ADAM BEDE.

CHAPTER XLII.
THE MORNING OF THE TRIAL.

At one o'clock the next day, Adam was alone in his dull upper room; his watch lay before him on the table, as if he were counting the long minutes. He had no knowledge of what was likely to be said by the witnesses on the trial, for he had shrunk from all the particulars connected with Hetty's arrest and accusation. This brave, active man, who would have hastened toward any danger or toil to rescue Hetty from an apprehended wrong or misfortune, felt himself powerless to contemplate irredeemable evil and suffering. The susceptibility which would have been an impelling force where there was any possibility of action, became helpless anguish when he was obliged to be passive; or else sought an active outlet in the thought of inflicting justice on Arthur. Energetic natures, strong for all strenuous deeds, will often rush away from a hopeless sufferer, as if they were hard-hearted. It is the overmastering sense of pain that drives them.
They shrink by an ungovernable instinct as they would shrink from laceration. Adam had brought himself to think of seeing Hetty, if she would consent to see him, because he thought the meeting might possibly be a good to her—might help to melt away this terrible hardness they told him of. If she saw he bore her no ill will for what she had done to him, she might open her heart to him. But this resolution had been an immense effort; he trembled at the thought of seeing her changed face, as a timid woman trembles at the thought of the surgeon's knife; and he chose now to bear the long hours of suspense, rather than encounter what seemed to him the more intolerable agony of witnessing her trial.

Deep, unspoken suffering may well be called a baptism, a regeneration, the initiation into a new state. The yearning memories, the bitter regret, the agonized sympathy, the struggling appeals to the Invisible Right—all the intense emotions which had filled the days and nights of the past week, and were compressing themselves again like an eager crowd into the hours of this single morning, made Adam look back on all the previous years as if they had been a dim, sleepy existence, and he had only now awakened to full consciousness. It seemed to him as if he had always before thought it a light thing that men should suffer; as if all that he had himself endured and called sorrow before, was only a moment's stroke that had never left a bruise. Doubtless a great anguish may do the work of years, and we may come out from that baptism of fire with a soul full of new awe and pity.

"O God!" groaned Adam, as he leaned on the table, and looked blankly at the face of the watch, "and men have suffered like this before. . . . and poor helpless young things have suffered like her. . . . Such a little while ago looking so happy and so pretty. . . .
Kissing 'em all, her grandfather and all of 'em, and they wishing her luck. . . .
Oh, my poor, poor Hetty. . . . dost think on it now?"

Adam started and looked around toward the door. Vixen had begun to whimper, and there was the sound of a stick and a lame walk on the stairs. It was Bartle Massey come back. Could it be all over?
Bartle entered quickly, and going up to Adam, grasped his hand, and said, "I'm just come to look at you, my boy, for the folks are gone out of court for a bit."

Adam's heart beat so violently, he was unable to speak—he could only return the pressure of his friend's hand; and Bartle, drawing up the other chair, came and sat in front of him, taking off his hat and his spectacles.

"That's a thing never happened to me before," he observed—"to go out o' doors with my spectacles on. I clean forget to take 'em off!"

The old man made this trivial remark, thinking it better not to respond at all to Adam's agitation; he would gather in an indirect way, that there was nothing decisive to communicate at present.

"And now," he said, rising again, "I must see to your having a bit of the loaf, and some of that wine Mr.
Irwin sent this morning. He'll be angry with me if you don't have it. Come now, he went on, bringing forward the bottle and the loaf, and pouring some wine into a cup. "I must have a bit and a sup myself. Drink a drop with me, my lad—drink with me."

Adam pushed the cup gently away, and said, entreatingly, "tell me about it, Mr.
Massey—tell me all about it. Was she there? Have they begun?"

"Yes, my boy, yes—it's taken all the time since I first went; but they're slow, they're slow; and there's the counsel they've got for her puts a spoke in the wheel whenever he can, and makes a deal to do with cross-examining the witnesses, and quarreling with the other lawyers.
That's all he can do for the money they give him; and it's a big sum—it's a big sum. But he's a cute fellow, with an eye that 'ud pick the needles out of the hay in no time. If a man had got no feelings, it 'ud be as good as a demonstration to listen to what goes on in court; but a tender heart makes one stupid. I'd have given up figures forever only to have some good news to bring to you, my poor lad."

