QCHS H & S Annual Set For Tonight

The final meeting of the Queen Charlotte Home and School Association will be held this evening in the library at seven o'clock.

Reports from various committees on the year's activities will be presented and new officers will be installed by a former principal of the school, J.A.S. Williams, now head of the curriculum division of the department of education.

Following this brief but important business session, members are reminded of the annual home economics display, scheduled to get underway in the school auditorium at eight o'clock. This event promises to be colorful and original, as in former years, when beginner students, from the various Grade 7's, display the creations they have designed, many of them sewing for the first time. In addition, more advanced exhibits of creative sewing skills will be revealed by pupils in Grades 8 and 9. Throughout the evening, musical and dance selections will be presented by the music department, which has already achieved public approval with its selections presented at the annual band concert late in April.

Extra-curricular activities at Queen Charlotte, as in any other unit, are most important in the full development of the child, and these special events in the realm of home economics and music are deserving of the support of all citizens, but especially those parents of students attending Queen Charlotte High.
