Lancing a Felon.

Dr. Stivers of New York had a large dispensary clinic, and rarely a day passed that one or more cases of felon did not appear. "It won't hurt," was always his comforting assurance to the patient if the latter made any outcry. "Put your finger down there," indicating the edge of the table, "and keep still!" he commanded, and patients, as a rule, made little fuss. Dr. Stivers once had a felon on his left forefinger. He poulticed it for about a week, and walked the floor with pain at night. At last he went to his assistant surgeon who said gravely, "That ought to have been lanced before."
"Possibly—but!" said Dr. Stivers, and then, with a long breath—"perhaps you'd better lance it now."
"Certainly," said the assistant surgeon. "Put your finger on the table."
Dr. Stivers complied, and with a face as white as paper watched the knife. "Be gentle," he cautioned. "That's an awful sore finger!"
"It won't hurt," remarked the assistant surgeon, and the sharp steel descended. There was a howl of agony from Dr. Stivers, and with his finger in his other hand he danced about the room crying, "Oh, oh, oh!"
"Why," remarked the assistant surgeon, "I have heard you tell patients hundreds of times that it didn't hurt to lance a felon."
"No doubt, no doubt you have," groaned Dr. Stivers, "but that depends on which end of the knife a man is at."

Stonewall Jackson at Chapultepec.

The infantry suffered terribly. It was impossible to advance along the narrow track, and when the guns were ordered up the situation was in no way bettered. Nearly every horse was killed or wounded. A deep ditch, cut across the road, hindered effective action, and the only position where reply to the enemy's fire was possible lay beyond this obstacle. Despite the losses of his command, Jackson managed to lift one gun across by hand, but his men became demoralized. They left their posts.
The example of their lieutenant, walking up and down on the shot swept road and exclaiming calmly: "There is no danger, see? I am not hit," failed to inspire them with confidence. Many had already fallen. The infantry, with the exception of a small escort, which held its ground with difficulty, had disappeared, and General Worth, observing Jackson's perilous situation, sent him orders to retire. He replied it was more dangerous to withdraw than to stand fast, and if they would give him 50 veterans he would rather attempt the capture of the breastwork.—Henderson's "Stonewall Jackson and the Civil War."
