MR. MORRISON'S LECTURE

Last evening's lecture, by Mr. A. E. Morrison, in St. James' Hall, was of that class of public entertainments to which we can give unqualified approval. Here it nothing more than the story of the heroic efforts, the steadfast perseverance and strong faith of Crys W. Field the lecture would be of immense value to our young men. But, in addition, the thrilling tale of the disappointments, the perplexing accidents, the contest with wind and wave, which go to make up the story of the Atlantic Cable enterprise were told by one who was perfectly at home in his favorite study. There was a touch of humor here and there, unconscious as it seemed to us, which heightened the really tragic scenes, as when, in a moment all unexpectedly, the slender rope parted and disappeared in three miles of water. One could almost picture the expression on the faces of the ships, company as they realized that their hopes, which but a little before had mounted so high that they had actually fixed the date of arrival of Hearty's Continent were utterly shattered. The final and successful effort of 1866 and the recovery and completion of the lost cable of 1865 brought the story to an end, and the lecture closed with an eloquent tribute to Crys Field, whose portrait fittingly ended the series of views illustrating the whole progress of the making, storing, paying out, splicing and picking up of the cable.

A vote of thanks was ably moved by W. S. Stewart, Esq., and seconded by Professor Shaw. Remarks were made by T. C. James, J. E. B. McCready and W. Dickieson, all of whom cordially concurred in the well-earned tribute paid to Mr. Morrison.

The old story of Prometheus is a parable. Prometheus was on terms of intimacy with the gods. From them he stole fire, and gave it to men. For this sin he was bound to the rocks of Mount Caucasus, and vultures were set upon him. They only ate his liver. This grew again as fast as it was pecked away. Are his sufferings to be imagined?

Take a modern interpretation of the parable. There is no cooking without fire. In cooking and eating the mischief lies. The stomach is overtasked, the bowels become clogged, they cannot dispose of the food that is given them. The impurities back up on the liver. Then come the vultures—the torments of a diseased liver. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is more than equal to the vultures of dyspepsia and its kindred diseases. There is no more need of suffering from dyspepsia than there is of hanging one's self. Sold by all medicine dealers the world over.

FISHING AND FARMING.—A West Arichat despatch to the Halifax Herald reports that "our fishermen are now over their summer's work. Fishing has been poor here this year, and our hardy sons of the deep have received but a scanty reward for their hard labor. Farming is receiving more attention in this locality from year to year. A few years ago it was a rare thing to find anyone growing any kind of a crop at all, not even a few potatoes to be used while waiting for the new imports from P. E. Island. Now most every man grows what potatoes, turnips and other vegetables his family requires the whole year round. More cows are kept, and all in all our people, probably through the failure of the fisheries, are taking more to the cultivation of the soil."

Choir practice—St Paul's church choir will meet for practice this evening at 8.30, instead of Friday. All members will please attend.
