CUNNING CROCODILES.

Their Sly Habits in Their Moments of Danger Described.

The following is a fair sample of how cunningly crocodiles, in common with all other wild animals, can conceal themselves in moments of danger, says a writer in the Westminster Gazette. After a happy week spent in the jungle with a friend of mine, we halted for breakfast, before making the last stage for headquarters and home, at a place called Poonarhyn—Anglice, garden of flowers—and while at breakfast were amused by watching a number of crocodiles, about eight or ten, sunning themselves on the surface of a small lake, or tank, as it is there called, of about an acre in extent. A sudden thought struck me.

"I say, Murray, what fun it would be to try and catch some of these beggars in a net." "Bravo!" said he. "Let's try it presently. Appu, send the horse-keeper to the village and tell him to bring up all the men he can find and some long fishing nets. We will give a good santosum" (present).

The villagers scented some fun, and with the further stimulus of a santosum very soon turned up to the number of thirty. It was now 11 o'clock and scorching hot, the air quivering over the bare, hilly plain in which the pond was situated. It was breast deep, as we knew, including about one foot or eighteen inches of heavy mud. We tied two nets together so as to make one long enough to reach across the tank, about thirty yards, and this was heavily weighted along the bottom and arranged to be drawn with long ropes from each shore. Immediately behind the net came a line, and men about a yard apart, with long, pointed poles with which to prod the mud along the bottom of the net, and so drive the malingering gentlemen into proper position in front of the net. My friend and his servant (for all entered into the sport) followed close up to the second line. At it we all now went, splashing, shouting, stamping and hauling, but—a big but—not a sign did we find of a single one of the brutes that we had seen before us when we came to the edge of the water. We dragged that water backward and forward more than once, but our only reward was a deadly thirst that lasted us till late that night. They had burrowed deeper into the mud than we could reach them, for nothing—I doubt if even a rat—could have escaped unseen out of the water.

The Doom of the Gondolier.

The Canadian tourist for several years has complained that the obtrusive western spirit is slowly transforming the memorial spots of the Old World.

Somebody made a plaint not long ago that he found an advertisement of "The Mastodon Minstrels" on the Castle of Chillon and struck a steam elevator in the tower of a mediæval pile on the Rhine. Still more pathetic is the wail of the religious pilgrim who says that the toot of the locomotive interferes with meditation now on the Sea of Galilee and the messenger boy jostles you at the temple gate. Sherbet and sour pomegranate wine have given way in Damascus to absinthe and gin-fizz, and people who have wandered in the footsteps of "Eothen" on the Trod complain of the western explorer's mounds of dirt.

If there is any place where the musing tourist loved to linger and breathe the sunshine mixed with Tuscan melodies, it is Venice, and if there was anything in Venice that charmed the fancy and delighted the ear, it was the gondolier, sacred in romance and art.

Well, the gondolier has met his doom. He must disappear like the sacred and picturesque brigand who has reigned so long in opera with a red sash and a velveteen jacket. A Yankee firm has made a contract with the city of lagoons to put naphtha launches with all modern conveniences on the Grand Canal. So perishes the romance of the Doges.

To Cure Pedal Ills.

Very few women who have attained years of discretion are free from corns and kindred ills. These are invariably the result of badly fitting shoes, either too large or too small. To cure them one of the first steps is to remedy the cause of the trouble. Shoes should be purchased which bind the feet in no place and which are as soft as is consistent with use. They may look a little less beautiful than the narrow, pointed binding affairs which seem the acme of loveliness to the badly-trained eye, but the apparent loss is more than compensated for by the improvement in the appearance of the foot itself. Along with the change in the style of shoe, the corns, ingrowing nails and the like should be treated. Soft corns should be wrapped every night and morning in a piece of linen wet with turpentine. This will soon cause them to disappear. For more serious pedal ills a chiropodist should be consulted.

