CHARLOTTETOWN Business College

Writing Academy

Let these eight of practice illuminate the dark pieces of Theory. THOROUGHLY Progressive Practical Institution, in which young men and women are not only taught Book keeping (in all its applications to commerce) both in single and double entry, but are trained how to do business, by actual business transactions. The students act as buyers, sellers, traders, bankers, book-keepers and accountants, in actual business operations, and the currency issued by the College Bank and the mds. issued from the Emporium, are used in bona fide business transactions, just the same as in mercantile and banking houses. Book-keeping in itself may be learned at home, but a knowledge of how to transact business, cannot be thus acquired. That our course system of training is eminently practical write for testimonials from business men, and from students who are now holding lucrative and responsible positions. SUBJECTS: Book-keeping by single and double entry (theoretical and practical.) Actual Business Practice, Business Penmanship, Commercial Correspondence, Commercial Arithmetic, Commercial Law, Railroad, Steamboat, Banking, (actual practice in the College Bank) Typewriting, shorthand and Navigation.

FACULTY: L. B. Miller, Principal, Teacher of Book-keeping, Arithmetic, Business Principles, Business Correspondence, Typewriting and Navigation. J. W. HOW TO COLOR A PIPE

CHICAGO'S LEADING MEERSCHAUM EXPERT IS A WOMAN.

She Isn't a Smoker Herself, but She Knows All About It—Rich Coloring Obtained by Careful Use and Timely Boiling—A Masculine Weakness.

Perhaps the one person in this city who is most deeply versed in the secret of pipe coloring is a woman, and it is needless to say that she never took so much as a single whiff of smoke from a pipe in her life. Her interest in pipe coloring is purely professional and a very large proportion of the most beautiful pipes colored in Chicago during the last 20 years have passed through her hands, or, more properly, through her kettle, for she is a past master in the unique profession of meerschaum boiling. She has treated thousands of pipes for smokers of this city and has undoubtedly done more to disseminate a general knowledge of the difficult art of meerschaum coloring than any other resident of this city.

While it cannot be said that this woman "pipe doctor," as she is frequently called by her patrons, gives regular lessons or paid instruction, her advice is constantly sought by the men who find that their pet pipes are not acquiring the rich hue which they desire, and her position may best be described as that of a "consulting colorist." Although she maintains a shop or office in Clark street and there conducts a large business in the sale and repair of fine pipes, she does not venture to do her boiling in so public a place, as the process is a secret one and is the evolution of many years of patient study and experiment. The rudiments of her odd craft were learned in France, where she was born, but the formulae for the boiling mixtures which she now uses bear little resemblance to those which she was originally taught. They are distinctively her own, and she guards them with the most jealous care.

"A great many young men," said this matronly woman whose life has been spent in studying pipes, "bring me meerschaums which they have smoked for six or eight months and ask why the pipes have failed to acquire the dark coloring seen in the meerschaums of those who are veterans in the art. They inquire, in a helpless sort of way, if I think boiling will improve the color or if the meerschaum is of an inferior quality which would not take on a rich hue if smoked for a dozen years. I always know that such customers are beginners and have never before attempted to color a pipe. They imagine smoking is the only essential process in pipe coloring and that boiling should be resorted to only when the meerschaum burns, becomes scratched or is of an inferior quality. This is an almost universal mistake among those who are inexperienced in this smoker's diversion.

"The fact is that the finest meerschaum ever imported into this country could not be given a perfect color without being boiled in oil at just the right stage in its development. Simply smoking it, no matter how great the care exercised to prevent burning or how rich and juicy the tobacco, would never in the world secure the desired result. It is in knowing just when the pipe is ripe for boiling that the smoker is able to display a triumph of judgment and skill which will make him envied by his less successful competitors, for there is a keen spirit of rivalry in this matter, particularly among young men of the fashionable and student classes.

"There are scores of veteran colorists who invariably smoke their meerschaums altogether too long before having them boiled. This is the universal tendency, and the number of men who have their pipes boiled at exactly the proper stage may almost be counted on the fingers of two hands. Of course it is absolutely impossible to make any hard and fast rules regulating the length of time that the pipe should be smoked before being sent to the kettle. Many things enter into that consideration, but chiefly the quality of the meerschaum. If the latter is very soft the pipe, in the hands of a steady smoker, will be ready for the oil in a week, while a hard pipe will require three weeks of almost constant smoking to make it 'ripe' for its hot bath.

"The standard of shading at which most smokers aim is a very dark brown, almost black, for the base of the bowl and the beginning of the stem and a rich cherry for the upper portion of the bowl. This gives a variety of shading. As the pipe is smoked after coming from the kettle the dark brown base and stem will gradually become charcoal black, while the cherry colored upper half of the bowl will acquire a yellowish tinge."

"Can you regulate the coloring by variations in your method of boiling?" this expert was asked.

"Certainly," was the prompt reply. "The bath in my kettle is not plain oil by any means. It contains herbs and various other ingredients which, to a degree at least, regulate the color imparted to the meerschaum. But of course it would not do for me to go into particulars regarding my formula for boiling. That is my trade secret which has cost me years of experimenting.

"The public in general has no idea of the pride which hundreds of men take in their handsomely colored meerschaums. Women in particular regard this penchant as the most foolish of all masculine weaknesses, but in spite of this sentiment the smokers still continue to make pets of their pipes and treat them as tenderly as the women do their poodles. One gentleman brought me an old blackened pipe of ordinary clay, with its stem broken off short. He had a handsome amber mouth-piece attached to it by means of a silver ferrule and paid the bill without a complaint. The pipe had become a companion to him, and the price of the finest meerschaum in the shop would not have tempted him to part with it."—Chicago Post.

Lord Carrington, when governor of New South Wales, made his first public appearance at the mayor's dinner at Sydney. Having committed a few words to paper, he delivered them in reply to the toast of his health, and then sat down, feeling very much satisfied with himself. Opposite to him there sat an M. When Lord Carrington sat down, the man filled his glass to the brim and said, "Thank the Lord, he can't speak."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Judged by Appearances.

You cannot afford to wear sloop clothing.

It is a weakness of human nature to judge by appearances.

Even a dog will bark at a tramp while a well dressed man will pass by unmolested.

It pays to wear

Shorey's Ready-to-Wear Clothing.

For several Reasons:

First. You feel yourself to be a better man.

Secondly. You look a better man.

Thirdly. Your fellow-man respects you.

Fourthly. It is Ready-to-wear and you can choose, try on, and suit yourself from stock, without the uncertainty of an ordered garment.

And lastly, you will find a little Guarantee Card in the pocket, which means "Satisfaction Guaranteed or Money Refunded."

Does the combination of Reasons appeal to your judgment?

A WORD TO THE CARELESS

Many persons do not value their teeth. If they have the toothache their first and only thought is to have the tooth extracted. Just a few words on that point, they go and have it taken out, that is the last of that tooth; they cannot get it back again. Another tooth will begin troubling; out it goes, too, and so on after a while the person cannot masticate food; consequence is their health becomes impaired; then they pay doctors bills, buy medicine, etc., and as a last resort they get artificial teeth. Now look at the question from a business standpoint. In the first place what would be the cost to save the tooth and keep it good for a lifetime? Perhaps $1.00, and you will have your own teeth in your head, and they were most certainly put there for use. Now think of this—if you had a wart on your finger, that troubled you, would you have the finger cut off to remove the wart? Why certainly not. Well, why loose a tooth to remove an ache. We can stop toothache and save the tooth, and guarantee them never to ache again.
