REICH PUZZLED BY BRITISH QUESTIONNAIRE

Suspicious Over Absence of Queries on Rhineland Fortifications.

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) BERLIN, May 7.—The German Foreign Office, studying a British questionnaire on Chancellor Hitler's suggestions for European peace, expressed surprise and suspicion tonight over the absence of queries on Rhineland fortifications.

The questionnaire, prepared by the British government on behalf of the remaining Locarno powers, was handed to the German government today.

Although the complicated document contained a broad inquiry into Der Fuehrer's April 1 proposals together with a request for a more precise statement on Germany's colonial demands, the questionnaire dropped completely all interrogations on German forts in the re-occupied Rhine zone.

Hitler's Proposal

(Hitler proposed, as a counter-suggestion to the London Locarno accord, establishment of a three-man international commission to supervise the Rhineland during a four-month "armistice" period during which peace negotiations would be carried on.

The commission would have one English and one Italian member who would name the third. Germany would agree not to increase her forces in the reoccupied territory but France and Belgium would also have to make the same guaranty).

Pessimistic View

The Wilhelmstrasse therefore, reliable sources said, was searching for a reason why this question was eliminated and was inclined to take a pessimistic view that something lay behind the move which might not prove too good for Germany.

The government suspected that the French and the British may be contemplating re-erecting the Stresa front with Italy, a spokesman declared. He will set the Rhineland fortifications question rest until Germany begins to erect barriades.

With the Stresa front functioning again, it was said, the construction of German border defences could be seized upon as a violation of article 42 of the Locarno treaty (which forbids Germany to build forts) as distinct from article 43 (which was the original prohibition against German troops in the Rhineland.)

Investigation into Mine Disaster To Open May 18

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) HALIFAX, May 7.—Investigation of the Moose River gold mine collapse by a commission headed by Mr. Justice W. F. Carroll of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, will begin May 18.

Preliminary sittings may be held in Halifax to allow the commission to map out a plan of procedure but the hearing proper will begin at Moose River on that date.

Deputy Minister of Mines Norman McKenna and J. H. Cunningham of Bear River, N. S., a mining engineer, will be the other two members of the body. They will have power to call witnesses and experts.

Hearing In Small Case Adjourned

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) TORONTO, May 7.—Hearing of a motion on behalf of Mary Florence Small for an injunction restraining Arthur J. Holmes and Warren L. Gray, executors of the will of the late Theresa Small, from distributing assets of that estate and the estate of Ambrose J. Small was adjourned for two weeks by Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffrey today.

Adjournment was made to permit defendants' counsel to cross-examine an affidavit filed by Miss Small.

It was alleged in affidavits filed on behalf of Miss Small that her brother, Ambrose J. Small, who disappeared mysteriously in December 1919 was slain, and that the document contains a "confession" of the death of the millionaire theatre owner.

B. O'Brien, acting for Holmes and Gray, undertook that the latter would not proceed to distribute any assets under the will of Theresa Small, probate of which Mary F. Small seeks to set aside.

Football Gamble Produces Record

LUTON, England, May 7.—(C.P.)—The story of a footballer's chance to win fame and how a young, unknown player turned the opportunity into an event by creating a goal-scoring record is one of the highlights of the English football season just closing.

Playing in his first big league game, Joe Payne of Luton Town was moved to centre-forward from his regular position on the half-back line of the third division club's reserve string. The strategy worked for he rammed home 10 goals in his team's 12-0 victory over Bristol Rovers on Easter Monday.

Payne's high mark in the goal-scoring was held by R. G. Bell, Tranmere Rovers, who netted nine against Oldham Athletic in December.

At the top of the southern section of the third division and fighting desperately to retain the place of honor Luton Town's director's held a council-of-war Easter Sunday. They wanted more dash injected into the team's forward line.

There was a gasp of astonishment when one suggested trying Payne as leader against Bristol Rovers. Nevertheless he gained his point and Payne was chosen. What a debut! It was a debut unprecedented in the long history of soccer for a man making his first appearance at centre-forward in a league side to score 10 goals.

He was very modest about it after the match. He said: "It would be a sure shot in my part to say it was all luck for I do believe I played well. I am a very happy fellow today. But please give your praise to Stephen (outside left) who 'made' nearly all our goals."

Payne is a native of Bolsover, Derbyshire. He is a real centre-forward with tremendous dash and team management. He pitched against Chatham that day, then went and offered his services to the Athletic Club for $40 a month. He was accepted.

Anderson was one of the founders of the club and its substitute catcher. Miner MacBrayne was the regular receiver, but neither relished the job of holding the Rube, so they signed Freddie Phelps, who handled him with the Detroit Club.

Waddell finished the season but wasn't back when Chatham entered the Canadian League the next year. The club took on Sam "Wahoo" Crawford, who later became a famous big-leaguer with Cincinnati Reds and Detroit Tigers. During Crawford's term here, Anderson had retired to an executive job with the club.

RECALL WADDELL CHATHAM HURLER

OHATHAM, Ont. May 7.—(C.P.)—Rube Waddell, who gained as much fame in big-league baseball for his eccentricities as for his pitching baseball in Chatham 39 years ago—for $40 a month.

When the Rube threw his slants for the Chatham Athletic Club there was a catcher called "Skin" Anderson on the club. It was Harry W. Anderson, now a member of the Royal Commission investigating penitentiaries, and until recently managing-editor of the Toronto Globe. Mr. Anderson's friends are recalling the incident.

