

THE DAILY EXAMINER. NOVEMBER 20, 1890.

The Egg Trade.

SOME correspondence between the Hon. Donald Ferguson and the Finance Minister of Canada, Messrs. Tulloch & Co. of London and Messrs. Thomas Ronaldson & Co. of London, has, kindly, been placed at the disposal of THE EXAMINER and its readers by Mr. Ferguson. We note that the Finance Minister says: "If I were a farmer I would not kill a hen; for I believe that the trade will be quite as good hereafter as it has been."

"There is no doubt of a market here, all being a question of 1st, price, and 2nd, condition on arrival. Prices here for selected are about 9s. to 10s. per long hundred, equal to 120 eggs, medium, 7s. 6d. to 8s. 6d. per long hundred. Small parcels of Canadians which have arrived in excellent condition have been sold at 10s. to 10s. 6d. The packing should be in long cases, as it keeps them steadier and each case should contain twelve long hundreds, say 1440 eggs, packed in layers with straw between, the latter being perfectly dry. These cases should also be divided into halves by a double cross-wise partition, which will allow of the cases being sawn into halves on arrival."

Messrs. Thomas Ronaldson & Son also convey assurances as to practicability of carriage by steamer—they are agents in London for the Furness Line—such as have already been given to the public.

Messrs. Tulloch & Co., who are among the largest dealers in eggs, say that they will be happy to place their services at the disposal of any parties wishing to avail of them. "The trade here is," they say, "carried on under somewhat peculiar conditions, but there is absolutely no doubt as to the existence of an almost unlimited market for the article."

Mr. Ferguson remarks very truly that "the $300,000 paid for eggs in this Province is an item in which all are interested. It is cash at a time when farmers see very little money. It pays for groceries for the family and dress for the wife and daughters." The interest taken by Hon. Mr. Ferguson in the extension of the egg trade is highly creditable to him. It was he, as we see by his letter to the Finance Minister, who suggested that a "good man be sent to England and France to enquire into the manner in which the trade is carried on." Readers of THE EXAMINER will have noted that a person went to England a week or two ago to make the enquiries suggested by Mr. Ferguson.

Notes and Comments.

"Faith Fenton," of the Empire, describing her trip to Prince Edward Island writes:—

"Concerning the trip over, I remember two things, that the Princess of Wales, as the steamer is proudly named, has a very handsome and genial captain, and that she keeps a dainty and well-equipped table. Later I discovered that handsome men and dainty fare are features of our little sea province."

Faith Fenton writes: "Prince Edward Island is simply charming—a lovely sea garden, fair and fertile—a bit of Ontario's choicest territory confined to the salt sea waves that dimple and sparkle about the pretty, prosperous Island as though proud of the trust. No greater contrast can be imagined than exists between Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, both islands of our great Canadian Gulf. The former, the massive breakwater of the St. Lawrence, that in sublime desolation uprears its magnificent cliffs about whose base the sea tosses and chafes while the stunted pine woods catch the protest of the waves and send it sighing through unexplored fastnesses; the latter protected by the great gull's circling sweep lies in fruitful prosperity, a pastoral of green fields and pink roadways, and woodland cradled, like a dimpled winsome child in the lap of the smiling sea. But the beauties of the Island are best discovered by driving or cycling through it. Such a trip would form a long summer delight, for there are lovely seaside spots, hospitable farm houses, quaint French settlements, charming sea-views only to be reached in this manner. On and on, in and out, over the red roads and between green hedges, past orchards and grain fields and stretches of woodland, with ever and again a glimpse of the sea. From end to end this pretty Canadian seagarden offers to tourists who love pastoral beauty, attractions unrivalled in far-off lands."

The Markets.

