Escaped Jewel Thief Causes Severe Embarrassment To Yard

LONDON (Reuters)—For more than four months a "fox" has embarrassed the "hounds" of Scotland Yard.

Failure to recapture escaped convict George Hinds has given the Yard's reputation for getting its man its worst shaking in 16 years.

For Hinds, who escaped Nov. 27 in an attempt to prove he is innocent of a £5,000 jewel robbery, his well on his way to setting an escape record.

Only Charles (Ruby) Sparks, who was free 170 days in 1940, has been out any longer. In six weeks, Hinds would equal the record.

The Yard has laid elaborate plans to capture him. But Hinds has dodged raid after raid, meanwhile writing to newspapers and members of Parliament appealing for justice.

He has offered to surrender if guaranteed a public inquiry or a new trial.

BROADCAST APPEAL

Highspot of the intense hunt came in February when millions of Britons heard a broadcast of a recording Hinds made.

Hinds, 38, mailed the recording to the BBC television station. She sat in a studio while it was broadcast.

Described by Lord Chief Justice to his wife, Peggy, who sent it to Goddard as a "most dangerous criminal," and said to be the explosives expert behind a store robbery, Hinds was sent to prison for 12 years in December, 1953.

Yard chiefs have held special conferences and sent into the hunt many detectives from their special branch, the undercover organization.

But Hinds continues to laugh at their efforts. He is believed to be helped in writing his letters by a former professional man whose identity is said to be known to police.

In his broadcast, Hinds said his escape was "a last desperate resort after all else failed."

"Before I escaped I had proved beyond reasonable doubt, by trial, that it was not possible that the allegations made against me could be true."

"I submitted this evidence to the authorities only to be met with evasion and a blunt refusal to discuss the matter."

Chances are against him eluding police for ever.

Police annals list only a handful who never have been recaptured.

Tough Premier Of Bulgaria Under Criticism

VIENNA (AP)—Premier Vuko Cervenkov, the tough-talking premier of Communist Bulgaria, came under severe criticism Sunday from the central committee of his own Communist party.

Just what will happen now to the 56-year old former boss of the Bulgarian Communist party was not known here. But he has been under heavy pressure from Moscow to make up with President Tito of Yugoslavia.

Diplomatic informants said they heard that Cervenkov might be ousted in order to satisfy demands of Tito. Tito was reported asking that all those who had been purged for supporting him be rehabilitated before he visits Moscow on invitation of the present Kremlin leadership.

1885, at Ansonia, Conn., U.S.A., eldest son of Benjamin, and Margaret (Crook) Luge, the family moved to New York City where Mr. Luge received his education. At the age of 21 years, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy, H.M.C. after 20 years service, he retired as chief pharmacist, but retained with the Reserve fleet.

For the following ten years, Mr. Luge was employed with the National Bank of New York City and worked in one of its Broadway Branches until World War II. He was then called for duty and served in various hospitals and Dispensaries throughout U.S. and at the end of the War he was fully retired.

Besides his widow, Mr. Luge leaves to mourn three sons, Benjamin, Raymond, and John. Benjamin and John who reside in Alaska, left Kodiak March 2nd, by plane. They reached their father's bedside March 3rd, at 10:20 p.m., and remained with him until he passed away.

Funeral service was held March 7th, at 2:30 p.m. in the Chapel at Newcomers Funeral Home, with Rev. Clyde K. Demmell officiating.

A male quartette had charge of the music, Hymns Sung were, Eternal Father—Strong to Save, Beyond the Sunset, and the Lord's Prayer. Burial was in Memorial Park Cemetery in Kansas City with full Naval honors. His sons, Benjamin and John returned by plane to their home in Kodiak Saturday night, March 10th.

U.S. Anxious For Policy Of Friendship In Middle East

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP)—Britain and the United States are deeply divided over how to handle half a dozen critical issues in the war-torn Middle East.

The basic trouble appears to be that Britain wants to follow a "strong" policy in an area where its power once enabled it to call all the shots. But the United States, fearful of showing any support for the tag-ends of colonialism in the area, is intent upon a middle-of-the-road policy calling for quiet diplomacy and friendship to all parties.

U.S. officials said Saturday the different British and American attitudes are "quite understandable" in terms of their different experiences in the Middle East. They believe the disputes will not undermine co-operation between London and Washington. Nevertheless some concede that the situation is extremely difficult and a source of concern.

U.K. FAVORS STRENGTH

The issues on which the two Western allies have divided are:

1. Relations with Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt. The British foreign office two weeks ago publicly denounced him for waging an anti-British campaign in the Middle East and North Africa. U.S. government officials thought Britain's public attack made bad matters worse.
2. Action to stop the Arab-Israeli border incidents. Britain is reported to favor strong-arm methods. American officials here said the United States would have no part of it unless asked by the United Nations to intervene.
3. U.S. membership in the Baghdad pact. Britain has persistently pressed the U.S. to join, but in vain. The United States wants to avoid unnecessary offence to Egypt, Saudi Arabia or Syria.
4. Seeking a settlement in Cyprus.

Canadian Farm Leaders At Conference In Washington

WASHINGTON (CP)—Farm leaders from Canada and Mexico will sit down with U.S. representatives today to study the effect of American farm policies on their agricultural economies.

They will come together here for a two-day meeting of the North American members of the International Federation of Agricultural Producers, a world farm organization representing 26,000,000 farm families in 26 countries.

H. H. Hannam of Ottawa, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, will head a 13-man Canadian delegation.

Discussion of U.S. farm policies in U.S. methods of disposing of surpluses of wheat, a prime crop in Canada, and of cotton, one of the mainstays of Mexican agriculture. Both Canada and Mexico have protested U.S. disposal methods.

Delegates also will review the agricultural situation in the three countries, with special emphasis on farm income. The discussion will include possible ways of solving the problem of farmers feeling the pinch of rising costs and falling income.

The talks also may include efforts to work-out a new International Wheat Agreement. The Canadian delegation will include Wilham Parker of Winnipeg, president of the Manitoba Wheat Pool, who recently has been attending the wheat negotiations at Geneva as a Canadian producer representative.

The general sessions will be followed by a meeting of the IFAP executive committee to determine the date and place of the next IFAP general conference, expected to be held in the United States next spring. The IFAP held its general conference in 1949 at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, Ont.

Representatives will attend from the four major American farm organizations, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the National Farmers Union and the National Council of Farm Co-operators. Delegates also will attend from the National Association of Harvesters of Mexico.
