

Baby Literature.

"SARAH," said a young man, the other day, "why don't you wear ear-rings?" "Because I haven't had my ears pierced."

Useful.—A lady tramped on a dog's tail, at Omaha, the other day, and the animal bit her leg. The blood did not flow, however; only saw-dust flew. He did not go deep enough for blood. This is the most useful service we have ever heard of a false calf serving.

The love that kills—pulmonary affection. Mrs. Partington said she did not marry her second husband because she loved the male sex, but just because he was the size of her first protector, and could wear out his old clothes.

Elder Knapp, speaking of long prayers, once said: "When Peter was endeavoring to walk upon the water to meet his Master, and was about sinking, had his supplication been as long as the introduction to one of our modern prayers, before he got through he would have been fifty feet under water."

"I wish you would pay a little attention to what I am saying, Sir," roared an irate lawyer to an exasperating witness. "Well I am paying as little as I can," was the calm reply.

"Isaac, my son, let the Good Book be a limp unto thy path." "Mother," replied the thoughtful Isaac, "I should think that was making light of sacred things."

"Why is a kiss like a rumor?—Because it goes from mouth to mouth. When the day 'breaks' what becomes of the fragments?"

French statistics show that just ten fools drown themselves in the Seine every month.

Trouble.—Never trouble till trouble troubles you: for trouble rarely troubles people who never troubles themselves about troubles.

We hear a great deal about Great Britain's poor laws; but we fear there are a great many laws quite as poor in our own country.

Sum people loze twice when they bet; they bet without enny pluck and loze without enny pluck.

"Now, then, fast boy in 'rithmetic, how many white beans air there in ten black ones?" "Ten, Sir, ef you skin 'em," was the reply.

Not much difference between the very rich and the very poor after all. The former live in fear of starvation, and the latter in dread of the gout.

A Yankee preacher discoursing in regard to Daniel in the lion's den, said: "And there he sat all night long, looking at the show for nothing, and it did not cost him a cent."

The Rising Generation.—The Fenians. "I have gone into the silk business," said a man to his neighbor. "So I supposed, as I saw you reeling home last night."

MAKING EXTREMES MEET.—Manufacturing sausages from horns and hoofs. A good wife is one who puts her husband in at the side of the bed next the wall, and tucks him in to keep him warm in the winter, spl's the wood, makes the fires in the morning, washes her husband's face and draws on his boots for him, never scolds, never suffers a rent to remain in her husband's small clothes, keeps her shoes up at the heel, and her stockings darned, never wonders what her husband sees interesting in the young woman who lives across the way, and always reproves the children when they eat their father's supper.

A servant girl in Berlin fell against a red hot stove and burned on her arm the date 1809, which was on the stove. The physician who was called on to minister to her looked at the date branded on the arm, and shaking his head, withdrew, remarking that for so old an injury there was no cure.

Agricultural.

PREPARING FOR SPRING.—Said a farmer who always takes time by the forelock, "In winter I prepare for spring: my plans for the crops for the coming seasons are all made and ready for execution so soon as the spring opens, be it early or late: my tools are all got in readiness, so that when the time comes to use them, I have not to go to the blacksmith to get chains mended, crowbars sharpened, and to the agricultural warehouse for ploughs or plough points, and so on to the end of the list of wants probable." Such a farmer never depends on his neighbour for what he can procure for himself: he never borrows tools, and would never lend, but for the incessant importunity of neighbours Slack, Hardup & Co. His motto is,— Neither to borrow nor to lend, Ensure good neighbours and true friend. Boston Cultivator.

FIELDS OF DOCK. The root of the yellow dock, so troublesome to farmers, is an effectual alterative and a most valuable medicine.
