DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X E
I S L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

HOW RIGHT MRS. HOOTY WAS

The truly wise will never spurn
An opportunity to learn.
—Mrs. Hooty.

Rough Brother North Wind began blowing hard in the morning. He began very early in the morning. He blew and he blew and he blew and the longer he blew the harder he blew. It began snowing early in the morning. The snow fell and fell and fell, and rough Brother North Wind blew and blew and blew. Sitting on her eggs inside a comfortable hollow in a big tree in the Green Forest, Mrs. Hooty the big Horned Owl listened to the shrieking of rough Brother North Wind and the hissing of the snow that he was driving before him. She listened and she chuckled. She couldn't feel a breath of rough Brother North Wind. None of the icy snow came in that snug hollow. She thought of the winter storms of other years when in an outside nest she had to sit on her

She guessed that he was sitting close to the trunk of a big hemlock tree, under the wide spreading branches.

precious eggs to keep them warm, while the snow covered her, and rough Brother North Wind did his best to blow her right out of the nest. The storm grew worse. She could feel even that big tree tremble. But that was all. She could hear the snapping of dead limbs that Brother North Wind was breaking from other trees. Once or twice she heard the crash of a falling tree. She wondered where Hooty was, and she was sorry for him. She guessed that he was sitting close to the trunk of a big hemlock tree, under the wide spreading branches. He would be protected there, but he wouldn't be as warm and comfortable as she was. "I wonder why I never thought of nesting in a hollow tree before. I know some of the family have done that, but I always thought it was rather foolish. Now I know better. The only trouble is, hollows big enough are hard to find. Bobby Coon and Unc' Billy Possum take most of the hollow trees. My goodness, how hard rough Brother West Wind is blowing!"

Contract Bridge

A TWICE-TOLD TALE

South's bidding error in the following deal consisted in repeating exactly the same story he had told before.

South dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

♠ 5	♣ K 10 9 6 2	♦ A 10 8 3	♥ A 8 6
♠ 10 8 6 2	♣ Q 4	♦ K 10 9 6 2	♥ 4 3
♠ 7 2	♣ K 10 9	♦ 7 3	♥ J 8 3
♠ A 10 8 6 2	♣ 7 3	♦ 7 3	♥ J 8 3
♠ Q 7 2	♣ A 7 5	♦ K Q 9 4	♥ Q J 5

The bidding?

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	1♥	Pass
1NT	Pass	3♦	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

North did not pass the three-trump bid quickly—in fact, he gave long thought to the possibility that either four hearts or five diamonds might be a superior contract. The singleton spade of course a liability at notrump. However, in the final analysis, there wasn't much that North could do but pass. He could not justifiably assume that South was "holding out" heart support—for all North could tell, South might have nothing in hearts and might be well prepared against a spade opening at notrump. As for a five-diamond contract—North was in no better position to insist on that than to rebid his far-from-solid five-card heart suit. So, hoping for the best, North deferred to South's judgment.

It was an unfortunate bit of courtesy! West led his club ten, giving South a breathing spell, but South still could count only eight tricks, and when he passed a heart into West, hoping for another club lead, West promptly shifted to his low spade. The Queen was neatly trapped, and down South went!

Discussing the hand, and admitting that four hearts (or even five diamonds) would have been cold against any defense, South said that he had been afraid to raise hearts, even over North's three diamonds because he (South) had such a "minny." He had preferred to try for a mere nine-trick contract. What South ignored, however, was that he had already announced, by bidding one no-trump over one heart, that he was not strong; after that announcement, surely he could have given secondary heart support, and left the decision to North! After all, South's holdings in the unbid suits were not very impressive!

Rough Brother West Wind was blowing. He was blowing his hardest. It was a great storm. When it was over late that night, and the first twinkling stars came out, Mrs. Hooty came out. Hooty joined her. "What a storm!" exclaimed Hooty. "It was one of the worst storms I have ever known." "Was it?" asked Mrs. Hooty. "Don't you know it was?" snapped Hooty. "I didn't mind it," said Mrs. Hooty. "Do you know what?" "What?" asked Hooty. "Mrs. Hooty gave Hooty a funny look. "I have learned something," said she. "What have you learned?" Hooty asked. "I have learned how to be comfortable in bad weather," replied Mrs. Hooty. "No more outside nests for us. We are going to nest next year right in this same hollow tree. Our babies are going to be snug and warm no matter what the weather it. Rough Brother North Wind can't touch them in here. Now you come in here and set on those eggs while I go hunting."

Hooty did, and although he didn't wholly approve of nesting in a hollow tree, he had to admit to himself that it was wonderfully comfortable in there.
