RIGBY! This is the season when we properly appreciate a warm, comfortable, Porous Waterproof Coat. Everybody is asking for "Rigby." John Hay's verses reciting the heroism of Jim Rigby, who held the nozzle of his burning ship again the black till the last galoot was ashore, immortalized an imaginary hero, but the story of Engineer Root's race for the lives of his passengers on the relief train sent out from St. Paul to rescue the people fleeing from the forest fires in Minnesota is from real life. The dispatches have told the graphic story of how the fire came in every window of his cab, and three times his clothes were ablaze. Had he abandoned the throttle of his engine, hundreds of lives would have been sacrificed, but he stood at his post, urging his engine on and saving his passengers. Small wonder that the praise of Engineer Root are on everybody's tongue! Hits Something. "Johnson always hits the nail on the head." "Yes—his thumb-nail." Even in Zion, Jerusalem has 135 saloons. A Prominent Lawyer Says: "I have eight children every one in good health, not one of whom but has taken Scott's Emulsion, in which my wife has boundless confidence." THESE ARE ODD FISH. SOME CURIOUS DEEP SEA CREATURES WHICH HAVE BEEN CAUGHT. The Hackle-Head—Conger Eels—Intimately End of a Fishing Frog—Various Odd Members of the Finny Tribe From the Salt Water. A number of fishermen who go out on the fishing banks steamboats have been thoughtful enough to save their odd and curious catches for the New York Aquarium. The result is that Prof. H. T. Woodman now has as pets in his whale and shark tanks two huge anglers or fishing frogs, weighing from seventy-five to ninety pounds, one exceptionally perfect specimen of the deep-sea skate, measuring about four feet from tip to tip of its wing-like fins; three large deep sea eels or sponges (conger eels, a fisherman call them), a small sturgeon, the dogfish four feet long and half a dozen sea ravens, small and large. There would now be three anglers had the fishermen tempered enthusiasm with discretion. The third one is now presumably in the fish house. He lived more than a week, showing how hardy some fish forms are, for everything was done to disgust him with life. He was hooked on the fishing banks and hauled to the surface hand over hand. Then somebody jammed a boathook deep into his head between his eyes and landed him. On arriving at the battery the martyr fishing frog was jabbed again with the boat-hook, which a man then put over his shoulder, with the unhappy monster dangling at the end. The hole in his head was as big round as a half dollar, yet he tried to pick up his wretful fin after two days. The two biggest sea ravens also had a bitter experience. When they were hooked the enthusiastic amateur scientists put them into a pall than was too small for them, and consequently when they were put into the tank they remained bent like bows for several miserable hours. Now they are straightened out and as full of original sin as ever. The other specimens fared better after Prof. Woodman had gently hinted that fish were not made of boiled cod.

It is said of Mr. Irving, that though an upright and thoroughly honorable man he plays the Devil (Faust) as no other man can. After perusing the many strong expressions from other eminent actors and women throughout Europe as to the merits of Vin Mariani as a tonic stimulant Mr. Irving says: "I can certainly say my conditional to the virtues of Vin Mariani which I have found excellent, and am well convinced of its quality." This tonic cocoa wine (Vin Mariani) imparts and restores weak constitutions, runs down by over-exertion of body or brain. STILL EXTANT. Are Some Old Virginian Customs of a Hundred Years Ago. The genuine antebellum Virginian of today has often been declared to be the most complete survival of Eighteenth Century England now in existence. There are certain Eighteenth Century customs and phrases and manners in common use there that have not been heard of in a hundred years in England. One of the quaintest is a custom of the road which died out in England when the post road and the traveling chariot went out of vogue. In those days it was considered almost an affront for one traveling in a carriage to drive past another going the same way. The traveling class was made up generally of the rich and leisured, and as they bowed along in their coaches to have another coach dash by and give back its dust and perhaps incite the coachman to a rage was considered highly indecorous. To "take one's dust" was a common expression of contempt. The custom was without its uses in its day. But will it be believed that at the close of the Nineteenth Century this etiquette of the road is rigidly maintained, and that among well-bred people each equipage has to take the gait of the slowest? True it is, some iconoclasts and outsiders drive past their fellow-travelers without compunction, but they, therefore, prove their claims to be called iconoclasts and outsiders. What is a very pleasing case, an apology is called out such as: "Pray, excuse me, but my horse is restless," or "I am in haste to catch the boat," or something of the kind. But to drive ruthlessly ahead without a word of apology is considered the height of ill-breeding. The roads in this part of the world are not interesting, except for their natural beauty, as the people of wealth, following their English ancestors in practice, sought a proud seclusion for their homes. Only the poorest people built their homes on the main road, and one may travel from end of the fair country to the other and not find a single handsome residence on the public highway. There was another very practical reason for adjoining this public highway. Every man's house was at the service of every man, woman and child in the county. An Arab hospitality obtained and was enjoyed to the full. The people who had undesirable homes were always willing to bestow their company upon their more fortunate neighbors, so that it wouldn't do to be too convenient to the main arteries of travel. Especially was this so when a visit from a family meant the entertaining of two coach horses, a coachman and a maid, for the negroes went visiting with the white people and enjoyed it just as much. Hospitality was one of their great virtues and is still, for those people excel in social virtues, and this particular virtue costs little. It only meant the killing of a half dozen or more chickens for dinner, when there were hundreds, perhaps, scratching about in the poultry yard; and the gardens were overgrown with vegetables, for which there was neither sale nor consumption. There were icehouses full of ice and meadows full of cows, and the manure was manufactured in a big tin bucket, turned about in a keg of ice and salt. It took two women and a boy to make ice cream, but it took that many to do everything. The icehouses are among the most picturesque features in the landscape here. A great mound of earth, thirty or forty feet high, was thrown up around a place that was bricked up and looked like a gigantic well. This was finished at the top by a circular roof. The sides of the mound were graded and steepled, and made nice places for boys and girls to roll down when the short, slippery grass was wet. Philadelphia Press. Seven Years Without a Birthday. A Scottish clergyman who died thirty years ago—Mr. Leislaman, of Kilmross—used to tell that he once lived seven years without a birthday. The statement puzzled most of his hearers, for one who can tell it must have been born on the 29th day of February at least ninety-eight years ago. Put a similar line of missing dates is now soon to return; and, indeed, there are, no doubt, some readers who will have only one birthday to celebrate for nearly twenty years to come. The solution of the puzzle is to be found in the fact, which does not appear to be widely known, that the year 1800 was not a leap year, and 1900 will not be. The history of 1800 and 1804 is twenty-nine days, but in all the seven years intervening between 1800 and 1804, as well as in the three between 1802 and 1806, that month will have only twenty-eight—Pittsburg Dispatch. Broken in Health That Tired Feeling, Constipation and Pain in the Back Appetite and Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mr. Chas. Steele, St. Catherine's, Ont. "C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. For a number of years I have been troubled with a general tired feeling, shortness of breath, pain in the back, and constipation. I could get only little rest at night on account of the pain and had no appetite whatever. I was that tired in my limbs that I gave out before half the day was gone. I tried a great number of medicines but did not get any permanent relief from any. I purchased a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which made me feel better at once. I have continued its use, having taken three bottles, and I feel like a new man. I have enjoyed my sleep at night, I have no tired feeling, and my appetite is restored. I have purchased a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, with Erie Preserving Co., St. Catherine's, Ontario. Hood's Pills are prompt and efficient, very easy in action. Sold by all druggists. 25c.
