Judge Will Charge Jury In Rape Case Today

Evidence in the trial of Maurice Merlin Murphy being tried for rape before the Supreme Court concluded yesterday. Neither the Crown nor the Defence addressed the jury. A dozen witnesses for the Crown were heard. The Defence produced none.

Mr. Justice G.J. Tweedy will make his address to the jury this morning. Appearing for the Crown were Attorney General A.W. Matheson, Q.C., and Mr. John P. Nicholson. Representing the accused were Mr. J.O.C. Campbell, Q.C., and Mr. Lester P.O. Donnell.

The evidence of two members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police occupied most of the day yesterday. To a large extent, their testimony was a corroboration of previous police witnesses.

Const. Charles Bayne was the officer who in company with Const Nightingale visited the complainant on the morning of the alleged assault.

Sergeant A.M. Johnston, officer in charge of the Charlottetown detachment said that it was he who conducted the major part of the investigation. He described the exhibits which were sent to Ottawa for comparison with other exhibits taken from Murphy's car. Sgt. Johnston said that in no case was any significant comparison made by the resulting analysis.

In his cross-examination of Sgt. Johnston, Mr. Campbell dwelt at some length on the matter of identification of the accused. He attempted on several occasions to have the witness admit that the complainant had had it suggested to her when and where to look for the accused.

Sgt. Johnston went into great detail as to the manner in which identification was made. He said that the mother and daughter were standing on the sidewalk opposite the Central Creameries when Murphy walked across the street. The sergeant and Const. Bayne were standing about ten feet away, when suddenly the girl pointed to Murphy saying, "That's him—that's him getting into the car".

Mr. Campbell asked Sgt. Johnston why he did not have an identification lineup where the accused would be in company with other men. He claimed that such a system would be fairer for the accused than in this instance where she had only one person to point out. Sgt. Johnston gave as his reason for not using the identification lineup, that if he used such a method he would have to have Murphy in such a lineup and this was one thing he wanted to avoid.

The defence counsel asked the Police Sergeant whether promotions in the force were contingent upon the number of convictions that an officer received to which the witness replied that such was not the case.

NO ADDRESS BY COUNSEL

At the conclusion of the evidence the Attorney General said he was reserving his right to address the jury and when defence counsel announced that he was waiving his right, the Attorney General said he would not make an address.

The following are the jurors: Sheldon Smallwood (Foreman), Harry MacLaughlin, Borden Myers, Ralph Bernard, Brenton Howatt, Peter Coles, Roy MacGillivray, Richard Gass, Hawley Crockett, Douglas MacDonald, Stirling MacKay, Lloyd Livingstone.

The Court will meet this morning at 9:30.

Zion Men Hold Opinion Court

The regular monthly supper meeting of Zion Church Men's Association was held Monday evening with Millar MacFadyen in the chair. The meeting was of an unusual nature. Three Grade XI pupils of Prince of Wales College, formerly from Parkdale, conducted a "Court of opinion".

The three girls, Myra Pitcairn, Virginia Carver and Gwen O'Brien were asked a number of questions by the chairman, and in turn gave their opinion in a most interesting and convincing manner. The questions concerned religion, politics, training of children, choosing a husband, etc.

The program proved so worthwhile that the men plan to adopt a smiliar type of meeting at some future date.

During the business meeting which followed, plans were finalized for the holding of Burns Concert next week.

Century Of "Y" Work Unfolded To Rotarians

"The cornerstone of the Richmond Street Y.M.C.A. was laid by Governor Robertson, July 31, 1871, and the formal opening was held August 18, 1873, Mr. B.F. Tinney told Rotarians at luncheon Monday. "The claim has been made that it is the oldest building on the American Continent built exclusively for Y.M.C.A. purposes. This claim has been challenged, but it is definitely one of the oldest.

