

ELLEN'S DIARY

Paint Brightens A Room And Also Lifts The Spirit

Did the March-month go out as we had sometimes suspected, "like a lion"? On the contrary, it goes now on gentle footfalls. True, not beneath a night-blue sky, and stary, with the moon providing a lantern to the paths. In rainfall it faces away, which if we should chance to linger a while here in the kitchen, we will be in truth April showers. Eaves' conductors bear it off from the roofs in silver spray in the yard-lights. Yards are puddled. At the door, we can hear the troubled sound of the waterfall at the nearer spillway. And because minds that have come up the years together do come to "run alike" the question uppermost in James' mind at the moment, despite his seemingly absorption in a telecast, is: "Will the lane-bridge up the stream handle the flow?" If it should not withstand this springtime rush, the morning will find us at Alderlea, as near to the roadway as a few yards, and as far as a distance up the fields, where beyond a winding it enters this farm after an excursion to the far side of the valley. Only there could we cross dry-shod. "There's no let up to it, is there?" James comments. And we know it is not of the telecast he speaks but because of the rain on the roof. "Let's hope," he adds "the bridge keeps. It will be getting quite a flow there. We should by rights..." he offers. But he is back to the program again. "If a woman wants to become involved in the house-cleaning, well past what she had planned to do, let her buy a can of paint and a brush! I did" a housewife commented with a bit of chuckle today. "There's no limit then to the decorating. It goes on and on. You get one room done and beside it the next one seems shabby. And because you can't have one thing laughing at another you find yourself painting it too!" "Its virtues are two-fold that can of paint" we said. "It brightens the room, and it also gives the spirit a decided lift." "Yes" she smiled. "It's like getting a new hairdo... or a new dress!" "And they too are good investments, great remedies when the heart tends to beat low" we said. This was a damp day, in token of niceties to come. It promised lace of new leaves unfolding, and stirred soil. And it might be, the thought came that one day of the cropping we should see again a horse drawing an old seeder again as in years gone, on fields of this farm. Damp today. No sunshine. James listens to the rain-beat, and the muted sound of the waterfall in the valley below. "It hasn't the force of other springs, I'd say" he offers. "With little frost, there's not so much run-off this time. The fields absorb it." We remember that by this Easter is nearing. Its darkest day: tomorrow. Until Saturday. --Diary-- Good-night.

Traditional Baked Ham Enjoyed In A New Form

Ham is the traditional meat for Easter Sunday dinner. But today's ham form is by no means traditional. It is a new style smoked ham roll (with all bones removed), that is a joy to carve delicious to eat and is a real budgetwise buy.

