The Way of the World

BY JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE.

The hands of the king are soft and fair;
They never knew labor's stain.
The hands of the robber redly wear The bloody brand of Cain.
But the hands of the man are hard and scarred With marks of toil and pain.

The slaves of Pharae have washed their hands As white as a king's may be.
Barabbas with wisps unfettered stands, For the world has made him free.
But thy palms toil-worn by nails are torn,
O Christ, on Calvary!

A Grit Slander Refuted.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Empire writes:—

"When Sir Richard Cartwright presented his slander on Canadian credit by alleging that the farms of the province of Ontario were mortgaged for $200,000,000, and ergo, the gaunt spectre of general calamity was at our doors, he scarcely allowed for the fact that someone would take the pains to look into his figures with care. It seems to have been his plan to make up a statement sufficiently startling and libellous for his immediate purpose, let the consequences be what they might. One member at least has reviewed the work of the spectacled knight, and yesterday completely exposed its utter absurdity and worthlessness. Mr.
H. A. Ward, the member for East Durham, first obtained the total assessment of the province of Ontario. Deducing the assessment of the cities and towns, the sum of $157,000,000 was left for farm lands. It would thus be seen that Sir Richard had fixed the mortgages far beyond the assessed value of the entire property he had referred to, while if the percentage of un-mortgaged land which he had acknowledged be deducted, it would be found that every enumerated farm was mortgaged at four times its assessed value. It is needless to say that this indicates the gross character of Sir Richard's slander, but Mr. Ward did not stop there. He obtained an actual return from the registrar of his county, selecting for the test concessions having about the same acreage as those which Sir Richard had taken for his general estimate.
The result was that the figures fell short by 50 per cent. of those presented by the member for South Oxford. A more complete exposition of a base libel was never made, and Mr. Ward is entitled to the gratitude of his fellow-Canadians for so promptly answering this heartless slander against their common country, a slander which he must have known must soon be refuted, but caring only that it served the immediate end of offsetting Mr. Foster's calm and moderate statement of our general well-being."

Memory of a Horse.

A good story is told in the Boston Post, appropos of the subject of memory in horses:—I happened to be the witness of an odd scene the other day, which, when recounted, may possibly amuse the reader.
One of those not infrequent, but, I must confess, usually fictitious necessities, had arisen which had taken me to a stable—on this occasion to a large establishment in the vicinity of Cardon Street. It was about five o'clock in the afternoon, and various people were starting for home, among them a man and woman who had a remarkably intelligent-looking grey horse. Just as he began to trot down the lane by which the stable is reached from the street, a stout party whom I noticed had been watching the grey very intently, suddenly cried out in a loud voice, "Dan, don't you want a piece of cake?" The horse stopped short, pricked up his ears, looked around and uttered a faint whinny of recognition and assent; nor would he go on until the stout man had come forward and explained his interference. It appeared that several years before he had brought the horse from Vermont, where he had owned him for some time, and as the beast was particularly docile he had taught him the true sense of the question the sudden asking of which brought the animal to a standstill. It is well known that horses never forget a person or place, and scarcely an event. No matter how much time has elapsed or how greatly the horse may have changed in disposition, one word from a former master will establish immediately the old relation between them.

Development in Cape Breton.

Isaac P. Gragg, of Boston, general manager of the Eastern Development Company, of Nova Scotia, who is opening copper mines near Sydney, C. B., is at Ottawa.
Mr. Gragg, accompanied by Mr. Mc-Dougall, M. P., called on the Deputy Minister of Railways with a view of procuring the privilege of crossing the Cape Breton railway near Sydney, with a branch railway to a point on the harbor, where the Eastern Development Company proposes building an extensive smelting works.
The company have already spent $260,000 in opening and equipping this mine with machinery, and have so far paid $40,000 in duties on machinery. They had also an interview with the Minister of Customs this evening with a view of procuring information regarding the effect of changes in the tariff on some machinery which the company propose importing for the smelting of their copper ore. The company has also in view the developing of a very large trade with the copper mines of Newfoundland, the product of which now is altogether shipped to England. The Company propose, when the smelting works are completed, to manufacture the ore into copper mats and then ship them across to England.
The distance from the mines to the works is seven miles, and the railway the Company propose building will be finished without delay.

The Bank of England has reduced its rate of discount from 4 to 3 1/2 per cent.

Islanders in Want.

