

Anglicans Perturbed As Bishop Not Invited

In Anglican churches in Charlottetown Sunday, attention was drawn to the fact the Bishop of the Diocese of Nova Scotia, Rt. Rev. W. W. Davis was not officially invited to attend the state dinner to be held in Charlottetown during the Queen's visit.

"Every effort has been made by the vice-chancellor, the Rector of St. Paul's and myself as archdeacon, to rectify this state of affairs," said Rev. Davies.

"We were informed that the 'precedent list' makes provision for only two ecclesiastical representatives, namely the Bishop of Charlottetown and the President of the Prince Edward Island Ministerial Association.

"It is obvious that the first of these two does not represent the Anglican Communion. What may not be as obvious to some is that the second does not either. If we are not represented by an Anglican dignitary, we are not represented at all," Archdeacon Davies said.

Mr. Elias went on to say a letter was being sent by Archbishop Davies, to the Queen's secretary expressing regret of the bishop's absence at the state dinner.

Comment similar to that of Archbishop Davies, was contained in the printed program of St. Paul's, of which Mr. Elias is rector.

Mr. Elias' comment went in part: "The government officials of this province, because of a grave misunderstanding, have ex-

Hurricane Backlash Strikes New Orleans

By GAVIN SCOTT NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Hurricane-force winds—Hilda's backlash—struck New Orleans' lakefront by surprise Sunday as church worshippers gave thanks that the killer storm spared this city.

Gusts of 90 miles an hour or more screamed in from across Lake Ponchartraine. Waves of six feet or more crashed over the seawalls, crossed lakehouse drive and threatened protective levees to the west.

A call went out for volunteers to pile sandbags on the levees—in front of fashionable homes—and residents in one area were told to be prepared to flee.

The freak windstorm came out of the north as Hilda, now hardly more than a heavy rainstorm, continued to push east-northeast through southern Mississippi. Its top winds, once 120 miles an hour, were only 50 m.p.h. and still falling.

Hilda, blamed for at least 30 deaths and millions of dollars in property and crop damages in Louisiana's Cajun Country, shared responsibility for the violent windstorm that hit here with startling suddenness.

Weather bureau forecasters said high winds were hatched above New Orleans when Hilda's rear-guard, counter-clockwise winds meshed with a large cold air mass from the north.

The combined winds sped unimpeded across a 26-mile wide Lake Ponchartraine and slammed into the lakefront—an area of expensive restaurants, yacht clubs and exclusive residential districts.

Officials feared the death toll would climb as full extent of the disaster became known. Hilda spawned tornadoes and flash floods from coastal marshlands to Louisiana's capital city, Baton Rouge, and into Mississippi.

Federal officials, dispatched here Saturday night by President Johnson, huddled with Governor John McKeithen to determine how best to use federal aid to help the hurricane's victims. Johnson declared the region in Hilda's destruction path a disaster zone and earmarked $1,000,000 for relief.

Most Tobacco Crops Prove Good; Farmers Looking For High Prices

Tobacco harvesting has been completed in this province for the season and most producers report the best crop to date with the most of the crop having been commonly regarded as being of two exceptions. Quality is excellent and experience tobacco observers agree, and most producers are highly satisfied with their season's work.

Marcel Moyart, possibly the largest producer with 40 acres of tobacco upper Montague reports a good crop with virtually all of it saved. He has a new-curing barn this year—the last his barn and entire crop tobacco last fall—and is looking to a good year.

"All we need is a good price," says Moyart. He is looking to a good price for his father Joseph Powers, observed.

LOST 40 PERCENT Elsewhere there were good reports.

who had been talking recently with Roy Gibson, manager of the farm. Quality is much better this year, observed Mr. Wright, who said there was no wind damage like a year ago.

Alvy Gallant, Rustic, reported a good yield of tobacco and also emphasized the good quality. He lost perhaps one half kilns from frost, but is well satisfied with his season's production.

We have to expect some frost losses," said Keith LeLacheur who is in charge of tobacco production for the Experimental Farm here. But there would not be 20 kilns lost in the province which is a good deal less than 10 per cent of the crop which is excellent, Mr. LeLacheur observed.

The quality of the crop, it was agreed, is in contrast to the unfavorable weather that has been experienced this past summer.

If you still don't know what the Volkswagen 1500 is, make this simple test.

Get in a VW 1500. Now act tough. Take it for a ride. Way out in the rough. Climb some hills and take some bumps. Stop in a hurry. And start in a rush. From zero to 50 mph in just 12 seconds. Now you know what a Volkswagen 1500 is. It's a tough little car with a lot of guts.

A low center of gravity helps it hug the road. And each wheel is individually suspended. Four torsion bars muffle the bumps. Anti-sway bars hold it steady. The VW 1500 has amazing traction because the engine weight is back over the drive wheels. Where you need it. Extra big tires help you hold tight.

And there's no radiator to boil when the going gets hot. That's what a Volkswagen 1500 is. But it's hard to believe until you drive it. You get the true test.