Measurements level... SMOKED HAM ROLL - ORANGE-LEMON GLAZE (Serves 10; or use part for a Planned - over meal 1 (8 to 10 lb.) smoked ham roll 1/2 c. brown sugar (no lumps) 3 tbsp. flour 2 tsp. table-mustard 1-3 c. orange marmalade 1 large lemon, cut into six 1/4" slices 24 whole cloves Place ham, fat - side up, on a rack in open roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer so bulb reaches center of thickest part but does not rest in fat. Do not add water. Do not cover. Roast in slow oven (325 degrees F.) until meat thermometer registers 160 degrees F. for "cook-before-eating" ham and 130 degrees F. for "fully-cooked" ham. Allow 2 1/2 to 3 1/4 hrs. for a "cook-before-eating" ham, and 2 1/2 to 3 hr. for a "fully-cooked" ham. The Glaze: Combine and mix brown sugar, flour, mustard and orange marmalade. Cut each lemon slice into four wedges. About 30 min. before ham will be done, add glaze as follows: Brush on half orange marmalade mixture. Bake 20 min.; spread on remaining mixture. Arrange lemon pieces on surface of ham. Stick each piece with clove. Bake 15 min., or until glaze is set. EASTER SUNDAY DINNER Grapefruit Halves Sectioned Centered with Tiny Candy Easter Eggs Radishes - Ripe Olives Smoked Ham Roll with Orange-Lemon Glaze Parslied Potatoes Asparagus in-Butter Sauce Easter Pineapple Cheese Cake (already columned) or Strawberry Ice Cream with Halved Fresh Strawberries or -Half-Thawed Frozen Strawberries Coffee, Tea TOMORROW'S DINNER Orange Juice - Crabmeat a la King in Rice Ring, Green Peas and Carrot Rounds - Hot Cross Buns - Custard Pie - Coffee, Tea, Milk. CRABMEAT A LA KING IN RICE RING 2 tbsp. butter 1 seeded green pepper, diced 1/2 c. sliced fresh or canned mushrooms 2 c. white sauce (follow standard recipe) 1/2 lb. crabmeat flakes, frozen or canned 1 egg yolk 1 tsp. water 1 tbsp. dry sherry (optional) Rice Rings (see Chef) Melt butter, add green pepper and mushrooms; saute 3 min. Stir in white sauce and crabmeat flakes. Combine egg yolk, water and sherry, beat with fork, and stir into boiling crab-flake mixture. Serve in one or 6 individual rice rings. Serves 6. THE CHEF'S RICE RINGS Boil and drain 1 c. rice until tender, following pkg. directions. Mix in 1 tbsp. butter and 2 beaten egg yolks. Pack into one large or into 6 individual buttered ring molds. Bake in a mild oven (375 degrees F.) for 5 min. Unmold and use as directed.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married over 16 years and dearly love my husband. He has many wonderful qualities, with one glaring exception, namely, he likes to drink. Not constantly, but generally to excess. This has been the sole cause of friction in our otherwise very happy marriage. We have a lovely home and two dear fine children. I find his alcoholic over-indulgence a growing problem as the years go by. I strongly feel that this unwholesome atmosphere creates is detrimental to the children. Currently, we are having a sharp disagreement because he wishes to invite weekend guests to whom I object. From past experience I know their visit would turn into a big drinking party. They also do more damage to our furnishings than the children ever have. I am not against social drinking, and even enjoy the graciousness of cocktails, wine and liqueurs when we entertain. But I am opposed to degrading our home in a "beer for breakfast" fashion. My husband is highly intelligent, well-liked, with a very responsible position. Yet he fails to see how these disagreements are affecting our family life, even the physical side of our marriage. I would much rather hurt the feelings of these "friends" than ruin the many blessings we have, perhaps forever. I am not making a mountain of a molehill, as he maintains, because on several occasions his

May Safety Day To Alert Adults
OTTAWA (CP) - Accidents take the lives of more Canadian children than the other leading causes of child death combined, the National Safety League of Canada said Monday. The other causes are influenza, bronchitis, pneumonia, cancer, congenital malformations, gastritis, duodenitis, enteritis and colitis. In an effort to alert adults to their responsibilities in preventing fatal accidents to children, the league and the Canadian Highway Safety Council will sponsor a child safety day Sunday May 1. Child safety groups, parent organizations, women's organizations and others will participate.

drinking has endangered our very lives. I am deeply unhappy over this and would appreciate your suggestions. R. W.

DEAR R. W.: It isn't that your husband fails to see how these disagreements over his drinking are damaging your married life and undermining the children's welfare. Rather, he simply refuses to face reality, as regards the progressively mounting costs of his out-of-control alcoholic addiction. Unquestionably, his current insistence upon inviting guests for the weekend, whom you disapprove, is a matter of his wanting to hide out in a crowd, so to speak, from the accusation of his own conscience and from the reproach implicit in your anxious attempts to "talk reason" to him.

As for what to do, it seems to me that the time has arrived for you, personally, to get in touch with the Al-Anon Family Groups, whose national headquarters, mailing address is P. O. Box 1475, Grand Central Annex, New York 17, N. Y.

The Al-Anon program affords a psychologically supportive advisory service to the families of alcoholics, whether or not the problem drinker himself is affiliated with AA (Alcoholics Anonymous).

The purpose of the advisory service, which operates through a network of neighborhood fellowship units, is to aid the alcoholic's responsible next-of-kin in making a clear distinction between useful and useless methods of reacting to the problem.

To illustrate, Al-Anon stands on the principle that the alcoholic never was helped by preaching, nagging or violent scenes. Al-Anon teaches that the alcoholic's family, in grasping that truism, is spared a tremendous waste of energy. And, hopefully, the family learns from Al-Anon how to channel its concern into constructive thought and action, on its own and the drinker's behalf.

The gist of the Al-Anon platform (culled from its literature) is: "Alcoholics are very sick persons. They need help and understanding. Faith without works is dead" on the part of those who care. You can't just pray for the alcoholic's recovery and then sit back, awaiting a miracle. You must take