The shipments per Steam Navigation Company's steamers during the past eight or ten days were considerably in excess of those of the same period of last year. We presume that the excess at Summerside held good throughout the Province. Prices too, have been somewhat better than those of last year. Oats advanced at Charlottetown to 43 cents per bushel; potatoes are steady at 20 cents; and pork by carcass is in light supply at 5 1/2 to 6 cents per lb.; eggs are scarce at 17 to 18 cents per dozen. A good many well-to-do farmers are holding their surplus products, and giving attention to their fall ploughing. Prospects seem to be fairly good. The Philadelphia Press says that "the potato crop of States at its present estimate of 122,000,000 bushels, is the lowest since 1881, when it was 169,000,000 bushels, and it is really far lower than then, as the crop nine years ago was two-thirds that of the full year's just before, while now the yield is scarcely one half."

A FINE ARRAY OF NAMES.—There was a double wedding at the residence of the Rev. Jonas Johnson, Icelandic minister, on the 12th, on Harriet Street, Winnipeg, when Benjamin Einarsen and Gerdelef Stejerson, and Finniborg Thorngesson and Maltrid Johnson were married.

Sent Up For Trial.

FURTHER ENQUIRY INTO THE CHARGE AGAINST FRED. BEVAN.

THE enquiry into the charge of the larceny of a quantity of dressed meat from the slaughter house of Saunders & Campbell, between the night of the 10th and the morning of the 11th Nov., preferred against Fred. Bevan, was concluded this morning, and Bevan was sent up for trial in the Supreme Court. Mr. F. L. Hazard appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. James H. Good for the defence.

The first witness examined was Mr. James H. Good. He testified that on his way out of town to attend court at Winsloe Road on Monday, the 10th Nov., he called at Bevan's and saw him in reference to a note that had been given him for collection. There were others present besides Bevan when he called. On his way home the same afternoon his buggy top broke near Bevan's, and he called in for a rope to tie it with. He did not see Bevan there to-day.

Frank Davison, painter, was next called. He said he was at Bevan's all night on the 10th. He and Fred went upstairs together to go to bed between 11 and 12 o'clock. They did not sleep together. He heard no noise of Bevan's leaving the place during the night. They fed the horses and locked the stables before retiring. Bevan was up before him next morning. The roads were very muddy on the night of the 10th. He saw Bevan's horses and wagons next morning. There was nothing about either to indicate that they had been out during the night. He saw the lamb in Bevan's shop for the first time on Wednesday the 12th. He heard of meat being stolen from Saunders & Campbell on the following day. He heard no plotting at Bevan's on the night of the 10th. Witness worked about Bevan's place some. An old man named McCallum also works about there sometimes. When witness did painting for Bevan he got paid for it; but he did not get paid for any other little jobs he might do about the house. Bevan keeps no paint about the house; when witness wanted paint Bevan would order it. He saw a kerosene oil cask in Bevan's front shop. The head of this cask was painted white. He did not know that it was usual to paint heads of oil casks. He saw the cask for the first time yesterday. He saw it through the front window. The front shop is not now used for a beer saloon, and Bevan keeps it locked. Witness slept at Bevan's pretty much all of the present month. He was there on the night of the 7th, but did not remember how the roads were. They went to bed at Bevan's at all hours of the night; at 10, 11, 12 and 1 o'clock. Wagons would be coming and going all night; the people were coming after beer he supposed. He could not remember what time he went to bed on the night of the 7th. He went to bed first on the night of the 11th. He usually got up at 8 o'clock. After breakfast he would clean up the horses. If the lamb was in Bevan's shop before the 12th Nov. witness thought he would see it. There are lots of people frequenting Bevan's place between 8 and 10 o'clock in the evenings, and witness managed to have a nice time with the rest of the boys. He had seen women take temperate drinks there. He did not know that Bevan's was a place for receiving stolen goods. He did not know how a tub of butter that is supposed to belong to St. Dunstan's College got there. Neither did he know how certain whips, harness, fish and cabbage got there. He never drove with Bevan in an express wagon to the country; he, however, drove with him to and from the city. Witness knew Charles Weyman. He stays with George Bevan, with whom he went to New Glasgow lately. Weyman was often out at Fred. Bevan's. He often saw meat packed at George's and taken out to Fred's. There was about half a barrel. He never saw meat taken from Fred's to George's. He did not know what George and Weyman took to New Glasgow. Witness had a drive with prisoner's wife yesterday. They went to Jordan's. There was a couple of whips, a pad without breeching and a horse rug in the carriage. He took the things into Jordan's and left them there. He put them on a table. He left Mrs. Bevan there and went outside to trim the horse. There was a little child of Jordan's in the house. He heard nothing said to the child. He got all the things at Bevan's house from Mrs. Bevan. He did not know where she got the whips or who they belong to, neither had he the faintest idea why they were taken to Jordan's. Mrs. Bevan wasn't moving. He had no knowledge of stolen hay being taken to Bevan's. He knew nothing about the hay that was stolen from the Bishop or Mr. Trainor. He never met a man on the road with a load of hay between three and four o'clock in the morning. He did not see the kerosene oil cask arrive at Bevan's, nor knew how it got there. He knew no fishing about going to Jordan's. McCallum had the wagon out yesterday; but witness did not know he was going to Jordan's with fish. He thought the things taken over to Jordan's were a present to Mrs. Jordan. (Harness and whips shown). These are the articles we took to Jordan's yesterday.