Waddell came to Chatham as a member of a Detroit semi-pro club to play an exhibition game. The eccentric hurler quarrelled with his team management. He pitched against Chatham that day, then went and offered his services to the Athletic Club for $40 a month. He was accepted.

Pouliot Refuses To Retract Statement

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, May 7.—Stating he wished to consult key-men of his constituency before deciding what action he would take in the House of Commons where he is in hot water Jean Francois Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) will leave today for Riviere Du Loup. Last Friday speaker Casgrain called upon Mr. Pouliot to withdraw certain statements he had made at a previous sitting regarding Conservative Leader Bennett. Mr. Pouliot was not in the House at the time and has remained out of the House since, while he is reaching a decision.

Mr. Pouliot had claimed Mr. Bennett had arranged for a loan for the Canadian Pacific Railway without consulting his Cabinet colleagues. Mr. Bennett denied this and asked it be withdrawn. Mr. Pouliot left the Chamber without withdrawing the remark. Last week he made a withdrawal when the House was in committee. Chairman F. G. Sanderson (Lib. Perth) ruled the withdrawal must be made in the House in regular session and last Friday the speaker in a prepared decision ruled the same way.

Domestic issues continued heavy on the stock market with Bank of France shares still weak.

A statement that gold today showed that gold valued at 1,105,000,000 francs ($77,544,000) had been withdrawn in the week ending May 7.

IN MEMORIAM

MISS MINNIE MUNN

On Saturday, March 14th, Miss Minnie Munn, a former resident of Hopefield and one who was highly esteemed by all, passed peacefully away in the Pondville Hospital, Wrentham, Mass., at the comparatively early age of 55 years.

The deceased had been in a rather serious condition of health for some months so that the coming of the end was not unexpected.

All that medical skill and kind friends could do to bring about a restoration of health was done but all to no avail.

Although naturally of quite a rugged constitution the intense suffering gradually burned up all her reserve energy until on the above mentioned date her gentle spirit winged its heavenly flight.

Miss Munn was the daughter of Mr. Daniel and Mrs. Elizabeth Munn and was one of a family of three brothers and five sisters. Of these only two now survive the deceased. There are, one sister, Mrs. Howard Horton, Norwood, Mass., and one brother, Ira D. Munn, Hopefield.

Another sister, Mrs. Frank Barber, passed away in Boston in 1932. The other four members of the family died some years ago.

The deceased will be much missed by all who had the privilege of knowing her. She was a lady of sterling worth. At the age of twenty she was received into the membership of the Baptist Church, Murray River, and ever since has proven herself to be a loyal supporter of still quite young she set out to make her way in the world and with the exception of about ten years when she returned to her native province and nursed her mother through those ten years—during her last illness—she spent the rest of her days within the borders of the State of Massachusetts, U.S.A.

The coming of the end had no fears for her. No, because of the intense suffering to be endured rather could it be said that death came as a welcome messenger to set her spirit free from the mud-walled cottage of pain and of ang-

March 20th. The service which was a very impressive one was conducted by Rev. R. Hensley Staver. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Edgar Munn, Daniel Munn, Peter McLean, Donald Livingstone, Duncan McMillan and Roderick McRae. Interment was in the Presbyter-ian Cemetery, Wood Islands.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

Dear Miss Dix—Do you think my husband and I are abnormal and selfish because we do not want children? We both come from large families in which we were the eldest. My mother died when I was 13 and I had to take responsibilities on my shoulders so I was worn out with baby-tending even in my childhood. My husband's father died when he was about the same age, making conditions for the same for him. Frankly we were fed up with children in our youth. Now we long for peace and quiet and our own companionship. We love our home and just being together by ourselves are we peculiar in not desiring children, or do other feel as we do?

A YOUNG WIFE.

ANSWER: As long as you and your husband are agreed upon the point of not desiring children, it is just as purely a matter of individual taste as whether you prefer to live in town or the country, or to have roast beef or chicken for dinner. The tragedy comes when one or the other longs for children and finds marriage cinders, ashes and dust without them, and the other one regards children as brats and as much to be avoided as any other pests.

The conventional view of the matter is that all men and women yearn for the feet of little arms around their necks, the patter of little feet across the floor, and that every new baby is welcomed with salvos of joy. Nothing can be farther from the truth the maternal and paternal instinct is no more a universal human trait than is blue eyes or golden hair.

Plenty of men and women have not a trace of it, even among those who have children. Witness the mothers who are always complaining how their babies tie them down and whose children run the streets, neglected and uncared for, while they are at bridge parties, or off lecturing before clubs, or what not. Recall the fathers who take so little interest in their children that they never speak to them except to correct them, and who give them so little personal attention they hardly know them by sight.

For some people children are a source of joy and happiness. To others they are only a burden. They like their peace and quiet, their solitary homes. They like to be free to chum together. And these do well not to set up a nursery. For certainly no one has the right to invite a little stranger into the house unless they are going to make him welcome and bear patiently with his upsetting their whole routine of life and monopolizing their time and money for the remainder of their lives.

Railway Committee Prepares Report

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, May 7.—Reports of the Canadian National Railway and Steamships and the Government Merchant Marine for last year approved, the House of Commons committee on railways and shipping will now turn its attention to preparation of a report to Parliament.

Today the committee heard Railways Minister Howe state probably a year must elapse before there can be a writing down of the capital structure of the system. This came after suggestions from the committee "deadwood" should be eliminated from the balance-sheet of the government-owned system.

Mr. Howe referred to difficulties in this elimination process. For instance the balance-sheet showed $165,000,000 Grand Trunk stock "which cost the government zero." Obviously this amount should not be there.

But, on the other hand, Grand