A correspondent of the North Sydney Herald writes: I heard a sad case of want spoken of in town the other day, and one that shows the folly of early marriages.
There is a youthful married couple residing in or near the town, who are living in absolute want of the necessities of life, and the husband, it is said, is dying of consumption. The youthful wife, who is a native of P. E. Island, tells a story of how, a few years ago, at the age of 14, she was married to a young man, aged 16, in P. E.
Island; how, a short time ago, they came to Cape Breton seeking employment, setting at Low Point; that, the husband being unable to work, they were obliged, about a month ago, to move to this place, occupying a small house on the road leading to Sydney Mines. Since that time he has steadily grown worse, and is unable to do any work. The wife has endeavored to earn enough for their support, but proved unequal to the task, and had it not been for the action of some people in town, some days ago, starvation would have looked them in the face. As it is, however, their situation is now known, and it is hoped that they will not lack assistance in future. Two children have been born to them, but fortunately, it must be said that both are dead. Still it is extremely sad to see a young married couple aged respectively 17 and 19, away from friends and home, suffering in this way. It is not thought that the husband will recover.

A City of Refuge

FOR EVICTED IRISH TENANTS—INTERESTING INAUGURATION CEREMONIES.

A London despatch of the 12th instant says: The formal opening of New Tipperary, the new Irish town established by the tenants evicted from the Smith-Barry estate, has been further postponed in order to put the finishing touches on the most important of the buildings. Already eighty residence buildings have been completed, and a new row of shops is in process of fitting up. The market is finished and will be opened to-morrow. The preparations for the opening of the market are very elaborate. The building is literally covered with evergreens and flowers. Among the speakers who are to address the inhabitants of the new town are William O'Brien, Michael Davitt, Sir Thomas Esmond and several other national leaders. Mr. T. D.
Sullivan, ex-Lord Mayor of Dublin, has written a poem for the occasion which it is expected he will read himself.

Mr. Parnell has been elected an honorary resident of the new town, and at the formal opening of the settlement a few days hence a large number of Liberals and Nationalists and Commoners will be present.

In addition to the popular festivities on the occasion of the opening of the new star to the Irish constellation, a banquet has been provided for the entertainment of five thousand distinguished guests.

American Journalists.

A FRENCH SATIRIST'S OPINION OF A WIDE-AWAKE PROFESSION.

As I have said elsewhere the American journalist must be spicy, lively and bright, says Max O'Rell in the North American Review. He must know how not merely to report, but to relate in a racy, catching style an accident, a trial, a confederation, and be able to make up an article of one or two columns upon the most insignificant incident. He must be interesting, readable. His eyes and ears must be always open, every one of his five senses on the alert, for he must keep ahead in this wild race for news. He must be a good conversationalist on most subjects, so as to bring back from his interviews with different people a good store of materials. He must be a man of courage to brave rebuffs. He must be a philosopher to pocket abuse. He must be a man of honor, and I have always found him so. Whenever I have begged an American reporter to kindly abstain from mentioning this or that which might have been said in conversation with him, I have invariably found that he kept his word.
But if the matter is of public interest, he is before all and above all the servant of the public. So never challenge his spirit of enterprise or he will leave no stone unturned until he has found your secret and exhibited it to the public.

What Alcohol Will Do.

The Sanitarian tells what alcohol will do, thus: "It may seem strange, but is nevertheless true, that alcohol, regularly applied to a thrifty farmer's stomach, will remove the boards from the fence, let the cattle into his crops, kill his fruit trees, mortgage his farm, and sow his fields with wild oats and thistles. It will take the paint off his buildings, break the glass out of his windows, and fill them with rags, take the gloss off his clothes and polish his passions, subdue his reason, arouse his passions, bring sorrow and disgrace upon his family and topple him into a drunkard's grave. It will do this to the artisan and capitalist, the matron and the maiden."

The modus vivendi is quite likely to find a way of living for another year.
A regular tornado struck Springfield Township, Ohio, on Tuesday night. The storm mowed a path ten rods wide, utterly wrecking everything in its way. No lives were lost.

Seventy-five per cent. of the whole crop in many counties in Texas has been destroyed by insects. One of these creatures is similar to the Northern chinch bug and the other is the common lady bug.
The statistics of the Suez canal show that the use made of the waterway is increasing as well as Great Britain's share of the traffic. Last year the gross tonnage of all vessels passing through was 9,606,000, 94.91 per cent. of which was British, an increase over the previous year.
