A WORD WITH AMERICA.
 How soon—kindly kindred Nation!
 Is it well to kindle thus Quite a private conflagration
 To trifle to the common foe?
 We are kinsmen, sons, and brothers,
 Let us be to kinship true;
 England's heart is just—your Mother's,
 And she cannot fight with you!
 If our rulers make a blunder,
 Frankly too they make amends,
 And the world is all-awonder
 Why we will not yet be friends;
 'Twere ungenerous to breathe
 To insist on more than due,
 When you know as well as others
 We will never fight with you!
 What is 'if I forgeth we dare not be—
 By God's favour, England's coasts Are inviolable—'as care not
 For a thousand thousand souls;
 But you only call us brothers
 When the tongue and people though,
 And, though stout against all others,
 Never will we fight with you!
 Take your heritage—possess it;
 England gladly sees your growth;
 And may peace and plenty bless it,
 East and west, and north and south:
 Only, ev'nt no wrongfulness;
 God himself would fainness to rue:
 Though for us, we tell you, brothers,
 Never will we fight with you!
 Party-work, we understand it,
 And how hand amiable strains
 We the motto of a bandit
 To secure its petty gain;
 But amongst you, better brothers,
 Shows for what the base do,
 While he looks on England's brothers,
 For she will not fight with you!
 Surely to provoke the kindly Were a scandal and a sin;
 And if selfish pluckiness binds
 To the party that they may win—
 Spite of diplomatic hotbers,
 Wrongs better, and insults too,
 You may not as sorry, brothers,
 But we will not fight with you!

MISCELLANEOUS.
 If practice could make perfect, mankind
 would certainly know HOW TO EAT WISELY;
 yet the following excellent advice from Dr.
 Hall's (ever suggestive) Medical Journal, contains wisdom that will be new to most people—
 "I never sit down to the table with an an-noxious or disturbed mind; better, a hundredfold, intermit the meal, for there will then be that much more food in the world for hungrier stomachs than yours; and besides, eating under such circumstances can only,
 and will be always, prolong and aggravate the condition of things.
 "I never sit down to a meal after any in-june mental effort, for physical and mental injury is inevitable, and no man has a right deliberately to injure body, mind or estate.
 "I never go to a full table during bodily exhaustion—designated by some as being worn out, tired to death, used up, done over, and the like. The wisest thing you can do in such circumstances, is to take for a cracker and a cup of warm tea, either black or green and no more. In ten minutes you will feel a degree of refreshment and liveliness, which will be pleasantly surprising to you; not of the transient kind which is a glass of liquor affords, but permanent;

 and the tea gives present stimulus, and a little strength, and before it subsides, nutriment begins to be drawn from the sugar and cream, and bread, thus allowing the body to gradually and by safe degrees, to gain its usual vigour. Then if a couple of hours you may take a full meal, provided it does not bring it later, than two hours before sundown; if later, then take nothing but a cracker and a cup of warm tea, and the next day you will feel a freshness and vigor not recently known. No reader will require to be advised a second time who will make a trial as above, while it is a fact of no unusual observation among intelligent physicians, that eating heartily, under bodily exhaustion, is not an unimportant cause of alarming and painful illness, and sometimes of sudden death. These things being so, let every family make it a point to assemble around the family board with kindly feelings, with a cheerful humour and
 a courageous spirit; and let that member of it be sent from the table in disgrace, who pre-emptively to mar the ought to be blest receptacle around the family board with kindly feelings, with a cheerful humour and
 of it be sent from the table in disgrace, who