Annie Macdonald, the next witness examined, said she was a servant at Bevan's. Previous to going there she was living at Byers' and DeCourcy's. She never saw a cask of kerosene oil at Bevan's; but heard Bevan talk about one being paid for. She remembered when the meat came. She saw the prisoner buy it from a man named Murphy, whose other name she did not know. This was on Tuesday week. She saw the meat weighed. It was lamb—two hind parts. Last Tuesday prisoner bought two other hind quarters. Witness saw him buy it. She knew the difference between hind and fore quarters. She did not know how the other meat that was in the front shop got there. Witness had no particular recollection of the night of the 10th. She never saw prisoner going out late at night or early in the morning. She knew Charles Weyman and young Weatherbie, and had seen both at Bevan's. This closed the evidence. On the prisoner's being asked if he had anything to say, he made the following statement:—

On Tuesday night week four lads drove to my place. Two got out at the turn, and the others drove up. They asked me if I wanted to buy some meat. I said that I did, if I got it the way I wanted it, and got it cheap. I gave them $3.25 for the meat and lifted it out of the wagon and put it into the beer house. They then went off. I heard no more about the meat until the officers found it. I do not know who the persons were that I bought the meat from.

The Magistrate said that he thought the evidence against the prisoner was as strong as it could be, considering the class of testimony, and sent Bevan up for trial in the Supreme Court for larceny. In the meantime, he ordered that Bevan be remanded to jail to await trial for stealing the tub of butter and the cask of kerosene oil.

The Jamaica Exhibition.

When Adam Brown, Esq., Honorary Commissioner representing Canada at this Exhibition, which opens next January, visited the Maritime Provinces in September last, he made a trip to Charlottetown, and as our readers will remember, he addressed a meeting at the Board of Trade Rooms, relating to the Jamaica Exhibition, and employed our Provincial Exhibition Secretary, Mr. A. McNeill, to procure and forward, on behalf of exhibitors, as varied a collection as possible of the products of the farm and of our fisheries. The result, so far, is that Mr. McNeill forwarded per steamer Coila yesterday to Halifax, thence per steamer Beta to Kingston, Jamaica, 20 cases of exhibits, total weight 2,470 lbs., on behalf of exhibitors, viz:—

John D. McLeod, merchant, Charlottetown.—1 bag oatmeal, 1 bag pearl barley and 1 package farina.

Morris & Hyndman, Brighton.—1 case milt and 1 bushel barley.

John Kelly & Co., Charlottetown, produce dealers.—9 barrels potatoes, each barrel a separate variety.

James C. Lawson, Stanhope.—A sheaf of white oats, half-bushel potatoes and a hand-made map of P. E. Island.

D. Farquharson & Son, merchants, Charlottetown.—A box of farina.

John T. Rowe, Charlottetown.—A canister of raw chicory and a canister of manufactured chicory.

