A GREAT MEDICINE.

Cod-liver Oil is useful beyond any praise it has ever won, and yet few are willing or can take it in its natural state. Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil is not offensive; it is almost palatable.

Children like it. It is Cod-liver Oil made more effectual, and combined with the Hypophosphites its strengthening and flesh-forming powers are largely increased.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute! Scott & Bown, Belleville. 50c. and $1.

A STORY OF REVENGE.

Even a stranger to the big town, walking for the first time through London, sees on the sides of the houses many names with which he has long been familiar.

There was the firm of Danby and Strong, for instance. The name may mean nothing for any reader of these pages, but there was a time when it was well known and widely advertised, not only in England, but over the greater part of the world as well.

They were great business, and the firm that spends a fortune every year in advertising is bound to do. It was in the old paper collar days. There actually were paper collars, and the majority of men wore paper collars, and when you come to think of it, the wonder is that the paper collar trade ever fell away as it did, when you consider with what vile laundries London is and always has been cursed.

Take the Danby and Strong collars, for instance, advertised as being similar to those made in London. Only an expert could tell the difference. That was Strong's invention. Before he invented the Pilecollar collar, so-called, he had made a brilliant glass that could not have been made in any other way. It was the most recent arrival from the most remote shore in the country. Strong devised some method by which a slight linen thread was put in the paper adding strength to the collar and article. You bought a pasteboard box containing a dozen linen ones. The Danby and Strong Pilecollar collar jumped at once into great popularity, and the wonder is that the linen collar ever recovered from the blow dealt it by this ingenious invention.

Such success, however, during the time the firm was struggling to establish itself, the two members of it were the best of friends, but when prosperity came to them, causes of differences arose. Their mutual friends, as papers say of warlike nations, became strained. Whether the fault lay with John Danby or with William Strong, no one has ever been able to find out. They had mutual friends that claimed that each of them was a good fellow, but those friends always added that Strong and Danby did not get on.

Strong was a bitter man when aroused and could generally be counted upon to use harsh language. Danby was quiet, but there was a sudden streak of stubbornness in him that did not tend to the making up of a quarrel. They had been past the speaking point for more than a year when there came a crisis in their relations with each other that ended in disaster to the business carried on under the title of Danby and Strong. Neither man would budge, and between them the business sunk to ruin. Where competition is fierce no firm can stand against it if there is internal dissension. Danby held his ground quietly but firmly. Strong ranged and cursed, but was equally steadfast in not yielding a point.

We are all rather prone to be misled by appearances. As one walks down Fleet street, and sees numerous irreproachably-dressed men with glossy tails and polished boots, with a certain manner and a courteous way of deporting themselves toward their fellows, we are apt to fall into the fallacy of believing that these gentlemen are civilized. We fall to realize that if you are in a hurry, you might catch him at Broncho Junction on Thursday night.

He is travelling by rail, then? "No, he is not. He went by rail as far as Felixopolis. There he takes a horse and goes across the prairie to Broncho Junction, a three-day journey. I told him he wouldn't do much business on that route, but he said he was going partly for his health and partly to see the country. He expected to see the country, but he found it was a very different matter. The dry-goods merchant laughed as one who suddenly remembers a pleasant circumstance. "You're an Englishman, I take it."

was added that once a person wore the D, and S, collar he never afterward relapsed into wearing any inferior brand. The price of each box was 15 cents or two boxes for a quarter. Strong found himself making a mental calculation which resulted in turning this notation into English money.

He stood there a new interest began to fill his mind. Was the firm being carried on under the old name by some one else, or did this lot of collars represent part of the old stock? He had had no news from home since he left, and the bitter thought occurred to him that, perhaps, Danby had got somebody with capital to set him in resolutely in the business. He resolved to go inside and get some information.

"You seem to have a very large stock of those collars on hand," he said to the man who was evidently the proprietor.

"Yes," was the answer. "You see we are the state agents for this make. We supply the country dealers."

"O, you do? Is the firm of Danby and Strong still in existence? I understood it had suspended."

"I guess not," said the man. "They supply us as right enough. Still, I really know nothing about the firm, except that they turn out a first-class article. We're not in any way responsible for Danby and Strong; we're merely agents for the State of Texas, you know," the man added, with sudden caution.

"I have nothing against the firm," said Strong. "I asked because I once knew some members of it and was wondering how it was getting along."

Well, in that case you ought to see the American representative. He was here this week—that's why we make such a display in the window. It always pleases the agent... he's now working up the State and will be back in Galveston before a month is out.

ing, is it not? You realize, I hope, that there are here no judges, juries, nor lawyers, no mandamus and no appeal. Nothing but a writ of ejectment from the barrel of a pistol and a legal way of staying the process. In other words, no-courts, no-juries and no damned law."

Danby, after several times mauling his pallid lips, found his voice.

"Do you mean to give me a chance or are you going to murder me?"

"I am going to murder you," Danby closed his eyes, let his hands drop to his sides, and swayed precariously from side to side as a man does on the scaffold just before the bolt is drawn.

Strong looked at the carb, but the lettering seemed to waver before his eyes. He made out, however, that John Danby had an address in New York and that he was the American representative of the firm of Danby & Strong, London. Strong placed the card on the counter before him.

"I used to know Mr. Danby, and I would like to meet him. Where do you think I could find him?"

"Well, as I said before, you could see him right here in Galveston, but if you are in a hurry, you might catch him at Broncho Junction on Thursday night."

He is travelling by rail, then? "No, he is not. He went by rail as far as Felixopolis. There he takes a horse and goes across the prairie to Broncho Junction, a three-day journey. I told him he wouldn't do much business on that route, but he said he was going partly for his health and partly to see the country. HEART-BEATS.

The Reason Why the Heart Flutters, Palpitates, and is Oppressed, and How to Relieve it.
The heart has a hard old time of it and within itself does not excite much sympathy, but it is very often called upon to palliate the troubling symptoms of palpitation, fluttering, labored breathing, oppression, etc., on account of diseased Kidneys offering increased resistance to the passage of the blood through their morbid change in the blood unsuited to nourish the tissues and noxious to them.

The minute arteries resist the passage of this foul blood, resulting in the muscular walls of the arteries and the ventricle of the heart becoming partially paralyzed, and from this cause results much of the so-called heart disease, which is owing to wasting Kidneys not being able to per-hart trouble remove the cause in the Kidneys with Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They relieve the blood of poisonous deposits, it goes on its way a stream of health, relieving the heart and imparting strength to every tissue of the body.

COMMENDABLE PROPTITUDE.

A Resident of St. John, N. B., Makes a Successful Trial of Dodd's Kidney Pills.
St. JOHN, N. B., July 8.—Mr. Robert Moore residing in Indian town, a suburb of this city, has recently made what is allowed by all who are acquainted with the facts to be a most remarkable recovery. He has been suffering from a serious complaint of the kidneys for over seven years, and during that time has suffered excruciating pain. He has also suffered considerably in pocket, having paid large sums for medical advice. Quite recently he happened to read of the many cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and with commendable promptitude made a trial of them, with the result that after taking three boxes of the remedy he was entirely restored to health.