"But does it seem to be going against her?" said Adam. "Tell me what they've said. I must know it now—I must know what they have to bring against her."

"Why, the chief evidence yet has been the doctors; all but Martin Poyser—poor Martin! Everybody in court felt for him —it was like one sob, the sound they made when he came down again. The worst was when they told him to look at the prisoner at the bar. It was hard work, poor fellow —it was hard work. Adam, my boy, the blow falls heavily on him as well as you; you must help poor Martin; you must show courage. Drink some wine now, and show me you mean to bear it like a man."

Temperance Items.

Wellington, Ont., recorded a majority of over 1,200 for the Scott Act.

The vote polled for the Scott Act in St.
Thomas, Ont., was the largest ever polled in that city for any purpose.

General Neal Dow, of Maine, has just celebrated his eighty-first birthday.

A Saloon Keeper in Des Moines, Iowa, has been convicted on thirty-five counts for violation of the Prohibitory law, and fined $50 for each offence, or a total of $1,750.

The Catholic Temperance Advocate is calling upon the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the United States, to establish Women's Temperance Societies.

The people of Prince Edward Island have forwarded a petition to Ottawa largely signed by the electors, praying that a special Prohibitory clause be passed in the Scott Act for the Island. The request is a reasonable one from the fact that the whole Island are now under the Act. The petition is headed by the Roman Catholic Bishop, the Lieutenant-Governor, Members of both Houses of Parliament, the Mayor of Charlottetown, and Common Councilors and clergymen of all denominations.

There are still to be found persons who venture to say that the prohibitory law in Maine is a failure. The men who make this statement are never in a position to bring proof, simply because they are entirely unread in the history and results of the law. The people of Maine should be the most competent to give an opinion on this question, and the verdict of the people of the State of Maine, as expressed at the polls time and again, is that the law is a grand and undoubted success. The law was first enacted in the year 1854, and is becoming more stringent in its provisions every year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Northern Light.

SIR.—The Northern Light was lying comfortable and snug in Georgetown Harbor and not making much effort to get to Pictou. A small boat containing the following persons belonging to the Island, viz:—Neil McLean, James McAllan, Thomas Beck, James Beck, Vere Wright, of Murray Harbor, and James Jamieson and Pius Jamieson, of Sturgeon, left Pictou at 12 o'clock on Monday, and arrived at Pictou Island. Leaving Pictou Island at 7 o'clock, Tuesday morning, and arrived at the White Sands at 12 o'clock the same day. They say there is very little ice to be seen in the Gulf, and no trouble for the Northern Light to run if once clear of Georgetown Harbor. They speak in the highest praise of James Hogg, of Pictou Island, who entertained them at his house on Monday night, and lent them the boat which brought them across to the Island.

Yours most truly,
A RESIDENT.

Sturgeon, April 16, 1885.

A Derivation Asked For.

SIR.—The derivation of the word Religion is, according to Cicero, from the Latin verb religio (to read again), but, according to Lactantius, from the Latin verb religio (to bind back). Will any of your learned readers explain how they came to such a conclusion? There has been so much inference drawn from such statements of these ancient writers, that it would be well to justify their opinions, if it can be done.

ENQUIRER.

The Back Yards Subject.

SIR.—Would it not be a good plan to ask the public to report to the Council special nuisances in their several neighborhoods?
It would have the effect of expediting cleanliness, and perhaps giving a timely check to the serious effects of hot weather on sootage. It would also stir up the well-disposed but slow to act, to clean up their back yards before the law or the cholera visits them.

SPORES.

SMALL POX SCARE.—Last week two Pullman car porters from Chicago were sent to the Hotel Dieu Hospital, suffering from smallpox.
Since then two nurses belonging to the hospital have died from the disease, and on the 14th inst., there were ten patients in the City Hospital, all taken out of the Hotel Dieu Hospital, where they had contracted the disease. The Hotel Dieu people have isolated suspected patients and closed the hospital for fumigation. The spread of the contagion causes general consternation. One patient escaped in a delirious condition from
