Canada's Trading Position Is Pygmy Between Giants

By BRUCE STOVEL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada's position in the free world trading picture will soon be that of a pygmy standing between two giants, the United States and a United Europe, says an independent research organization.

The prediction was based on a recently completed survey of Canada's position in the changing international trade picture by the Canadian office of the National Industrial Research Board, an independent business research organization with headquarters in New York.

The survey, presented in the form of 10 charts, points up some of the big swings in post-war trade and outlines some changes likely in the near future.

Canada's pygmy status is shown in the following figures:

1. Including Great Britain, the Common Market nations and the United States now produce 80 per cent of the free world manufacturing and mining output. Japan and Canada each have 3.2 per cent.

2. Western Europe's share of total free-world trade rose to 46 per cent in 1961 from 36 per cent in 1946. In the same period, the Canadian and U.S. share fell to 19 per cent from 27 per cent. Japan jumped to four per cent from one per cent.

The survey points out Canada's trade with Common Market countries has more than doubled since 1954, while Canada's trade with the U.S. has only shown a 25 per cent increase.

It analyzes the possible effects of the proposed common external tariff of the European Economic Community. Four major Canadian exports are likely to be injured, it says— wheat, aluminum, newsprint and wood pulp.

Wheat, Canada's largest export to Western Europe, will be subject to a variable levy. This, the report says, "may reduce imports from outside the Common Market area."

Aluminum will face a nine per cent tariff subject to certain exceptions. If Britain joins the ECM, the current British preference of up to 10 per cent would be lost. Now 40 per cent of Canada's aluminum exports go to Western Europe including Britain.

Newsprint and wood pulp, which now enter the U.K. duty free and some Common Market nations at low rates, will encounter duties of seven and six per cent respectively.

RESULT IN CHALLENGE

The net result, the survey says, would be a challenge to Canadian exporters to increase trade with the Common Market as a whole to compensate for losses in the British market.

The survey says, however, the U.S. Trade Expansion Act passed this year will probably compensate to a large extent for any trade losses.

Up to 45 per cent of Canada's exports to the U.S. could benefit from provisions giving the president authority to reduce all existing tariffs by up to 50 per cent.

The survey concludes Canada has a large stake in the nature of international trade — she ranks fifth in free-world trade after the U.S., the U.K., West Germany and France—and is "highly susceptible to changes in the external environment."

Underground Negro Leader Wins Adjournment Of Trial

PRETORIA (Reuters) — Nelson Mandela, former underground leader of the banned African (Negro) National Congress, went on trial for incitement here a few hours after a wave of bombing and arson erupted in several South African cities.

The 44 - year - old Mandela, wearing full tribal robes and a monkey skin cloak, drew cheers from a packed courtroom of Negroes when he accused the government of a "high-level" conspiracy against him.

The negroes danced in the courtroom when Mandela, sometimes called the Black Pimpernel won an adjournment of his trial to next Monday.

He asked for a two-week postponement on the grounds he had been deprived of his defence counsel when the trial was suddenly transferred from Johannesburg to Pretoria for security reasons.

"It is clear to me that there is a high-level conspiracy between various government departments against me to make it difficult for me at this trial," Mandela said.

TRIAL FOLLOWS ARSON

One of the few rights the black man still has in this country is to have counsel of his own choosing."

Mandela will remain in custody until the trial resumes.

Earlier an outburst of arson and bombings coincided with the painting of two Mandela posters on walls in several South African centres, including Cape Town, nearby Paarl and Durban.

Mandela, disciple of Nationalist leader and Nobel peace prize-winner Albert Luthuli, organized a national strike in May, 1961, when South Africa became a republic outside the Commonwealth.

He earned the name Black for 18 months. He was arrested Pimpernel when he managed to elude police capture for 18 last August

Opening lead—ten of clubs.

This hand was played in a team of four match. At the first table, West led the ten of clubs. Declarer took it with the jack and played the jack of diamonds, overtaking it in dummy with the queen.

However, East, a thoroughly experienced player, played the three without batting an eyelash. East had decided when dummy came down that the only real chance of beating the contract was to play South for a doubleton diamond and refuse to take the first diamond trick.

The ruse succeeded all right because South came back to his hand with a club and repeated the diamond finesse. East took the king this time and shifted to the jack of spades, declarer eventually going down one.

The play started the same way at the second table, where the contract was also three no-trump. A club was led and the jack of diamonds was overtaken with the queen, East refusing the trick just as the previous table.

However, the declarer here, having a more suspicious nature, was not convinced that West had the king merely because the queen had won the trick. He knew East was capable of holding up the king if he had it, and that it wouldn't be wise to stake everything on the location of the king of diamonds.

So at trick three, he led a heart from dummy and finessed the queen. When the finesse won, the complexion of the hand changed with it. South now had nine sure tricks without bothering with further finesses.

Accordingly, he leashed his clubs and the two major suit aces— bringing him to eight tricks— and then led a diamond to the ace for his ninth trick. As matters turned out, the ace caught the king, and the outcome was that South made all 13 tricks.

Obviously, the declarer at the second table played the hand better than the one at the first table. He gave himself two chances to make the contract instead of one.
