FLASH-LIGHT TRIUMPH

THE BURSTING OF A SOAP BUBBLE CAUGHT BY THE CAMERA.

Aided by an Electric Spark—An Operation Which Required Less Than One Two-Hundredth Part of a Second—Lord Rayleigh's Feat.

Lord Rayleigh, in delivering his second lecture at the Royal Institution, recently, gave an explanation of some of the methods he had recourse to when endeavoring to become acquainted with what, on account of rapidity of motion, would otherwise elude observation. The most obvious method of observing what was going on when changes were very rapid was, he said, to get an instantaneous picture. For this purpose the degree of "instantaneity" had to be varied considerably. By means of the magnesium flash, produced by blowing powder of magnesium into a flame, a brilliant light of great photographic qualities was generated. Although it occupied about the tenth part of a second, and was instantaneous enough for babies and many other objects, it would not do for all purposes. The electric spark, however, served for almost anything that ever happened, as it could be reduced in duration below one-millionth part of a second, during which time there were not many things which could do much. This method might be turned to excellent account in all kinds of observations. He had used it himself in many cases when he did not know in the least what was going to be revealed. Many complicated phenomena moved so quickly that it was impossible to know what took place, but by the light of the flash one could see what transpired at some particular moment, and that would often give the key to the enigma. He himself had photographed the breaking up of a soap bubble, a process which occupied between the two-hundredth and three-hun-

TRIUMPHS OF SCIENCE.

Argon Experiments Develop a New Theory of Aurora Borealis.

A dispatch from London says: The detection of gas argon in the atmosphere is being followed by a rapid series of discoveries of great interest. The chemists have long known theoretically of the existence of another element, which is called helium, and which was revealed by the spectroscope in the sun's rays. It is not known to exist on this planet. Professor Ramsay a few days ago, in order to find whether there was something in the world with which argon would keep company, was examining some extremely rare earth found in Norway and known as cleveite. When this mineral is treated with a weak sulphuric acid it gives off a gas which has hitherto been regarded as nitrogen. The professor found by close examination that it is not nitrogen, but argon, and, moreover, there was associated with it another gas which he found to be, to use his own words, "gas which had not yet been separated." He submitted it to Professor Crooke, and the result is to show that the gas thus found is helium.

M. Berthelot, continuing in his experiments in Paris, found that in manipulating argon it developed at an ordinary pressure a magnificent fluorescent substance of greenish yellow color, and characterized by a spectrum similar to that of the aurora borealis. From this he deduced that the northern lights were caused by the fluorescent matter derived from argon and engendered through the influence of electrical emanations developed in the atmosphere.

Wool Scouring With Naphtha.

Naphtha is used as the cleansing substance in a new method of scouring wool. A pump forces the naptha through the wool, extracting all the natural oil, and it is claimed that the naptha does not injure the fibre of the wool, as alkali cleansing, but leaves the fleece in better condition than when cleansed by any other process. Another important feature of the new method is that after the grease is extracted from the wool it may be again extracted from the naptha in a pure state, thereby becoming valuable as a medicinal agent or for a saponification into the purest of soaps. A plant working this method is said to have secured 500,000 pounds of wool, and a product of 80,000 pounds in pure wool oil had been saved.

A Compass Improvement.

A modification of the ordinary "trough" compass has been devised by Captain P. J. Dixon of Beaufort House, Walham Green, S. W., says London Invention. In its modified form both the dial and base are of transparent material, so that even on a dark night the points of the compass, it is stated, may be read by the diffused light of the clouds by holding the instrument above the head, or a transparent map, when such is available, can be placed under the compass, and over a phosphorescent surface may be examined, the points of the compass at the same time being clearly visible.

"Fire Globe" for Room Warming.

A "fire globe" for warming apartments has been invented by the Rev. T. Batty of Colchester. The globe can be fixed upon any ordinary gas bracket and the inventor guarantees that it shall increase the heat of the gas flame by 300 per cent. and warm a bedroom in an hour for the cost of one farthing. A modification of the same device makes it applicable to foot warmers.

For Cheese Selling.

A device which removes the element of guess work from the weight of a piece of cheese when cutting it has been recently patented by F. J. Siewers, of Galena, Ill. A cheese is supported on a platform or table connected with a dial, the moving of the platform a certain distance causing the dial to indicate a pound or fraction thereof or any desired weight, when a knife will be brought into operation to cut the exact amount designated on the dial from the cheese. The cut is made on a line drawn from the centre, the operative mechanism of the dial having been previously set in accordance with the known weight of the entire cheese. It is an interesting invention, but a good deal depends upon whether cheesemongers as a whole are particularly anxious to cut precisely the weight of cheese that is ordered, and not an ounce or two over.

20 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

20 Failures to Cure

For 20 years I suffered the torments of the damned with blind and itching piles. Had I known of any cure I would not have hesitated to have given hundreds of dollars to obtain it. I followed the instructions of an eminent physician in using syringe treatments, I used Fowler's Pile Cure and 20 others of different kinds. From some a little relief was gained, but nothing approached a cure. I was about resigned to the fate of having to pass through an almost uninterrupted course of suffering so long as I lived, when Chase's Ointment was brought to my notice. The statements in regard to it were so strong and bore with them a sense of conviction sufficient to overcome my skepticism in regard to its being no better than the rest. I used it, with the result of receiving immediate relief and permanent cure. For weeks and weeks I was fearfully afraid of a return to misery, but it did not occur. I started using Chase's Ointment, hoping for relief and realized a cure that is permanent. I do not believe there ever was a worse case of blind and itching piles than mine, which leads me to think there is not a case to be recorded that Chase's Ointment will not cure.

Yours truly,

THE KENT CASE.

Physicians Universally Admit the Diagnosis to have been Correct.

OTTAWA, April 22—The diagnosis in the case of Mr. G. H. Kent, of this city, whose recovery from Bright's disease by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills has been so extensively chronicled appears to have been a very correct one. The swelling of the body and extremities to an abnoral size the fearful convulsions and subsequent insensibility, the racking pains, the formation of the hard ridges across the pit of the stomach and the great loss of albumen are all symptoms of this terrible disease, and it is universally admitted by all who have been approached on the subject that the case was unmistakable in its character. It is also universally admitted that he owes his restored health to the above mentioned remedy.
