JAVA'S GIANT TREE.

ARBOREAL SIAMESE TWIN HUNDREDS OF YEARS OLD.

Stands on the Site of the Ancient City of Padjarain—Crowned With Gorgeous Orchids, It Woos the Worship and Wonder of Men.

Undoubtedly the largest tree the world has ever seen is the giant tree in the island of Java. This monarch of the eastern forests stands on the site of what in ancient times was the city of Padjarain, the glories of which, now long since departed, were of so magnificent a character as to have been extolled in the songs of contemporary poets who flourished in those remote days.

The place where this great wonder of nature stands is called Batutullo. Contiguous to its base is a small wooden house where several Mohammedan priests and attendants reside, who perform daily native religious ceremonies and services.

of this monarch of the forests, and also the custody of a number of much prized and venerated relics of the departed city, and from the fees received for the exhibition of these and showing the wonderful tree they manage to derive a fair income, for use and tree enjoys an odor of sanctity much beyond all else in the island, and attracts not only the faithful to its shrine, but also the curious from far and near.

It stands contiguous to the wayside and forms an imposing and striking feature in a landscape by no means otherwise deficient in natural grandeur, on an elevated plain, freely visible from all sides, attracting the attention of all comers, even in the far distance.

Perhaps the greatest marvel, though, is that it is in reality two trees blended, as it were, and welded into one, and still more curious to relate, two trees of the same genus, but of different species. Both have grown together and form an indivisible common trunk of enormous size.

On arriving at the base or entrance of the tree the visitor today who has come to inspect its wonders is met by the priests in charge, who proceed to perform forthwith some slight religious ceremony, at the termination of which an invitation is given to ascend its aged sides, which is done by means of the countless lateral branches and the aid of peasants, who are at hand to render assistance to all who require it in the journey aloft.

An Invisible Clew.

"There was one time in my housekeeping career," said the lady who had had the experience, "when I thought there was no use of locking doors, for thieves would break through any door. "We were sitting at dinner one night when I heard a noise that sounded as if someone was walking around in my room. I went up immediately to see. No one was there, but every drawer in the room was open and all my jewelry and valuables of every description that I kept in my room were gone."

"It took five or six keys to get at them all, as I had been very particular about keeping them locked up. I had not been out of the room more than 15 minutes, and how any one not familiar with every inch of the house could have accomplished such a piece of work was a mystery. There was one thing I noticed upon entering the room and that was a peculiar odor. It was like a mixture of cheap perfume. I had never smelled anything like it before."

"We notified the police and they worked on the case for weeks, but could make nothing out of it. "One day when I was passing through the laundry I noticed that same strange odor."

"Mary, what's that you are ironing?" said I, for it seemed as if the odor came from the ironing board. "It's some of my brother's handkerchiefs," said she.

"We investigated, and of course found that the brother was the thief."—Detroit Free Press.

Ewald and His Prayer.

In the new polychem Bible the name of the Deity is given as JhvH, this vowel-less form being as near the original Hebrew as the English alphabet can express it. This reminds a writer in the Rochester Post-Express of a story told of the famous German professor, Ewald, who once inserted a parenthetical footnote to a prayer.

Ewald was in the thick of a fight (such as scholars wage the one with the other) with the eminent Hebraist Gesenius when he arose to pray in his classroom. And he began thus in slow, solemn voice, "O thou great, omniscient, infinite 'Jah,'" and then added, half to himself, "not 'Jehovah,' as that fool Gesenius says."
