large number can assert themselves with great increased effect, and the energies of the several members be gathered together and conserved for economic distribution throughout the entire body.

But such a union is possible and effective only when the several congregations, shareholders, possess certain ideas and aspirations in common, which they conceive can be better carried out by means of concerted action. Whatever may be their differences upon minor points, their agreements must be of more importance than their disagreements; for if the interest connected with their disagreements are stronger than those which centre around their agreements, the individual members will strive to break up the union rather than maintain it.

passionately weighed the objects which can be urged against it. As a matter of experience we all realize that union brings additional strength, that one hundred men working collectively are much more effective than one hundred men working separately, and that a number of congregations closely banded together can do more than the same number each working on its own lines without having anything to do with the other. Setting aside the differences of doctrine, we turn our energies from the advancement of God's cause to warning against each other, we can readily appreciate that the common burden, if equitably distributed, is much more easily borne; that the interchange of ideas serves to counteract the tendency to one-sided views and error to which all alike are liable; and that mutual sympathy and encouragement engenders a greater amount of force and enthusiasm. So far the facts are in favor of union. But there are other points to be considered. Individuals and congregations hold very different views upon religious matters, and we may take it for granted that these views are not identical, unless they are themselves, we just cease for so doing. Only a coward or a dastard would be false to that which he believes to be true. How will this effect our question? Does loyalty to the church at large involve the renunciation of our individual rights? If so, we are undoubtedly forced to stand or fall by the latter. But is this the case? The individual shareholders of a joint stock company have very diverse ideas as to how its affairs are to be conducted. They feel perfectly at liberty to express their views, and endeavor to get them adopted, nor does such conduct in any way injuriously affect the interests of the corporation.

THE REWARD WANTED. Sir, In the Guardian of this morning a reward of $50 is offered to the finder of a "young juno" lost between the residence of Mr. Davies and EXAMINER'S office. The Guardian editor seems to be at a loss as to what species this creature belongs. Webster's unabridged tells us that "juno" means a secret confederate or assembly which intrigues in secret on an affair of government—a cabal—or collection of men combined for secret deliberation and intrigue for party purposes—a faction, &c.

Mr. Davy knew whereof he spoke when he alluded to a "juno," and evidently meant the cabal, or faction controlling the Guardian. Will "A. Stewart," who advertises the $50 reward, now fork it over to EXAMINER'S office for the use of the PRINTER'S DEVIL.

front habits of thought and action of different nationalities. In England the natural conservatism and law-abiding characteristics of the Anglo-Saxon saved the National Church, which adopted Protestant ideas without breaking away from the past or renouncing anything save that which was defined absolutely repugnant to the Catholic faith. But she did not escape unscathed. For a time she had to low her head under the stern and salutary discipline of the sword, when the rigid Presbyterianism of the sword, the inflexible Independent took forcible possession of her churches and prescribed her services. Since then other bodies of non-conformists left her communion, and these again split into innumerable subdivisions until Protestant Christianity today finds expression through some hundreds of distinct organizations. Nor have these forces ceased to be active in the main body of the church, striving for supremacy. These facts must be duly weighed. To declare that the struggles made by our reformers, by our puritan forefathers, to enforce consideration of the ideas they set forth, are unprofitable, or to deny that they resulted in useful and advancement, would be to willfully distort the teaching of experience. On the other hand the lesson to be derived from the history of our work is that which follows upon the unwise exaltation of individual rights is equally unmistakable. (Concluded to-morrow.)

LAST NIGHT'S CARNIVAL.

A Brilliant Scene at Hillsborough Rink—List of Skaters. The Carnival in Hillsborough Rink last night was a decided success, and Messrs. Dawson and Bartlett are to be congratulated on the list published here, and as the skaters in diversified costumes flitted hither and thither under the glare of the electric and other lights the scene was a brilliant one indeed, one that will not be forgotten by those who witnessed it. The rink decorations were very beautiful, and Mr. Doull is deserving of credit. They consisted of spruce and lancing with myriads of Chinese lanterns placed so as to give effect to the gorgeousness of the scene on the ice. At intervals during the evening there were protechic displays which added to the picturesque of the affair. An excellent idea of the persons may be obtained by referring to the list published here. Most of the costumes, especially those of the ladies, were exceedingly pretty and becoming, and they indicated that the wearers had gone to some trouble and expense to make a success of the character. There were also many excellent costumes among the gentlemen, some of them dealing with local celebrities. In most of the costumes completeness and attention to detail was evident, and the impersonations seemed to enter into the spirit of the character they assumed. There were many costumes on the ice that are deserving of special mention, but pressure upon our space will not admit of our doing so. The judges of costumes, Mrs. L. E. Pope and Mr. W. H. Stewart, decided that in the competition for the best lady's costume Miss Jones and Miss Churchill were equal, and in the competition for gentlemen they awarded first prize to Mr. Jack Davies. For the best gentleman's costume, without restriction, they gave the prize to Mr. P. Carvell. The list of skaters in costume will be found below.

A feature of the carnival that was pleasing to the spectators was the exclusion of negroes, firemen and snowshoers. These have been too much in evidence at former carnivals. The Carnival last night was under the distinguished patronage of His Honor the Lieut-Governor and Mrs. Howland. Galbraith's Band furnished good music but they did not play often enough to please some of the spectators.