"I do not know the builder, nor the total cost but a report dated Dec. 30, 1872, notes "expenditures on building to date $6,621.74." The lot cost 500 pounds, or $1,600.00. A goodly sum for that day."

"One hundred and twelve years ago, 1844, a young man, George Williams, gathered together a few friends and acquaintances with a view to forming a club.

"George Williams was a county lad whose presence in London was due to the fact that he had upset a load of hay. As he brought a load of hay from the field, he had upset cart, horse, hay and himself into the ditch. As a result, his parents and older brothers decided he was not bright enough to be a farmer, but could undoubtedly make a shining success in the business world so he was apprenticed to a dry goods merchant in his own neighborhood. Later, in 1841, he came up to London and entered the firm of Hitchcock and Rogers, in St. Paul's Courtyard.

"In those days apprenticed clerks "lived in" - i.e. had living quarters usually above the store in which they worked. Hours were long, and much of their time was taken up in an endless round of duties. History doesn't say whether they had a half day on Wednesday or Saturady afternoon.

THE TWELVE

"Little was offered in the way of recreation in any neighborhood other than the tavern, the gambling den, and companions of questionable. character. Williams, coming from a good country home, did not take kindly to this environment nor companionship, and so, as I have said, we find him gathering together eleven other young men—twelve with himself—for the purpose of forming a club.

"Their aim and purpose, despite their surroundings, was to live a good, clean, Christian life. And so, in selecting a name that would adequately describe this intent, they called themselves the Young Men's Christian Association—date June 6, 1844.

"These young men—twelve disciples as it were—set out to better their own lot, but in so doing they impressed others; and we learn that before long numerous other associations, under the same name were formed in the community.

"Gradually the movement spread, not on a wave of evangelistic enthusiasm abetted by mob psychology, but rather as the need became evident—and it should be remembered that these were difficult times for the greater mass of the people.

"A Montreal merchant, visiting London, was impressed with the work these associations were doing and, along with his goods, brought back the idea of starting a Y.M.C.A. in his own city. Thus we find Montreal organizing the first Y.M.C.A. on the Continent—November 25, 1851.

TO 78 COUNTRIES

"From this idea, born in the mind of a lonely young clerk and developed in the attic over a draper's shop, the Y.M.C.A. has spread and been indorsed by no less than 78 countries and has touched and brightened the lives of countless millions of people.

"It ministers to the bodies, minds, and spirits of hundreds of thousands of young men the world over. It has lifted the ideals of young men, and serves all nationalities, races, and religious beliefs. It rises above race, creed and color. It reaches men and boys of all ages. It develops understanding of God and the Brotherhood of Man.

"It's statement of purpose - "a world-wide fellowship of men and boys, united by common loyalty to Jesus Christ, for the purpose of building Christian Personality and a Christian Society."

"To achieve this high aim, there is constant endeavour to promote a reverence for God, a responsibility for the common good, a respect for personality, and the application of the Golden Rule in all human relationships.

"But, I see Roy Cudmore beginning to chew his finger nails. You know he told me what to say before I came here, so with one eye on Roy and one on the clock we will touch down at Charlottetown.

"Histrically, there are two points of outstanding interest in connection with the Charlottetown Association.

"First, that it dates back to January 1st, 1856, something less than twelve years after it had started in England, a fact that establishes it as one of the oldest Associations in Canada.

"The Charlottetown of that day was almost as far removed from the current of human affairs as Graham Rogers might even claim

SAYS WHEAT SALES

Mr. MacDougall said he hoped Agriculture Minister Gardiner would agree that "We have a small — not great — surplus of butter." If 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 pounds more than is selling at present could be moved there would be no surplus.

He suggested Canada could follow the plan of Holland when it found itself with a butter surplus a few years ago. Holland legislated that all margarine must contain some butter and the butter surplus was soon eliminated.

Or, if that wasn't acceptable, butter accumulated through the government's support price of 36 cents a pound could be sold "to the taxpayers who have bought it at the same price as margarine."