As often as possible, it is a good thing to go barefooted. In one's own room sometimes one may for an hour or so treat the feet to the luxury of an air bath, and, next to the water bath, nothing is more satisfying to tired, hot feet. The foot bath in water should be a daily rite. Not only the feet but all the body is rested and refreshed by it. After exposure to cold or dampness the feet should be rubbed with alcohol, and, indeed, the alcohol bath once a week or so is an excellent thing, even for feet that have not been exposed.

The Art of Eating.

"When my children get to the proper age," said the man who was smoking a briar pipe, "I intend to have them taken in hand by some competent person and given a thorough instruction in the art of eating, and further in the science of finding out what to eat and ordering."

"What do you mean?" inquired the man who sat next to him.

"I mean this: The average American citizen is woefully deficient in knowledge of what he can get to eat. He falls down when it comes to ordering a dinner. The great majority of people in this country are brought up frugally at home, and do not know anything but the commonest dishes. The consequence is that when a man goes into a restaurant for dinner or to a hotel he gazes helplessly at the bill of fare, and sees many things of which he does not know the component parts. He dare not order anything that he is not sure of for fear of ridicule, and he falls back on roast beef and mashed potatoes. The fact is, he doesn't know anything but roast beef.

"Now, sir, my children are going to know what's what when it comes to eating. 'No roast beef domination!' shall be my household slogan."—St. Paul World.

A Case More Wonderful than Dr. Rose's —A Lady Dying of Brights' Disease is Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

PORTLAND, Feb. 12.—The people of this neighborhood have not yet finished talking of the remarkable cure of diabetes effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills in the case of Dr. E. A. Rose, of this village. The doctor is authority for the statement that his case is totally eclipsed by that of a lady, a patient of his, whom Brights' disease had brought to the verge of the grave. He prescribed Dodd's Kidney Pills for her, and, thanks to them, she is now cured. These pills are manufactured by Dr. L. A. Smith & Co., Toronto, and are sold by all dealers, or will be mailed on receipt of price; fifty cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

A FEW DON'TS.

Don't allow a cold wind to strike the eyes.

Don't try to do eye-work with the light shining in the face. Don't have colored shades on the lamps; use white or ground glass.

Don't go directly from a warm room into a cold, raw atmosphere.

Don't open the eyes under water in bathing, especially in salt water.

Don't let any strong light, like that from electricity, shine directly into the eyes.

Don't strain the eyes by reading, sewing, or any like occupation, with an imperfect light.

Don't bathe the inflamed eyes with cold water; that which is as warm as it can be borne is better.

Don't sleep opposite a window, in such manner that a strong light will strike the eyes on awakening.

Don't, above all, have the children sleep so that the morning sun shall shine in their faces to arouse them.

Don't expect to get another pair of eyes when these have been destroyed by neglect or ill-use; but give them fair treatment, and they will serve faithfully to the end.—Housekeeping.

How to Take a Pill.

The next time you require to "take a pill" try the following plan. Place the pills well back in the mouth, take a large swallow of water, and, presto, the pills are gone. Take Hawker's Liver Pills they are small, nicely sugar coated, do not gripe, do not sicken and are purely vegetable. They cure sick Headaches and Biliousness. Sold everywhere, only 25 cents.

Despite the alleged discontent of the British Columbia sealers against the decision of the Behring sea arbitration, it appears, that those interested in the sealing industry have not been discouraged, but have already taken steps towards following the sealing business to the utmost limit of their power. Although the session is so early 51 vessels are already en route to the sealing grounds; 34 have cleared from Victoria for the Asiatic side, that is Japanese waters, where they will commence to follow the seals up into the Northern Pacific, while 13 vessels have cleared for the coast of British Columbia. Two vessels have left Vancouver, and two have wintered in Japan, making 51 in all. It is abundantly evident that those who have invested their money in sealing are satisfied that there is still something in it, notwithstanding the alleged severity of the regulations adopted by the Paris tribunal.

The Americans are bitterly opposed to anything Canadian, but they seem to sink their antipathy when Canadian whiskey is concerned. No one need pity you, if you die of consumption, without having tried Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, "the kind that cures" coughs, colds, bronchitis and all pulmonary disease. Every bottle warranted. No oily taste like others. In big bottles 50cents and $1.00, at all druggists.
