TREATMENT OF OBSTINATE
CASES OF ATHLETES' FOOT

I had the opportunity some years ago of visiting the orthopedic clinic of the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, and was interested to find that about 80 per cent of the patients each morning came because of their feet. Prolonged standing, the use of ill-fitting shoes, infection of teeth and tonsils causing inflammation of the joints of the feet were among the conditions found in this group of patients.

To-day, another condition, not needing orthopedic attention, has become very common and many "cures" for it, are seen on the pages of our newspapers and magazines. I am referring to ringworm of the feet or athlete's foot. And it is actually because of an increased desire for cleanliness that this ailment has spread so rapidly.

We read in The Bulletin, Lake County's Association, the following:

"With the increasing large number of shower baths being installed in the vessels there obviously has been an increase in the number of cases of athlete's foot contracted. The suggestions for the treatment of athlete's foot are: 1. Use of Whitfield's ointment (named after the famous British skin specialist) and potassium permanganate tablets. 2. Dissolve one five-grain potassium permanganate tablet in a gallon of hot water. Soak the feet for thirty minutes in this solution. 3. With a piece of gauze gently remove all of loose skin. Wipe the skin dry and then apply Whitfield's ointment to the affected parts. The application of Whitfield's ointment should not be too thick."

In the meantime preventive measures as recommended by Dr. Udo Wide, University of Michigan, include a use of paper slippers which keep feet off the floor, and (b) after the bath thoroughly dry the body, especially feet, groin and armpits.

Remember, the above treatment—soaking in potassium permanganate solution and application of Whitfield's ointment—is for the skins of hardy lake sailors. It might easily be too severe for many skins. It would be wise, therefore, to first use milder solutions and ointments. If the results are disappointing, then the use of Whitfield's ointment, perhaps every second day, might bring the desired results safely. Whitfield's ointment is a non-proprietary ointment which can be put up by any druggist.

He who is the most charitable in his judgment is generally the least unjust.

Every step forward makes God will more clear and the next step more plain.
