LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Provident Mutual Once More.

Sir,—Referring to Mr. Theo. L. Chappelle's brief communication in Tuesday's issue of your paper, I have only to say that the question raised as to whether I am or am not insured in the Provident Mutual does not affect, in the slightest degree, the validity of the statements I have made respecting that institution. I may, however, inform Mr. Chappelle that the moribund association in question handled as much of my money as it did of his, and in all probability, more; and further, that if I wished to become a member of the New York concern I can do so on the same terms that he himself joined it. Had I no connection with the Provident Mutual, would this opportunity be now afforded to me? The public will thus see that I am not guilty of base deception, as charged against me by Mr. Chappelle.

It would be interesting to know the position which Mr. C. occupies at present with respect to the Provident Mutual and the Reserve Fund of New York. As the former association is now in process of being swallowed by the latter, I infer from Mr. C's reticence in regard to the P. M., that he, too, is about to abandon the sinking ship to her inevitable fate.

Yours truly,
ONE OF THE DUPES.

West Royalty School Examination.

The examination of this school took place on Saturday, 27th inst. There were fifty-one children present. A large number of parents and visitors were in attendance, and evinced much interest in all the exercises. The examination was conducted by Mr. A. Stinson, teacher from Wiltshire, and Mr. R. Bourke, who spoke very highly of the high state of efficiency of the school. The teacher is A. F. Bell. Especially pleasing were the recitations given by Sarah Essory, May Dixon, George Cameron, Frank Percy Ball, and J. H. Smith. The following is the prize list:—

A Famine in Servant Girls.

The famine in servant girls, in a state where there are some 60,000 more women than men and wages in manufactures, are frequently down almost to the starvation point, is one of the most impressive features of our civilization. Wages are forced up by the competition for domestics until $4 a week for a maid of all work—quite equivalent to $8 a week, the quality of the fare and lodging being taken into account—is readily paid. All this while the Metropolitan railroad company is able to find able-bodied men to work at watering horses for $5 a week. These practical remarks are called out by an incident which occurred at Roxbury the other day. Quite early in the evening a carriage drove up in front of a gentleman's house; the front door bell was rung and the "hired girl" of the family inquired for by name, and asked to step to the carriage. One of the family happened to open the door and sent out the girl. At the carriage she found a lady, who endeavored to induce her to leave the place by an offer of higher wages and extra privileges. The girl was taken somewhat aback, and told the lady to come again for her answer. In the meantime she had informed her employer of the affair and announced her intention to remain. The lady of the house therefore awaited the second arrival of the carriage, and had an eloquent oration quite ready to deliver as soon as the door bell should be rung. This time, however, the anxious searcher after a new servant did not approach the house via the front door, but stole around to the side gate and held the interview in the kitchen—a very unsatisfactory one. She doesn't know what she missed by not coming to the front door.—Boston Record.

Dudley and O'Donovan.

SOME SCENES AT THE TRIAL OF THE CASE—THE EXAMINER TELLS HIS STORY, AND IS ABUSED AND TAUNTED BY HIS FAIR ASSAILANT.

After a jury was obtained, and the facts of the case had been set forth, O'Donovan Rossa was called to the stand by the prosecution. Being asked his name he said Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa.

"That's not his name," shouted Mrs. Dudley; "where did he get the Rossa from?"

The next question was, "What is your business?"

"Dynamiter," shouted Mrs. Dudley.

Then Rossa said, "Journalist."

O'Donovan said that Mrs. Dudley had agreed to donate $900 in instalments; she said she did not like dynamite where it would take innocent lives; O'Donovan testified he did not like that business either.

As the witness said this, Mrs. Dudley arose to her feet, and glaring at the witness shouted, "Liar." The prisoner was forced to her seat. Witness continued that he told the prisoner his only purpose was to liberate Ireland.

"Getting money from servant girls and swindling them," interjected Mrs. Dudley.

Witness identified notes sent to him by the prisoner and told how, in response to one of them, he met her in the Stewart building where Mrs. Dudley offered him a receipt to sign but he refused to sign it.

"You're a liar," shrieked Mrs. Dudley. "You never read the receipt; you didn't dare go so far," and then, turning to the jury, she shouted, "You had better get away from that man, you can't tell what will happen; he's only perjuring himself."

In another moment Mrs. Dudley cried imploringly, "Won't somebody please knock that man out of the window?"

O'Donovan went on to say that he suggested that they go to a more appropriate place to talk the matter over, and as they left the telegraph office she shot him. He fell.

"You got scared and dropped," shouted the woman.

O'Donovan said he did not know how many shots were fired.

"No, you were too frightened, Jeremiah," remarked the prisoner, and then she added, "You cried, 'For God's sake don't kill me. You forgot to tell that.'"

When Jeremiah showed where the bullet struck him, Mrs. Dudley interposed, "I want the bullet back, it was only lent."

Witness said he was about fifty-three years old, and Mrs. Dudley remarked that he was too nervous to tell exactly. Rossa said when he returned to this country in 1871 he came on business connected with Irish revolutionary work.

"And you murdered people, you cur," exclaimed Mrs. Dudley.

Witness remained only a week on this trip. He said the next time he came he was sent by the English ministry, "because I was an Irishman and was a member of the Irish Revolutionary society."

"I wished we had kept you in England," said Mrs. Dudley, "there would not have been a particle left of you."

Witness said he thought that his first interview with Mrs. Dudley, lasted twenty minutes.

"About an hour and a half" corrected the prisoner.

"I don't think so," said O'Donovan with a smile.

Witness said that the prisoner had stated that she disagreed with her husband on points they discussed, and he may have introduced her to his associates. Witness said he was asked by the prisoner to step to the street, where she shot him. He believed she had shot again after he had fallen, but he could not tell how many shots were fired.

"I thought so; weren't you frightened O'Donovan?" interrupted the prisoner.

Witness said his legs were paralyzed that afternoon, and the prisoner added: "From fear."

During the remainder of O'Donovan's giving of evidence, Mrs. Dudley kept up her remarks of scorn and sarcasm. Witness admitted that he had written in his paper, the United Irishman, that the murder of innocent women and children in any dynamite explosion was "a great triumph."

As O'Donovan said this Mrs. Dudley exclaimed: "No honest Irishman would talk such doctrine as that."

Articles from United Irishman were read. One suggested that all Irishmen in London should overturn their stoves at a given time and thus set fire to the city. Witness said he thought he wrote that, and that the plan was only equal to one England had proposed to be done in this country.

As O'Donovan stepped down from the witness stand, he passed the prisoner on his way to the door. As he did so Mrs. Dudley shouted in his face, "Down with dynamites; God Save the Queen," and then added tauntingly, "Don't kill me; don't kill me, for God's sake."

FAST TIME.—The eastern delegates of the American Society of Civil Engineers, returned to Baltimore on the 27th ult., from Deer Park on a Baltimore and Ohio special when they went to their respective homes. Very fast time was made in the run from Deer Park to Washington, the entire distance 200 miles, being covered in five and a quarter hours, the actual running rate being 50 miles per hour. The distance from Kelsar to Martinsburg, 102 miles, was made in 115½ minutes, and from Washington Junction to Washington, 43½ miles, in 49 minutes.

It is stated in Paris that the French forces have finally evacuated Formosa.
