ELLEN'S DIARY

Aromatic Narcissi Bloom Now In The Lawn Border

The "June Lilies", the pure white of the narcissi, bloom now in the lawn's border. We kneel to catch the scent we think is one of the most aromatic "this side of Heaven"... Indeed we recall that back in childhood, when the Minister at a Sabbath morning service in Church, with the surroundings so hushed that even the odd stamp of a horse at the hitching rail or post beyond the open door, seemed to be a more or less unholy sound, spoke of the lilies in Heavenly meadows, we smiled within, pleased to fancy it would be the narcissi pure and scented, we should some time— if, of course those golden gates would admit us—view there!

We sowed an edging of white alyssum about the old flowerbed on the lawn this morning to be a desired rendezvous for bees' pleasurings... Peter was at play then in the sandpile under the old birch tree, busy, as are such young ones, with his toys: making roads for the small machines he would presently operate, fancifully suiting varied sounds to them there with the sun filtering down on his head, and a light wing of day on a cheek.

Alex and his one sister were then walking up the lane. In a pleasant outing, they had been to the mailbox. These days one can find many excuses to loiter on the way: stop to search for a nest hidden in the grass at the lane-side; watch the huge taxi down to fish in the stream; listen to a woodpecker's tattoo. And invariably one will pause on the bridge there in the alders to look down in the depths below. What exciting things are to be found there Furtive trout, tiny minnows, snails, water-striders. And always, always on sunny summery days, one may find that face smiling or frowning, gay or dejected there, that is you.

With the cropping at Alderlea now complete, pieces of fencing claimed the attention of our farmers today. Off about a far field, it was, their absence leaving the home-surroundings deserted for the time... When we come now to the barns it is to find the cows' stalls empty, and only the odd calf left indoors. Maybe a barn-cat sits misleadingly pensive at an entrance to some alley leading to mouse-town, or on a sunny sill, watches the darting swallows that do business up along the eaves. Lofts and mows are areas where moted sunbeams play on the remaining straw and hay, making these desired places for the bantam or larger hen who would steal a nest away. How intriguing chicks hatched thus are. Motherless incubated chicks have their charm. Chicks hatched from a setting according to plans made by the farmwife, too have an appeal. But to us, those which come unbidden and unexpected from a stolen nest, winsome little well-mothered and tended, smart wildings, are the most attractive of all!

"It's curious" Mack commented in a reflective mood this evening "how fast this month is passing. I heard Granddad say to Mr... last Fall: 'It's said that if you want the winter to fly, just put your name to a six month's promissory note. And before you know it, it's spring!' I think June goes fast" he smiled a bit ruefully "because of those Grades' end Exams!" And this day? Night claims it now. Tucks up every living creature under its dusky wings to keep them snug until morning."

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.....

Newly Formed Women's Club To Receive Charter June 22

A new service group, the recently organized Zonto Club of Charlottetown will receive its official charter from Zonto International at a presentation dinner at The Charlottetown Hotel on Saturday, June 22nd., it was announced by charter president, Miss Mabel Matheson.

Zonto International is a women's service organization of well over 450 clubs in 19 countries, all dedicated to the performance of needed services in their communities and to furthering the progress of women and of better international relations throughout the world.

The charter will be presented to the new club by the chief guest of honor, Miss Dorothy Etz of Medford, Mass., U.S.A. Miss Etz is Governor of District Number One, of Zonto International. District Number One comprises the Eastern section of U.S.A. and the Atlantic Provinces.

The new club's officers will be installed by Mrs. Olga Cloake of the Zonto Club of Toronto. Mrs. Cloake is the official organizer of the new group.

Invitations have been issued and numerous provincial and civic leaders are expected to attend. Out of town guests include Miss Helen Cleveland and Mrs. Murial Stupart who are members of the Zonto Club of Toronto which organized the new group. Miss Cleveland is a Past International President of Zonto.

Other out of town Zontians attending will be Miss Elsie Moss of Medford, Mass., a member of the International Hostess Committee of Zonto International, and Miss Constance MacFarlane of Halifax and formerly of Charlottetown. Miss MacFarlane is a well known marine biologist and is a past president of the Zonto Club of Halifax. Miss MacFarlane will officially welcome the new club into Zonto International.

Though Zonto membership is strictly non-partis and non-sectarian, it is limited to women in executive posts in business, or leadership in the professions, and to "one- of- a- kind" in each club — that is, one representative of each facet of the community's business and professional life. One civic leader in the "homemaker" category is also permitted in each club.

The resultant combination of career leadership with career variety has won for Zonto clubs everywhere the reputation for forceful group action in service projects. And, the stimulatoin members of completely different backgrounds derive from each other intra-club, and increasingly inter-club, has also resulted in a world fellowship for which the organization is famous.

Officers in this roster of Charlottetown charter members are: past president, Mrs. Evelyn Cudmore; president, Miss Mabel Matheson; vice- president, Mrs. Margaret Campbell; recording secretary, Mrs. Laura Kitchen; recording secretary, Miss Carrie Thomson; treasurer, Miss Anna Riley. Directors are Mrs. Sally Rodd and Mrs. Helen MacDonald.

The name "Zonta" derives from a combination of Sioux Indian symbols which individually represent Zonta ideals, and together form the name and Zonta's emblem. It was adopted shortly after the organization was formed in 1919 by nine like-minded women's service clubs.

In 1960 Zonta clubs throughout the world joined in raising over $40,000 for the Anne Frank Village in Germany, one of the famed "village" projects launched by the Belgian Nobel Peace Laureate, Fr. Dominique Pire, for refugee families. The donation represented Zonta's participation in World Refugee Year.

An annual project conducted on the international level is Zonta's Amelia Earhart Scholarship. This fund, maintained by voluntary gifts from Zonta clubs, has provided 43 grants for graduate study in aeronautical engineering to women from eight countries since it was established in 1938 in memory of Zonta's great air pioneer member.

On the local level, the scholarships given by Zonta clubs in nursing the arts and educational fields, can be counted by the score. But, more prevalent, and affecting larger areas of human welfare, are the service projects — in health, welfare, civic, cultural, old age and youth fields —which respective clubs carry on.

Foremost on the agenda of the Charlottetown club will be consideration of a local cause to which members can most beneficially devote their time and energies. It is axiomatic in Zonta that "service" implies—no, requires — personal time and attention, not dollar donations alone.