Archibald Currie, merchant, Souris.—A box of boneless codfish and a box of boneless fish.

Hickey & Nicholson, tobacco manufacturers, Charlottetown.—2 sample boxes of their tobacco.

David Rogers, merchant, Summerside.—1 bag white oats.

Samuel Martin, farmer, Bay View.—1 sheaf tartarian oats.

Hon. Joseph O. Arsenault, merchant, Wellington.—A case canned lobsters.

Richard Jardine, Murray Harbor.—A sample bottle of Pure Cod Liver Oil (his own make).

John McKay, Murray Harbor.—A sample package of cranberries.

James J. Wisner, miller, East River.—A bag of oatmeal, manufactured from white oats.

Daniel Davies, merchant, Charlottetown, from his Murray Harbor establishment.—1 quintal dried hake, a box of dried haddock and a box of dried codfish.

Horace Hazard.—A case of canned goods.

Geo. Mackenzie, farmer, Thorudale, Lot 48.—A bag of white oats, and a sheaf of the same.

John Newson, Ch'town.—A bag of Ludoga wheat from the Warren Farm.

James E. Grant, dealer in canned goods, Charlottetown.—10 cases canned goods, consisting of mackerel, herring, lobsters, clams, and meats. Also a kit of mess mackerel.

E. R. Brow, Eastview Farm, Charlottetown Royalty.—A package of field peas.

John Partridge, farmer, Charlottetown Royalty.—A sheaf white oats (Egyptian), and a sheaf of black oats.

Wm. Smallwood, farmer, Lot 48, bag of white cluster oats.

John Berrigan, Royalty, bag of black oats.

The Provincial Government are also procuring samples of grain, butter, cheese, potatoes, fish, etc., for the Jamaica Exhibition—part of which were shipped per Coila yesterday, the balance, namely, butter, cheese and some other samples not yet selected, will be forwarded by next steamer leaving Halifax, December 15.

Mr. Newson has prepared a large and ample stand, in the style of a pyramid, on which the P. E. Island trophy will be placed for exhibition. The trophy will be ornamented and surmounted by National flags and the Island Coat of Arms, bearing the motto, "Parca sub ingenti."

A Landmark Gone.

In the death of Thomas Crabbe, Esq., on the 19th inst., Summerside lost one of her important and oldest citizens. Mr. Crabbe lived to see the small village of Green's shore bound up to the present live town of Summerside. Who of the many visitors in times past has not sat down to a good dinner at Crabbe's Hotel? The deceased held, in the course of his life, important positions in the town,—among them he was postmaster for a number of years.

The Drama.

An English paper reports that "the revival of "Anthony and Cleopatra" at the Princess's for Mrs. Langtry, which is absorbing the attention of the Hon. Lewis Wingfield, is undoubtedly, a very magnificent production. We hear of an elaborate banquet scene in Cleopatra's palace, in which will be introduced a gorgeous ballet, representing the conflict of Day and Night, and of another elaborate spectacular set representing Anthony's triumphal entry and meeting with Cleopatra at the gates of Alexandria. At this moment is to occur a "march past," which is to make the Alhambra and Empire look to their laurels, and another ballet of Glories and Fames. But Mr. Wingfield being an artist, is not likely to overlook the sadder and more poetic effects to be secured from Shakespeare's play. There is, for instance, to be a beautiful sunset scene by the banks of the Nile, with a far away view into the dim and mysterious desert, where Anthony stabs himself; and all who have seen it are loud in their praises of the scene in the last act which represents the interior of Cleopatra's monument, which is intended to recall bits of Dante's Inferno, with its colossal figures and weird effects of light. Mr. Coghlan, who, of course, is to play Anthony, has arrived at home, and has been hard at work with Mr. Wingfield going over the play preparatory to rehearsal."

It will be pleasing to all the personal friends whom Mr. Coghlan has made in this Province to learn that a telegram has been received at his summer residence in Souris which states that Anthony and Cleopatra has been a "splendid success."
