TWO NOTABLE POINTS

There are two points worth noting about the hand below—both simple, but both of recurring importance.

South dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

The first simple point concerns the bidding, specifically North's jump spade raise on the second round. Many players, mistaking to take a very conservative view about trump support, would equivocate with a raise to only three spades—and by so doing would give their partners an insoluble problem, whether to pass or press to game. North's four-spade bid was correct in the light of South's spade re-bid.

The fact that South did not make four spades was no reflection on North's bidding. It was South's weak play that was responsible, and which forms our second point. West's lead was a low heart; East put up the ace and returned a heart. South won with the king and promptly ruffed his remaining heart—but from that time on he had no real chance for the contract. He ended up by conceding the heart trick, one trump and two diamonds.

South should have deferred his heart ruff until it would do him more good. The logical line was to draw two rounds of trumps, to cash the two club honors and ruff a club, and then to trump the heart on the table. Now, making use of this entry to dummy when it would retain full value, South should ruff another club, lead to the diamond ace and discard a diamond on the established fifth club. If East chose to ruff this

MRS. GROUSE GIVES ADVICE

Sound advice that's sorely needed. All too often goes unheeded. —Old Mother Nature.

The Black Shadows were just starting to creep through the Green Forest. The snow lay deep and soft. Thunderer the Grouse, Mrs. Grouse, and several of the children, now as big as their parents, were making ready for the night. They had spent two nights up in evergreen trees. The young grouse didn't altogether like it.

"Have we got to spend another night up in a tree?" asked one. "It will be safer to," said Mrs. Grouse.

"I don't see why we can't sleep down under the snow," said the young Grouse. "We've done it before. I like it best down there."

"It's all right now," said Mrs. Grouse, "but it may not be all right in the morning."

"I don't see what difference the morning will make," said the young Grouse.

"It may not make any difference, and then again it may. It all depends on the weather," replied Mrs. Grouse.

"What difference does the weather make?" asked another.

"It can make all the difference in the world," replied Mrs. Grouse. "It might rain in the night."

"Rain doesn't hurt anybody. If it should rain that is all the more reason we should be down in the snow. The snow is so deep we would be perfectly dry down there."

"That is true," replied his mother. "He would simply be using up the high trump."

"Have we got to spend another night up on a tree?" asked one.

"Well, supposing he should? What of it? Do you know of any warmer place than down there in the snow? I guess Jack Frost couldn't hurt us if he tried."

"He might make you prisoners. How would you like that?" replied Mrs. Grouse.

The young grouse looked at their mother as if they didn't understand what she had said. "How in the world could Jack Frost make prisoners of us?" one of them inquired. "And why would he want to anyway? We slept down in the snow last night, and Jack Frost was around. He didn't make prisoners of us. I don't see how he could anyway."

"There was a very good reason why he didn't make prisoners of you last night," said Mrs. Grouse. "What reason?" one of the youngsters wanted to know.

"There was no rain," replied Mrs. Grouse.

The young Grouse looked at each other. They were puzzled. "They were very much puzzled. 'What did that have to do with it?' asked one.

"The snow was dry, just as it is now. It is only with wet snow that Jack Frost could make you prisoners. Then he could freeze a hard crust over your heads, and you may not be able to break through it," explained Mrs. Grouse.
