French, German Stipulations Conflict On European Army

PARIS, Feb. 20 — (AP) — The National Assembly voted half-hearted approval yesterday for the idea of a unified European army but hedged on the vital point of including West German troops.

By the margin of 227-287, it approved a compromise resolution by Premier Edgar Faure to "integrate national forces of the countries of Europe in a European army." The action came in a vote of confidence for Faure, who had stacked his cabinet's fate on the unified army plan.

The vote showed that the Assembly — particularly the Socialists who hold the balance of power — means to keep short reth on German rearmament.

"The National Assembly specifies that no recruiting of contingents of German origin can take place before ratification of the treaty by the parliaments," the resolution said.

This reserves the veto right for the French Assembly, as well as the legislatures of West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, the other partners in the army plan.

More important for the immediate future, it delays indefinitely the recruiting of German divisions which some quarters consider essential to the proper working of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The Assembly tacked a series of conditions to its approval of the idea, as did the West German lower house in its recent ballot on the question.

The two sets of conditions are clearly contradictory in tone. The German conditions are

Whitehall Notebook

By ALAN HARVEY
 Canadian Press Staff Writer

Feb. 20—(CP)—It seems strange to talk of a slump at a time when British exports are higher than they have been before, but the cap fits as far as Anglo-Canadian trade is concerned.

The fall in exports in Canada has Whitehall worried. While British exports to all countries last month totalled $624,000,000, the highest in the history of this trading nation, shipments to Canada again dropped below the 1950-51 level. The latest figure was $3,500,000. The latest figure was $3,500,000 compared with an average of $9,600,000 in the fourth quarter of 1951 and an average of $11,400,000 for the whole of 1951.

Officials in touch with trading developments said the word slump does not seem too strong to describe the present Anglo-Canadian pattern of trade.

No Easy Way

Canada apart the latest trade statistics give less cause for optimism than some reports have indicated. The high level of exports is encouraging, but is offset by continuing high imports. In January, imports at $37,200,000 were no much short of a record, and it was the excess of imports over exports which started the trouble.

In general, British financial writers reported, the monthly trade returns indicate that Britain is exporting pretty well as much as she can produce and spare, but that unfortunately she must produce and spare more to make ends meet.

There is some hope that import figures will drop sharply soon as a reflection of cuts imposed last November.

Canadian officials in London glean some encouragement from the belief that British exports to Canada have just about hit the bottom and will start going up again soon. There is, however, a disposition to feel that Canadian enthusiasm for British products is sometimes more durable than the British desire to overcome the admitted difficulties of the Canadian market.

Comeback in Cars

British products faring less successfully than they used to include automobiles, textiles, steel and some engineering products. Manufacturers here hope to make a comeback in cars, despite restrictions on installment buying, and Canadian officials think there is good ground for optimism.

Textiles, once the principal British export, may never recover. Before the First World War Canada based on the idea that Germany must have full equality in world councils. The French Assembly takes the stand that Germany is a former enemy and should not be fully trusted.

French and German stipulations may be reconciled by the diplomats but whether the parliaments will support their solution, is another question.

They came closest to a clash on the question of German arms manufacturers. The West German house, the Bundestag, called for an end to controls on German production. The French Assembly said new arrangements with Germany "should include the necessary guarantees on arms manufacture."

ian buyers used to get about 75 per cent of their grey cottons from Lancashire. Now they have largely switched to United States markets, and Japan.

The price differential between United Kingdom cottons on the one hand and U. S. and Japanese products on the other is sometimes as high as 15 per cent.

Canadian Exports Rose in January

OTTAWA, Feb. 20 — (CP) — Canada coupled climbing exports with shrinking imports to produce a surplus of almost $21,000,000 in foreign trade during January, the Bureau of Statistics reported yesterday.

This was a sharp reversal of the trend in January a year ago when imports topped exports by $8,400,000.

The Bureau, in a parliamentary statement, estimated January's exports at $328,300,000, a boost of $38,500,000 from last year's $288,800,000. It was the highest January export figure.

Imports eased, however, to $307,400,000 from $327,200,000. The decline was most noticeable in purchases from the United Kingdom and other Commonwealth countries threatened by a sterling-exchange crisis.

In January, Canada sold Britain about twice as much as she purchased from that country. It was almost the same story in trade with other Commonwealth countries.

But in trade with the United States, the traditional trend still prevailed. The surplus was in the United States' favor.

Sales to the U. S. inched ahead to $191,200,000 from $190,300,000, but purchases declined to $229,400,000 from $233,300,000. The deficit dropped to $38,200,000 from $42,000,000.

Britain's purchases from Canada, despite dollar troubles, increased to $43,700,000 from $40,200,000. But imports from the U. K. swung downward to $24,300,000 from $38,900,000 a year ago.

Sales to other Commonwealth countries climbed to $22,500,000 from $18,100,000, but imports by Canada slipped to $14,300,000 from $22,500,000.

MONTREAL—(CP)—If 2½-year-old Marie Claire Begin starts walking three years from now no one will be more surprised than Marie herself.

Until that time Marie has gone to live with a family whose six-year-old daughter, Guilberte LeBlanc, is also a cripple. Young
